THE COMMITTEES AND THEIR JURISDICTION

1. There shall be in the House the following standing committees, each of which shall have the jurisdiction and related functions assigned to it by this clause and clauses 2, 3, and 4; and all bills, resolutions, and other matters relating to subjects within the jurisdiction of any standing committee as listed in this clause shall (in accordance with and subject to clause 5) be referred to such committees, as follows:

NOTE. As a select committee the Committee on Ways and Means dates from 1789. It was made a standing committee in 1802. Originally it considered both revenue and appropriations, but in 1865 the appropriation bills were given to the Committee on Appropriations, and certain other bills to what is now the Committee on Banking, Finance, and Urban Affairs. The subject of recesses and final adjournments, formerly within the jurisdiction of this committee was, under the Reorganization Act of 1946, transferred to the Committee on Rules.

SUMMARIES OF PUBLIC AND PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS REPORTED BY COMMITTEE—IN NUMERICAL ORDER

H.R. 500 (Mr. D'Amours with cosponsors); laid on the table May 17, 1983. (See H.R. 2973 for related action.)

H.R. 500, as reported to the House by the Committee on Ways and Means on May 13, 1983, would repeal secs. 301 through 308 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1983, which imposed withholding on interest and dividends. The bill was laid on the table on May 17, 1983.

As of adjournment of the 98th Congress H.R. 500 was pending in the House.

H.R. 1183 (Mr. Guarini with cosponsors); failed of passage in Senate June 29, 1983.

H.R. 1183, the Tax Rate Equity Act of 1983, was reported from the Committee on Ways and Means on June 21, 1983, and passed the House on June 23, 1983. The Senate considered H.R. 1183 on June 28, 1983, and failed passage on June 29, 1983.

The bill would have limited the maximum tax cut available to individual taxpayers under the third year of the 1981 ERTA tax cut. Under the rate schedules in the bill, the maximum tax reductions in tax year 1984 and subsequent years would be $720 for joint returns, $673 for head-of-household returns, and $637 for single returns. The maximum reductions for tax year 1983 would have been roughly half these amounts. Also, relief was provided for estimated tax penalties for 1983 underpayments resulting from these rate schedule changes.

H.R. 1234 (Mr. Ottinger with cosponsors); passed House Nov. 3, 1983.

H.R. 1234, the Automotive Products Act, as introduced, establishes minimum domestic content requirements for motor vehicles sold in the United States. The level of domestic parts and labor required of manufacturers on a fleet average basis increases with the number of motor vehicles sold in the United States annually. Implementation of the requirements would take place over a 3-year period beginning in model year 1985. The bill contains an enforcement provision establishing penalties for failure to meet the required domestic content ratios. The penalty provided is a 12-month quota on automobiles and automobile parts imports by the offending manufacturer. The Secretary of Transportation is directed to take necessary actions to ensure that quota levels are not exceeded during that 12-month penalty period.

H.R. 1234 was concurrently referred to the Energy and Commerce Committee and the Ways and Means Committee. Energy and Commerce Committee reported H.R. 1234 on June 30, 1983, and the Committee on Ways and Means reported unfavorably H.R. 1234, on Sept. 21, 1983. The bill passed the House on Nov. 3, 1983, with 3 amendments as follows: (1) Add two individuals representing consumers of American-made automobiles to the U.S. Automobile Advisory Council, bringing the total representatives to 5. (2) After the 6th model year after the date of enactment, the Secretary of Transportation is to hold public hearings, and if he determines that injury (caused or threatened) to the industry has been corrected, the domestic content ratio requirements shall cease to have effect. The Secretary shall notify the Congress and publish a notice of his action in the Federal Register. (3) Directs the appointment of a task force to study the impact of currency exchange rates on competitiveness among vehicle manufacturers.

As of adjournment of the 98th Congress, H.R. 1234 was pending in the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation.

H.R. 1296 (Mr. Harkin with cosponsors); Public Law 98-4; app. Mar. 11, 1983.

H.R. 1296, as amended, allows taxpayers to defer recognition of income on commodities received (or constructively received) under the 1983 Payment-in-Kind (PIK) program until the commodities are sold rather than recognizing the income on the date the PIK commodities are made available to the farmer. Cash basis taxpayers are not treated as entitled to receive any amount as reimbursement for storage of commodities received under the 1983 PIK program until the amount is actually received. Under the bill, the 1983 PIK program includes crops normally planted or harvested on or before Dec. 31, 1983.

H.R. 1296 also provides that real property withdrawn from production under the 1983 PIK program will be treated as used in an active farming use for purposes of the current use valuation and the installment payment of estate tax. In addition, an individual who materially participates in the conservation use to which property withdrawn under the PIK program is put will be considered to satisfy the current use valuation material participation requirement.

An anti-abuse rule limits both the income and the estate tax provisions of the bill to land acquired by any person before Feb. 24, 1983, unless the acquisition occurs by reason of death, gift, or from a member of the transferee's family. For all purposes of the Internal Revenue Code, income from the sale or disposition of commodities received under the 1983 PIK program is treated as farm income. The commodity payments are treated as earned income for individuals who materially participate in the conservation use to which the PIK property is devoted. The treatment of commodities paid to cooperatives is equivalent to that provided for commodities paid directly to farmers under the program.

The bill also requires the Treasury Department, after consultation with the Department of Agriculture, to submit a study on the effects of the PIK program and the tax treatment afforded the program by H.R. 1296 no later than Sept. 1, 1983.

The Subcommittee on Select Revenue Measures reported H.R. 1296, with an amendment in the nature of a substitute, to the Committee on Ways and Means on Feb. 28, 1983. The bill was reported to the House by the Committee on Mar. 2, 1983, and was passed by the House of Representatives on Mar. 8, 1983. The Senate passed H.R. 1296 with an amendment in the nature of a substitute on Mar. 8, 1983. On Mar. 9, 1983, the House concurred to the Senate amendment with an amendment. The Senate agreed to the House amendment on Mar. 10, 1983. The bill was signed into law by the President on Mar. 11, 1983, as Public Law 98-4.

H.R. 1428 (Mrs. Vucanovich); passed Senate July 26, 1984. (See Public Law 98-369 (H.R. 4170) for related action.

H.R. 1428, for the private relief of the estate of Nell J. Redfield, was introduced on Feb. 10, 1983, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary. The bill was reported from the Judiciary Committee on Oct. 24, 1983, and passed the House on Nov. 1, 1983. In the Senate, H.R. 1428 was referred to the Committee on Finance which was discharged. The bill passed the Senate, amended, on July 26, 1984.

A comparison provision was added to H.R. 4170 by the Senate and accepted in conference. H.R. 4170 was signed into law on July 18, 1984, as Public Law 98-369.

H.R. 1571 (Mr. Jones of Oklahoma, with cosponsors); reported to House Sept. 27, 1983. (See H.R. 2848, and Public Law 98-573 (H.R. 3398).)

H.R. 1571, the Reciprocal Trade and Investment Act of 1983, was reported to the House by the Committee on Ways and Means on Sept. 27, 1983, with two substantive amendments. As of adjournment the bill was pending before the Committees on Foreign Affairs and Energy and Commerce, to whom it was also jointly referred. Provisions concerning trade in services were also included in H.R. 2848, the Service Industries Commerce Development Act, as passed by the House on Oct. 3, 1984. Similar provisions of H.R. 1571 were included in Public Law 98-573 (H.R. 3398) as it was signed into law on Oct. 30, 1984.

As reported by the Committee on Ways and Means, H.R. 1571, as amended, contains the following provisions referred to as "reciprocity" legislation:

FOREIGN TRADE BARRIERS AND U.S. COMPETITIVENESS

The bill amends title I of the Trade Act of 1974 to include requirements for reports to the Congress as follows:

1. Report on trade barriers

Requires an annual report from the U.S. Trade Representative (USTR) to the House Committee on Ways and Means and the Senate Committee on Finance on trade barriers to U.S. exports including (1) a comprehensive inventory of foreign barriers to U.S. goods and services or trade-related direct investment; and (2) a quantitative assessment of the principal foreign restrictions, including the extent international agreements apply and any government actions that have been taken to eliminate or reduce them.

2. Report on competitiveness

Requires a report from the USTR to the Congress on factors not addressed elsewhere in H.R. 1571 which significantly affect the competitiveness of U.S. high technology industries in the world markets.

SECTION 301 AUTHORITY

The bill also contains various amendments to title III of the Trade Act of 1974 containing procedures and authority for the President to enforce U.S. rights under trade agreements and respond to foreign trade practices (so-called sec. 301 authority):

1. Presidential action

Adds requirements that the President (a) take U.S. trade agreement obligations and the impact on the national economy into account; and (b) conduct a biennial review of actions taken and rescind them if the foreign offending act is eliminated or continuation of sec. 301 action is not in the national interest.

2. Authority on services

Clarifies Presidential authority to restrict terms and conditions or to deny issuance of licenses or other authorizations allowing foreign service suppliers access to the U.S. market. Such authority would apply on a prospective basis.

3. Definitions

(a) Defines "commerce" to include trade-related U.S. foreign direct investment; (b) defines "discriminatory" to include denial of national or most-favored-nation treatment of goods, services, or investment; and (c) defines "unjustifiable" as violations of, or inconsistencies with, U.S. international legal rights, including denial of intellectual property right protection.

4. Review of petitions; initiation of investigations

Amends various time limits under existing law for initiation of investigations and recommendations to the President by the USTR. Provides authority for the USTR to self-initiate investigations.

NEGOTIATING OBJECTIVES

The bill contains a general congressional mandate that the United States (1) seek negotiations or consultations to reduce or eliminate barriers denying U.S. foreign market access; and (2) seek review under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade of existing trade agreements and a work program on remaining trade barriers.

It also sets forth specific principal negotiating objectives under the Trade Act of 1974 nontariff barrier negotiating authority for trade in services, foreign direct investment, and high technology products.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE IN SERVICES

To promote competitiveness and trade of U.S. services industries, the bill contains the following provisions:

1. Coordination of U.S. policies

Explicitly provides USTR the authority to develop and coordinate U.S. services trade policy with input and support from other Federal agencies.

2. Services industries development program

Requires the Secretary of Commerce to establish a program of information collection and analysis of services to promote industry competitiveness and trade.

3. Coordination with States

Establishes congressional policy that the President consult with State governments on services trade policy and negotiating objectives and establish intergovernmental trade policy advisory committees.

LIMITED NEGOTIATING AUTHORITY

The bill further authorizes the President to enter into trade agreements during the 3-year period following enactment, providing for reductions, continuation, or increases in U.S. duties or continuation of existing duty-free treatment. Trade agreements and any modifications in U.S. duties are subject to congressional approval of implementing legislation under expedited procedures.

As of adjournment of the 98th Congress, H.R. 1571 was pending on the House calendar.

H.R. 1646 (Mr. Florio with cosponsors); Public Law 98-76; app. Aug. 12, 1983.

H.R. 1646, the Railroad Retirement Solvency Act of 1983, was jointly referred to the Committees on Ways and Means and Energy and Commerce. It was reported by the Committee on Energy and Commerce on Mar. 9, 1983, and by the Committee on Ways and Means on July 1, 1983.

H.R. 1646 passed the House on Aug. 1, 1983, and passed the Senate without amendment on Aug. 2, 1983. During consideration by the House, H.R. 3619, as amended, was approved as a substitute for H.R. 1646. The revenue related provisions of the substitute are identical to those contained in H.R. 1646, as reported by the Committee on Ways and Means.

The act adjusts the income and outgo of the railroad retirement system in order to avoid automatic benefit reductions which are scheduled for Oct. 1, 1983, assures continued benefit payments in the future, and remedies the immediate financing problems of the railroad unemployment compensation system.

The act contains benefit adjustments which were reported by the Committee on Energy and Commerce. These adjustments include: a reduction in tier I benefits for persons who retire before age 62; a 6-month delay in the 1984 tier II cost-of-living adjustment; and an offset of tier II benefits against certain tier I cost-of-living adjustments.

Other provisions reported by the Committee on Energy and Commerce include: borrowing authority versus possible future appropriations of amounts related to dual benefits ("windfall" benefits) which were paid from the period beginning 1975 through 1981 and authority to borrow on a current basis from the general fund against the financial interchange.

The Committee on Ways and Means reported the following provisions which were included in the act:

REVENUE PROVISIONS

Sections 211, 221, 222, and 223

Provide three equal tax rate increases for both employer (1 percent) and employees (0.75 percent) which will become effective on July 1, 1984, Jan. 1, 1985, and Jan. 1, 1986.

Sections 221, 222, 223, and 225

Apply railroad retirement tier I and II taxes to an annual amount equal to 12 times the current applicable monthly wage base.

Section 224

Tax tier II and windfall benefits as benefits received under a qualified pension plan. The proceeds derived from taxing windfall benefits would be deposited in the railroad retirement account until fiscal year 1989. Beginning in fiscal year 1989, the proceeds from the tax will be deposited in the windfall benefits account.

The proceeds derived from taxing tier II benefits would be returned to the railroad retirement account until the earlier of fiscal year 1989, or the amount of revenue transferred under this provision equals $877 million. Beginning in fiscal year 1989, the proceeds from the tax would be deposited in the general fund.

Section 226

Accelerate the employer payroll tax deposit schedule, to conform to the FICA deposit schedule.

Sections 231 and 232

Impose, effective July 1, 1986, through Sept. 30, 1990, a Federal repayment tax on railroad companies equal to 2.0 percent on the first $7,000 in annual wages paid to each employee. This tax will increase by 0.3 percent on each subsequent January 1, up to a maximum of 5.0 percent. Revenue raised by this repayment tax will be used only to repay loans the railroad retirement account has made to the railroad retirement unemployment compensation (RRUC) program.

Section 241

Make "sick pay" benefits provided under the RRUC program, except for sick pay resulting from on-the-job injuries, subject to the Federal income tax under the same limitations and conditions that apply to the taxation of sick pay received by workers in other industries. Effective for sick pay benefits received after Dec. 31, 1983.

OTHER AMENDMENTS

Section 501

Create a "social security equivalent benefit account" and deposit in the account all social security equivalent revenues. Pay all social security equivalent benefits out of the account.

Section 502

Provide that on July 1, 1985, and each subsequent July 1, the Railroad Retirement Board shall submit to the Congress a report on the actuarial status of the railroad retirement system and make any recommendations for financing changes that might be advisable, including adjustments in the level of tier II tax rates and the feasibility of diverting part of the employer portion of those rates to the railroad unemployment insurance account to aid in repayment of its debt to the railroad retirement account.

Section 503

Increase RRUC employer taxes by 50 percent, by increasing the amount of monthly wages subject to the tax from $400 to $600. Conform the qualifying earnings requirement to the increase in amount of wages subject to the unemployment tax by raising the qualifying earnings requirement 50 percent, from $1,000 to $1,500 in each base year.

Section 504

Establish a Railroad Unemployment Compensation Committee for the purpose of reviewing all aspects of the railroad unemployment program and submitting a report to Congress no later than Apr. 1, 1984, containing (a) recommendations based on its review of the program and (b) recommended adjustments in contributions and benefits which will enable the RRUC program to repay all loans from the railroad retirement account by the end of the year 2000.

H.R. 1900 (Mr. Rostenkowski and Mr. Conable); Public Law 98-21; app. Apr. 20, 1983.

H.R. 1900, the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983, includes amendments to the social security, medicare, supplemental security income, and unemployment compensation programs. The bill was reported to the House on Mar. 4, 1983, passed the House on Mar. 9, 1983, and passed the Senate on Mar. 23, 1983. A conference report was filed on Mar. 24, 1983, and the House and Senate agreed to the conference report on Mar. 24, 1983. The President signed the bill on Apr. 20, 1983, as Public Law 98-21.

SUMMARY OF PUBLIC LAW 98-21, THE SOCIAL SECURITY AMENDMENTS OF 1983

I. PROVISIONS AFFECTING THE FINANCING OF THE SOCIAL SECURITY SYSTEM

1. EXTENSION OF COVERAGE

A. Federal employees

Under existing law, permanent civilian employees of the Federal Government are not covered by social security (OASDI). (Part-time temporary civilian employees and members of the Armed Forces are covered by social security.)

The act provides for coverage under social security of the following groups of Federal employees: (1) all Federal employees hired on or after Jan. 1, 1984, including those with previous periods of Federal service if the break in Federal service lasted at least 365 days; (2) legislative branch employees on the same basis, as well as current employees of the legislative branch who are not participating in the Civil Service Retirement System as of Dec. 31, 1983; (3) all Members of Congress, the President and the Vice President effective Jan. 1, 1984; (4) all sitting Federal judges, and all executive level and senior executive service political appointees, as of Jan. 1, 1984. Federal judicial salaries will be reported as wages for social security earnings test and payroll tax purposes.

B. Employees of nonprofit organizations

Under previous law, participation in the social security system was optional for nonprofit organizations (charitable, religious, and educational). A nonprofit organization which elected to participate could file to withdraw from social security after it had been in the system for 8 years, and termination was effective 2 years after the end of the calendar quarter in which the notice was filed.

The act extends social security coverage on a mandatory basis to all employees of nonprofit organizations as of Jan. 1, 1984. (Terminations of coverage would not be permitted on or after Mar. 31, 1983). Nonprofit employees age 55 or older affected by this provision are deemed to be fully insured for social security benefits after acquiring a given number of quarters of coverage, according to the following sliding scale:

If on Jan. 1, 1984, the person is—	The number of quarters needed is—
Age 60 or over	6
Age 59	8
Age 58	12
Age 57	16

2. TERMINATION OF COVERAGE BY STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS

Participation in social security is optional for State and local governments. Under prior law, once a government has chosen to join social security, it could withdraw, after 5 years of coverage, by providing the Federal Government with 2 years advance notice of its intent to withdraw. Governments that withdrew were not allowed to rejoin.

The act prohibits State and local governments from terminating coverage for their employees if the termination has not taken effect by the date of enactment. In addition, State and local governments which have withdrawn from the social security system would be allowed to voluntarily rejoin. Once having rejoined, the governmental entity will be precluded from terminating coverage in the future.

3. WINDFALL BENEFITS FOR PERSONS WITH PENSIONS FROM NONCOVERED EMPLOYMENT

The act applies a special benefit formula to workers who are eligible for a pension based wholly or in part on noncovered employment. Under the current formula, benefits are 90 percent of the first $254 of average monthly earnings, 32 percent of earnings from $254 to $1,538, and 15 percent of earnings above $1,538. The new formula applicable to those with pensions from noncovered employment would substitute 40 percent for the 90 percent factor. The act also provides a guarantee that the resulting reduction in the worker's social security benefit cannot be more than one-half the amount of the noncovered pension.

This reduction is phased in over a 5-year period: 80 percent in the first year, 70 percent in the second year, 60 percent in the third year, 50 percent in the fourth year, and fully effective in the fifth year.

The following groups are exempted from the provisions:

a. all current employees newly covered by the act, i.e., those current Federal employees covered by the act, and nonprofit employees except those employees whose past employment for a nonprofit organization had been covered, but whose employment for that organization was not covered on Dec. 31, 1983;

b. those with service which was not covered until 1957;

c. those with 30 years or more of covered work; in addition, for persons with less than 30 but more than 24 years of substantial social security employment, the 90 percent factor in the benefit formula would be reduced by 10 percentage points for each year below 30 years of covered employment; and

d. those with railroad retirement pensions.

The provision is effective on Jan. 1, 1984, for retired or disabled workers who first become eligible for a noncovered pension and for social security after 1985.

4. DELAY COST-OF-LIVING ADJUSTMENTS

Under prior law, social security benefits were adjusted automatically every June (July check) to reflect increases in the Consumer Price Index. No cost-of-living increase is provided in any year in which the increase in the CPI is less than 3 percent. In addition, the medicare monthly premium for part B physician coverage increased each July 1. (For those people receiving social security cash benefits, the premium is deducted from their checks.)

The act delays the June 1983 cost-of-living adjustment until December (January 1984 check), and provides all subsequent cost-of-living adjustments in December (January checks). For the December 1983 adjustment only, the 3-percent trigger is waived. This section also provides a corresponding delay in a 1982 Reconciliation Act provision to round down certain veterans' pensions.

The act also correspondingly postpones the effective date of increases in medicare premiums. For the 6-month period from July 1, 1983, to Jan. 1, 1984, the general revenue contribution would replace the lost premium revenue.

5. TAXATION OF SOCIAL SECURITY (OASDI) BENEFITS FOR HIGHER-INCOME PERSONS

The act provides that, beginning in 1984, a portion of social security and tier I railroad retirement benefits will be included in taxable income for taxpayers whose adjusted gross income combined with 50 percent of their benefits exceeds a base amount. The base amount is $25,000 for an individual, $32,000 for a married couple filing a joint return and zero for married persons filing separate returns. Interest on tax-exempt bonds will be added to adjusted gross income for the purpose of determining whether an individual's income exceeds the base amount above which a portion of benefits would be subject to tax. The amount of benefits that can be included in taxable income is the lesser of one-half of benefits or one-half of the excess of the taxpayer's combined income (AGI + one-half of benefits) over the base amount.

The proceeds from the taxation of benefits, as estimated by the Treasury Department, will be transferred to the appropriate trust funds at first of quarter. An annual report from the Secretary of the Treasury concerning the transfers is required.

6. 1984–90 SOCIAL SECURITY TAX RATES AND 1984 CREDIT

A. FICA tax rates

Several increases in payroll tax rates were scheduled to take effect between 1984 and 1990.

The act advances the payroll tax increase scheduled for 1985 to 1984 and part of the increase scheduled for 1990 to 1988, as indicated below:

	OASDI	HI	OASDI-HI
1984	5.70	1.30	7.00
1985	5.70	1.35	7.05
1986	5.70	1.45	7.15
1987	5.70	1.45	7.15
1988	6.06	1.45	7.51
1989	6.06	1.45	7.51
1990	6.20	1.45	7.65

B. Tax credit for 1984 employee FICA taxes

The act provides a credit of 0.3 percent of wages against 1984 employee FICA taxes to reduce the net FICA rate to 6.70 percent. Appropriations to trust funds will be based on a 7.00 percent rate.

C. Tier I railroad retirement taxes

The rates of the tier I taxes are the same as the rates of the corresponding FICA taxes. The act makes conforming changes in tier I railroad retirement tax rates and the credit against 1984 employee taxes will be allowed against employee railroad taxes.

7. TAX ON SELF-EMPLOYMENT INCOME

The Self-Employment Contributions Act (SECA) imposes two taxes (OASDI and HI) on self-employed individuals. Currently, self-employed persons pay an OASDI tax at a rate approximately equal to 75 percent of the combined employer-employee rate and an HI tax at a rate that is 50 percent of the combined employer-employee rate.

No deduction or credit is available for SECA taxes.

The act provides that, beginning in 1984, the OASDHI rates for self-employed persons will be equal to the combined employer-employee OASDHI rate. Self-employed persons will be allowed a credit (comparable to the credit allowed the employers against the FICA tax) against the SECA tax as follows: 1984, 2.7 percent; 1985, 2.3 percent; and 1986–89, 2.0 percent. Effective in 1990 and thereafter, the credit will terminate and be replaced with a system designed to achieve parity between employees and the self-employed.

Appropriations to the trust funds will be based on the full SECA tax rates without regard to the credit allowed against such taxes.

8. CREDIT FOR THE ELDERLY AND DISABILITY INCOME EXCLUSION

A. Credit for the elderly

Under prior law, individuals age 65 or over, or under 65 and with income from a public retirement system, were eligible for an income tax credit equal to 15 percent of a base amount.

The act provides that individuals under age 65 are eligible for a tax credit only if they retired with a permanent and total disability and have disability income from a public or private employer on account of that disability. The act also makes other changes in the base amount.

B. Disability income exclusion

Amounts received under an employer's disability income plan generally are includible in gross income for income tax purposes to the extent attributable to employer contributions. However, permanently and totally disabled individuals who have retired on disability and are under 65 could exclude such income within certain limits under prior law.

The act repeals the disability income exclusion.

9. REALLOCATION OF OASI AND DI TRUST FUNDS

The act allocates the OASDI tax so that both the OASI and DI trust funds will have approximately the same ratios.

10. BENEFITS FOR CERTAIN WIDOWS, DIVORCED, AND DISABLED WOMEN

The act revises eligibility requirements and the computation formula for certain types of dependents and survivor benefits:

a. Continues benefits based on a former spouse's earnings for divorced and disabled surviving spouses who remarry;

b. Allows divorced spouses who have attained retirement age to begin drawing social security benefits based on the earnings of their former spouse, even if their former spouse has not yet retired and claimed benefits;

c. Changes the formula by which benefits are computed for certain widows and widowers who claim benefits based on the earnings of their deceased spouse; generally, this change would raise benefit levels in cases where a substantial period of time elapses between the death of one spouse and the time the surviving spouse retires and claims benefits; and

d. Increases benefits for disabled widows and widowers who retire before age 60 and who collect benefits based on the earnings of their deceased spouse.

11. STABLIZER

The act provides that, beginning in 1985, if the fund ratio of the combined OASDI trust funds as of the beginning of a year is less than 15 percent, the automatic cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) would be based on the lower of the CPI increase or the increase in average wages. Beginning in 1989 the stabilizer would take effect if the trust fund ratio falls below 20 percent. Subsequently, when the balance in the trust funds has risen to at least 32 percent of estimated annual outlays, "catch-up" benefit payments would be made during the following year, as supplements to monthly benefits otherwise payable, to the extent necessary to increase overall benefit levels in order to make up for any losses in inflation protection that result from basing COLA's on wages rather than prices. Such payments would be made only to the extent that sufficient funds are available over those needed to maintain a fund ratio of 32.0 percent.

12. PROCEDURES TO ASSURE CONTINUED BENEFIT PAYMENTS (FAIL-SAFE).

Social security benefits are financed by a payroll tax fixed in the law. While benefits are paid out within the first 5 days of each month, payroll tax revenues are estimated daily by the Treasury, and credited to each trust fund account each day.

Interfund borrowing among the three funds was authorized during 1982, but this authority terminated at the end of the year.

The act provides for a revision of accounting procedures under which the Treasury would credit to the OASDI trust funds, at the beginning of each month the amount of payroll tax revenues estimated to be received during the month. These amounts would be invested by the trust funds as all other trust fund assets are invested; interest will also be paid by the trust funds on amounts transferred to the trust funds in advance of procedures in effect on Jan. 1, 1983. The provision is effective on the first day of the month following enactment.

The act also authorizes borrowing between the OASI, DI, and HI funds for calendar years 1983-87, with provisions for the repayment to the lending fund(s) of all such loans.

The act also requires the Board of Trustees to report immediately to the Congress whenever it is of the opinion that the amount of any of the trust funds may become unduly small. The Trustees are required to recommend a specific legislative plan to adjust the inflow and outgo of funds to remedy this shortfall.

13. DELAYED RETIREMENT CREDIT

Under prior law, persons who delay retiring—and claiming social security benefits—beyond age 65 receive increases in their benefits amounting to 3 percent per year for each year they delayed retirement up to age 72.

The act gradually increases the delayed retirement credit from 3 percent to 8 percent per year for persons who attain age 65 between 1990 and 2008, and lowers the age after which the delayed retirement credit will no longer be given from age 72 to 70.

14. REIMBURSEMENT TO TRUST FUNDS FOR MILITARY WAGE CREDITS AND UNCASHED OASDI CHECKS

A. Military wage credits

Gratuitous military wage credits are provided to persons who served in the military after Sept. 16, 1940. The cost of the additional benefits and the administrative expenses arising from these noncontributory wage credits are borne by the General Fund on a retroactive reimbursement basis (i.e., the costs are reimbursed only after benefits have been paid).

The act provides for a lump-sum payment to the OASDI trust funds from the General Fund for: (i) The present value of the estimated additional benefits arising from the gratuitous military service wage credits for service before 1957; (ii) the amount of the combined employer-employee OASDI taxes on the gratuitous military service wage credits for service after 1956 and before 1984. In addition, the HI trust fund would be credited with the combined employer-employee HI taxes on gratuitous military wage credits for service after 1965 and before 1983. (In the future, the trust funds will be reimbursed on a current basis for such employer-employee taxes on such wage credits for service after 1982.)

B. Uncashed OASDI checks

Under prior law, the value of OASDI benefit checks which were not cashed remained in the General Fund of the Treasury.

The act provides for a lump-sum payment to the OASDI trust funds from the General Fund representing the amount of uncashed benefit checks which have been issued in the past plus appropriate amounts of interest. In addition, the act requires the Treasury Department to credit the trust funds on a regular basis with the value of all OASDI benefit checks which have not been negotiated for a period of 6 months.

II. ADDITIONAL PROVISIONS RELATING TO LONG-TERM FINANCING OF THE SOCIAL SECURITY SYSTEM

1. ADJUSTMENTS IN THE NORMAL RETIREMENT AGE

Currently, the normal retirement age (i.e., the age at which full retirement benefits can be received) is age 65. Early retirement benefits are available at age 62 at a rate of 80 percent of the full benefit. Medicare and SSI benefits are also available at age 65.

Social security beneficiaries under age 70 who work and have earnings are subject to a $1 reduction in benefits for every $2 of earnings, when their earnings exceed certain exempt amounts.

The act—

(1) Raises the normal retirement age to 67 in two steps.

(A) Raises retirement age to 66 by increasing the age for full benefits by 2 months a year for 6 years beginning in the year 2000 so that the provision would be fully effective beginning with those attaining age 62 in 2005 (66 in 2009).

(B) Raises retirement age from 66 to 67 by increasing the age for full benefits by 2 months a year for 6 years beginning in 2017 so that the provision would be fully effective beginning with those attaining age 62 in 2022 (67 in 2027).

(2) Maintains age 62 benefits at an ultimate rate of 70 percent of full benefits (after age for full retirement is changed to 67). No changes would be made in medicare or SSI benefits.

(3) Requires the Secretary, by Jan. 1, 1986, to conduct and submit with recommendations to Congress a study of the implications of the change in retirement age for individuals in physically demanding employment.

(4) Reduces the earnings test offset, effective beginning in 1990, for those age 65 and older to $1 for every $3 earned over the annual exempt amount.

III. MISCELLANEOUS AND TECHNICAL PROVISIONS

Title III of the act contains several miscellaneous and technical provisions. The major provisions are the following:

DEFERRED COMPENSATION

The act provides rules for the treatment under FICA and FUTA of various forms of deferred compensation and certain other fringe benefits. First, employer contributions to cash-or-deferred arrangements (code sec. 401 (k)) will be subject to FICA and FUTA. Second, employer contributions to tax-sheltered annuities for employees of educational and nonprofit organizations (sec. 403(b)) will be subject to FICA and FUTA if made by reason of a salary reduction agreement. Third, nonqualified deferred compensation will be included in the FICA and FUTA bases when the services are performed or, if later, when there is a lapse of a substantial risk of forfeiture of the employee's right to those amounts. Fourth, exclusions from FICA and FUTA are allowed for certain meals and lodging provided by the employer, and the act provides that the determination in regulations of whether amounts are subject to FICA and FUTA is to be made without regard to whether these amounts are subject to income tax withholding.

ELIMINATION OF GENDER BASED DISTINCTIONS

The Social Security Act contains several provisions treating male and female beneficiaries differently solely on the basis of gender. The act contains 8 sections eliminating these distinctions in the law, most of which have already been eliminated operationally under court order.

PUBLIC PENSION OFFSET

Under a provision enacted in 1977, people becoming eligible for a public pension on their own account after November 1982, would generally have the amount of any social security dependents' or survivors' benefits reduced dollar-for-dollar on account of that public pension.

Under a provision adopted in 1982, persons who become eligible for a public pension after November 1982 and before June 1983 who meet a "one-half support" dependency test are exempt from the offset.

The act provides that for persons who become eligible for a public pension after June 1983, the amount of the public pension used for purposes of the offset against social security benefits will be two-thirds of the public pension.

LIMITATION ON BENEFITS TO ALIENS

Under current law, there are no citizenship or residence requirements for receiving social security cash benefits (OASDI). Any alien in the United States—whether legally or illegally, or as a permanent or temporary resident—is eligible for benefits provided he has engaged in covered employment and otherwise meets the eligibility requirements. Under prior law, dependents and suvivors were also eligible for benefits regardless of their immigration status or that of the insured workers.

The act provides for suspending the payment of benefits to any alien receiving benefits as a dependent or survivor of an insured worker (whether or not the worker is a U.S. citizen) when the alien beneficiary has been outside the United States for 6 consecutive calendar months. Alien auxiliary beneficiaries who could prove that they had lived in the United States for a total of at least 5 years during which their relationship with the worker was the same as the relationship upon which eligibility for benefits is based (e.g., spouse, child, parent) would be exempt from the suspension of benefits. Children would be deemed to meet the 5-year residence requirement if the residence requirement could be met by the child's parents.

LIMITATION OF PRISONERS BENEFITS

Under current law, persons imprisoned for the conviction of a felony are not eligible for disability benefits unless they are participating in a court-approved rehabilitation program. (Dependents benefits are not affected.) Disability benefits are suspended for the period of imprisonment. also,

The act extends the provision in current law applying to disability insurance benefits to old-age and survivors insurance benefits.

ACCELERATE STATE AND LOCAL DEPOSITS

Under prior law, the deposit of withheld social security taxes for State and local employees was required within 30 days after the end of the month in which the applicable wages were paid.

The act provides that State and local governments will be required to deposit withheld social security taxes on a biweekly (i.e., every 2 weeks) basis.

IV. Supplemental Security Income Benefits

1. INCREASE IN FEDERAL BENEFIT STANDARD

The act includes provisions to increase the Federal SSI benefit standard by $20 per month for individuals and $30 per month for couples, effective July 1, 1983.

The Federal SSI cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) is delayed from July 1983 to January 1984, and the current linkage between the OASDI and SSI COLA is maintained. Federal SSI benefits will be adjusted in January 1984, and every January thereafter, by the same percentage as OASDI benefits except that the provision to pay the lower of the increase in wages or prices, which would be applicable to OASDI benefit increases beginning in 1988, would not apply to SSI.

2. ADJUSTMENT IN FEDERAL PASS-THROUGH

The SSI pass-through law is amended by the act to provide that in order to meet the "payment level" pass-through requirement, a State could not reduce its SSI supplemental payment levels below the amount that would provide SSI recipients with an increase in benefits equal to the amount that Federal SSI benefits would be increased in July 1983 under the prior law's COLA provisions. A State can continue to comply with Federal pass-through law by meeting the present "aggregate amount" requirement. In other words, as under prior law, a State is not required to spend more in total for State SSI supplemental payments than the State spent in the previous 12-month period.

3. DISREGARD OF EMERGENCY AND OTHER IN-KIND ASSISTANCE

The act includes a provision under which, until Sept. 30, 1984, emergency and other in-kind assistance provided by a private nonprofit organization to an aged, blind or disabled individual, would be disregarded under the SSI program, if the State determines that such assistance was provided on the basis of need. The act also provides explicit authority for States, at their option, to disregard such assistance under their AFDC program.

4. PAYMENT OF SSI TO TEMPORARY RESIDENTS OF PUBLIC EMERGENCY SHELTERS

Aged, blind, or disabled individuals who are residents of private emergency shelters are eligible for SSI. However, such residents of public shelters cannot receive SSI because with certain exceptions, residents of public institutions are not eligible for SSI. The act includes a provision under which aged, blind, or disabled individuals who are temporary residents of public emergency shelters could receive SSI payments for a period of up to 3 months during any 12-month period.

5. NOTIFICATION REGARDING SSI

The act provides that prior to July 1, 1984, the Secretary of Health and Human Services is required to notify, on a one-time basis, all elderly OASDI beneficiaries, who are potentially eligible, of the availability of SSI and encourage them to contact the district offices of the Social Security Administration. In addition, the provision requires that the same information be included with the notification to OASDI beneficiaries of upcoming eligiblity for supplemental medical insurance.

V. Unemployment Compensation Provisions

1. EXTENSION OF FEDERAL SUPPLEMENTAL COMPENSATION (FSC) PROGRAM

The act extends the FSC program for 6 months, from Apr. 1, 1983, through Sept. 30, 1983.

Effective Apr. 1, 1983, FSC benefits would be payable as follows:

(a) Basic FSC benefits.—Individuals would begin receiving FSC on or after Apr. 1, 1983, and could receive up to a maximum of:

(1) 14 weeks in States with average IUR 6.0 percent and above;
(2) 12 weeks in States with average IUR 5.0 to 5.9 percent;
(3) 10 weeks in States with average IUR 4.0 to 4.9 percent;
(4) 8 weeks in all other States.

The maximum number of weeks payable in a State after Apr. 1, 1983, could be no more than 4 weeks less than the maximum number payable on Mar. 27, 1983. This provision would apply only in those States where the maximum number of FSC weeks payable for the first week beginning after Mar. 27, 1983, or, if later, the first week FSC benefits provided under this act are payable was more than 4 weeks less than the maximum number of weeks payable under the FSC law in effect on Mar. 27, 1983.

(b) Additional FSC Benefits.—Individuals who exhaust FSC on or before Apr. 1, 1983, could receive additional weeks of FSC benefits up to a maximum of:

(1) 10 weeks in States with IUR at 6.0 percent and above;
(2) 8 weeks in States with IUR at 4.0 to 5.9 percent;
(3) 6 weeks in all other States.

(c) Transitional FSC Benefits.—Individuals who begin receiving FSC before Apr. 1, 1983, and have some FSC entitlement remaining after that date, could also receive additional weeks under (b) above. However, the combination of their remaining basic FSC entitlement received after Apr. 1, 1983, and the additional weeks provided in (b), cannot exceed the maximum number of weeks of basic FSC benefits payable in the State, shown in (a) above.

(d) Phaseout FSC Benefits.—Individuals who have not exhausted their FSC entitlement on Sept. 30, 1983, when the program expires, would be eligible to receive up to 50 percent of their remaining FSC entitlement. No new claimants would be added to the FSC program on or after Sept. 30, 1983.

2. LIMITATION ON DISQUALIFICATION OF FSC CLAIMANTS WHO ENROLL IN TRAINING

The act would prohibit the denial of FSC to any otherwise eligible claimant for any week because: (1) the claimant is attending training or an accredited educational institution on a full-time basis; or (2) because of State law requirements that the claimant must be available for work, actively searching for work, or must not have refused work during the training, unless the State agency determines that the training will not improve the claimant's employment opportunities. Effective upon enactment.

3. DEFERRAL OF INTEREST PROVISION

Present law imposes interest of up to 10 percent per year on Federal unemployment compensation loans obtained by the States after Apr. 1, 1982, except for "cash flow" loans that States repay by the end of the fiscal year in which the loans were obtained. A State with high unemployment can defer payment of, and extend the payment for, 75 percent of interest charges due in any year. The State must pay one-third of the deferred amount in each of the 3 years following the fiscal year for which it is due. Interest is charged on the deferred interest. In order to qualify for this deferral and extension of the payment period, the State insured unemployment rate must have equaled or exceeded 7.5 percent during the first 6 months of the preceding calendar year.

(a) The act makes the provisions imposing interest on loans to States permanent.

(b) The act also allows States to defer 80 percent of the interest due for a fiscal year, effective for interest accrued in fiscal years 1983, 1984, and 1985. The deferred amount would be payable in four installments in the succeeding years equal to at least 20 percent of the original amount of interest due. A State would be required to meet conditions (1) and (2) or (A) or 2 (B) below to qualify for the deferral:

> (1) no action has been taken to reduce its tax effort or trust fund solvency; and
> (2)(A) action (certified by the Secretary of Labor) has been taken after Mar. 31, 1982, which increases revenues and decreases benefits by a total of 25 percent in the calendar year immediately following the fiscal year for which the first deferral is requested; and deferral of interest due for the years immediately following the year in which the first year change is effective may be received if changes of 35 and 50 percent are made; or,
> (B) for taxable year 1982, total State UC tax revenues equaled at least 2 percent of total wages paid by employers covered under the State UC law.

(c) Interest will not be charged against any interest for which payment is deferred under current law deferral provisions or those added by this act and summarized in (b) above.

(d) The act allows a State to delay for up to 9 months the payment of interest due for any calendar year after 1982 during which the average total unemployment rate in the State was 13.5 percent or higher. The average total unemployment rate for a State shall be computed using the 12-month period for which the most recent information is available prior to the month in which the interest is due. Interest will not be charged against interest for which payment is delayed.

(e) The act allows States to receive a discounted interest rate that would be 1 percentage point below the interest rate that would otherwise apply. This would be authorized for interest accrued only for fiscal years 1983, 1984, and 1985. It would be available under the same conditions as the new deferral above, except the required percentage changes in (2) would be higher at 50, 80, and 90 percent, respectively.

For purposes of determining whether a State meets the conditions in (2) above, the Secretary of Labor will provide an estimate of the unemployment rate for the base year, the calendar year in which the deferral is requested. The level of benefits and revenue liabilities will be determined using the State law in effect before passage of the legislation. The estimate of changes as a result of new legislation will be made from the base year in each year for which a deferral is requested. Changes in State law which automatically provide for increases in benefit amounts will be considered as if they were in effect in the base year for purpose of determining the change occurring as a result of new legislation. The Secretary of Labor may use historical growth rates for indexed items if appropriate. Once a deferral is approved, a State must continue to maintain its solvency effort. Failure to do so would result in immediate payment of all deferred interest.

Increases in the taxable wage base from $6,000 to $7,000 after calendar year 1982 and increases in the maximum FUTA tax rate to 5.4 percent after calendar year 1984 will not be counted for purposes of meeting condition (2).

States will not be penalized or rewarded if economic events change from those used in the base year for computing eligibility under conditions (2).

4. CAP ON CREDIT REDUCTION

Under present law, the Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) imposes a Federal unemployment compensation (UC) tax on employers in all States at a rate of 3.5 percent on a taxable wage base of $7,000. However, employers in States generally receive a FUTA tax credit of 2.7 percent, resulting in a net Federal tax rate of 0.8 percent. States with insufficient State unemployment compensation revenues to meet State unemployment compensation obligations may borrow from the Federal Unemployment Account. If a State defaults on its loans from the Federal account, employers in the State begin to lose the FUTA tax credit at the rate of at least 0.3 percent a year. For example, because of overdue Federal UC loans, 16 States are experiencing a reduction in the 2.7 percent credit for tax year 1982.

Specifically, if a Federal UC loan is not entirely repaid by the State by the second January 1 after the State receives the loan and remains unpaid on the following November 10 of that year, the FUTA tax credit applicable for that year for the State's employers is reduced by 0.3 percent. For each succeeding year in which the loan remains outstanding, the reduction is at least an additional 0.3 percent (i.e., 0.6, 0.9, 1.2 percent, etc.). Additional offset credit reductions may apply to a State beginning in the second year of repayment if certain criteria are not met. Under legislation enacted in the 1970's, credit reductions were not imposed from 1975-80 for States satisfying specific requirements.

The 1981 Budget Reconciliation Act made two major changes in loan payment conditions, effective from Jan. 1, 1981, to Dec. 31, 1987: (1) interest of up to 10 percent is charged on loans made after Apr. 1, 1982 (except those made for "cash flow" purposes and repaid by the end of the fiscal year in which they occur); and (2) States were allowed to "cap" the automatic FUTA credit reductions if certain solvency requirements are met.

In a State that qualified for the cap, the tax credit reduction is limited to the higher of 0.6 percent, or the rate that was in effect for the State for the preceding calendar year.

The cap provisions are designed to give States additional time to make legislative and administrative changes necessary to restore the State trust funds to solvency. These provisions lengthen the repayment period, but do not reduce a State's total liability.

In order to qualify for the cap on the automatic credit reductions a State must demonstrate that:

> (1) the net solvency of its UI system has not diminished (effective for taxable years 1981-87);
> (2) there have been no decreases in its unemployment tax effort (effective for taxable years 1981-87);
> (3) its average tax rate for the calendar year equals or exceeds its average benefit cost rate for the prior 5 years (effective for taxable years 1983-87); and
> (4) the outstanding loan balance as of September 30 of the tax year in question is not greater than on the third preceding taxable year (effective for taxable years 1983-87—the comparable year for taxable year 1983, however, is 1981).

The act makes the following changes in present law:

(a) The credit reduction cap provisions in present law are made permanent.

(b) A State would still be required to meet all four conditions in present law to qualify for the full credit reduction cap. The act would, however, provide two lower annual credit reductions, if a State does not qualify for the total cap:

(1) If a State meets the first two present law credit reduction cap conditions and either of the remaining two conditions, the annual credit reduction would be reduced by 0.1 percentage points from what it would have been if the State had not qualified for a cap; and

(2) If a State meets the first two credit reduction cap conditions and qualifies for the interest deferral as a result of substantial changes in its unemployment compensation law, the annual credit reduction would be reduced by 0.2 percentage points from what it would have been if the State had not qualified for a cap. A substantial change in action (certified by the Secretary of Labor) taken after Mar. 31, 1982, which increases revenues and decreases benefits by a total of 25 percent in the calendar year immediately following the fiscal year for which the first interest deferral is requested. Deferral of interest due for the years immediately following the year in which the first year change is effective may be received if changes of 35 and 50 percent are made.

The lower credit reductions would be authorized only for taxable years 1983, 1984, and 1985 liabilities. Credits earned during this period would be applied in determining the State's offset credit reduction for years after 1985.

The January 1st of each year for which a State qualifies for a partial limitation on the offset credit reduction will be taken into account for purposes of determining future offset credit reduction. The credit reduction applicable in each subsequent year after the partial limitation is in effect would continue to be reduced by the amount by which the offset credit was reduced.

5. AVERAGE EMPLOYER CONTRIBUTION RATE

Present law provides that a State, in the second year in which the offset credit reduction is imposed to repay outstanding loans, may be subject to an additional credit reduction equal to the amount by which the State's average tax rate is lower than 2.7 percent. The average tax rate and the 2.7 percent are computed from the ratio of taxes collected to State and Federal taxable wages, respectively. Taxable wages are determined by the taxable wage base. Any wages above the taxable wage base are therefore not included.

In States where the taxable wage base exceeds the Federal taxable base of $7,000, the ratio of the State's UC tax revenues to the State's taxable wages will be lower than it would be if the taxable wage base was $7,000. This could activate the additional credit reduction in the second year even though these States have relatively higher tax efforts.

The act changes the calculations so that all wages instead of just taxable wages are counted in the denominators of the State tax rates and the 2.7 percent. Each State's tax rate on all wages subject to contributions under the Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) is compared to an estimate of the national percentage of all wages subject to FUTA contributions that 2.7 percent of taxable wages represents. The 2.7 percent factor is calculated as the product of 2.7 percent and the ratio of the Federal taxable wage base ($7,000) and the estimated U.S. average annual wage in covered employment for the calendar year in which the determination is made. Effective for taxable years beginning with 1983.

6. DATE FOR PAYMENT OF INTEREST

Present law requires that interest is due no later than the first day of the next fiscal year. If the next fiscal year falls on a weekend, interest is due in the prior fiscal year. Otherwise, it is due on the first day of the next fiscal year.

The act requires payment of interest before the first day of the next fiscal year. Effective on date of enactment.

7. PENALTY FOR FAILURE TO PAY INTEREST

The act provides that, if a State fails to pay interest charges when they are due, (a) Federal unemployment compensation and employment service administrative funds will be withheld and (b) the State's unemployment compensation program will lose its Federal certification, which will result in employers in the State losing eligibility for the credit against the Federal unemployment tax. Effective upon enactment.

8. TREATMENT OF EMPLOYEES PROVIDING SERVICES TO EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS

The Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) covers employees of educational institutions. FUTA requires States to deny benefits between academic years or terms to certain professional employees working in instructional, research, and principal administrative capacities if they have a reasonable assurance of returning to work in the next academic year or term. FUTA gives the States the option of applying the same denial of benefits provision to nonprofessional employees of educational institutions.

The act requires States to deny benefits between academic years or terms to those nonprofessional employees of educational institutions for which the denial is optional under current law. Futhermore, the act would allow States to apply this denial of benefits to other State employees who perform services on behalf of an educational institution even though they are not employed by the eductional institution.

9. EXTENDED BENEFITS FOR INDIVIDUALS WHO ARE HOSPITALIZED OR ON JURY DUTY

The act permits States to determine weekly eligibility based on availability for work for claimants of Extended Benefits and FSC who are serving on jury duty or are hospitalized for treatment of an emergency or life-threatening condition. A State must treat these individuals in accordance with their own State unemployment compensation law. Effective upon enactment.

10. OPTION FOR VOLUNTARY HEALTH INSURANCE DEDUCTION FROM UNEMPLOYMENT BENEFITS

The act provides States the option of deducting an amount from the unemployment compensation benefits otherwise payable to an individual and using the amount deducted to pay for health insurance, if the individual elects to have such a deduction made from his benefits.

11. TREATMENT OF CERTAIN ORGANIZATIONS WHO WERE RETROACTIVELY GRANTED SEC. 501(C)(3) STATUS

The act allows a nonprofit organization that elects to switch from the contribution to the reimbursement method of financing unemployment benefits to apply any accumulated balance in its State unemployment account to costs incurred after it switches to the reimbursement method, under the following conditions:

(1) the organization did not elect to switch to the reimbursement method under prior authority because during these periods the organization was treated as a 501(c)(4) organization by the IRS, but the organization has been subsequently determined by the IRS to be a 501(c)(3) organization; and

(2) the organization elects to switch to the reimbursement method before the earlier of 18 months after such election was first available to it under State law or Jan. 1, 1984.

VI. MEDICARE PROSPECTIVE PAYMENTS FOR HOSPITALS

The act provides for a hospital prospective payment system for medicare beginning Oct. 1, 1983. The following is a summary of the major provisions:

1. The Secretary of Health and Human Services would develop payment rates for nine census divisions. A separate urban and rural rate would be calculated for each of these divisions. A fixed amount would be paid for each type of case, identified by the "diagnosis related group" (DRG) into which the case is classified. For fiscal years 1984 and 1985, the payment system is generally designed to be "budget-neutral," that is, to have the same cost as the medicare reimbursement provisions in the TEFRA legislation adopted last year.

2. Beginning on Oct. 1, 1983, the new prospective payment system would be phased in over a 3-year period. During year one, 25 percent of the payment would be based on a regional DRG rate and 75 percent would be determined on the hospital's own cost-base. During year two, 50 percent of the payment would be based on a DRG amount that is a blend of a regional and national rate and 50 percent would be determined on the hospital's own cost-base. During year three, 75 percent of the payment would be based on a DRG amount that is a blend of a regional and national rate and 25 percent would be determined on the hospital's own cost-base. Beginning with year four, 100 percent of the payment would be based on a national DRG rate.

3. The so-called sec. 223 medicare cost limits adopted in the TEFRA legislation would be repealed and would not be used in the new payment system. An adjustment in payment amounts would be made in recognition of the new payroll costs to be assumed by nonprofit hospitals that are required, under another provision of the bill, to cover their employees under social security.

4. Capital expenses of hospitals (including return on equity for proprietary hospitals) would be included in the prospective payment system as of Oct. 1, 1986, unless they have been included earlier through legislation. The return on equity, now calculated based on a rate of return equal to 1½ times the rate of interest earned by the medicare trust fund would, for hospital cost reporting periods beginning on or after the date of enactment, be based on a rate equal to that earned by the trust fund. Special provision would be made for payment of direct and indirect medical education costs.

5. Psychiatric, rehabilitation, long-term, and children's hospitals would be exempted from the prospective payment system, as would institutions in the Territories. The Secretary would provide for exceptions and adjustments for other hospitals as appropriate, including hospitals extensively involved in cancer treatment or research, public and other hospitals serving a high proportion of medicare and low-income patients, regional and national referral centers, very large rural hospitals, and hospitals in Alaska and Hawaii. There would be a special adjustment for sole community providers.

6. Waiver of medicare's normal payment arrangements would continue to be permitted for State cost control systems, and several modifications of provisions respecting such systems are included.

7. Implementation of a single reimbursement limit for both hospital-based and free-standing skilled nursing facilities would be delayed 1 year (it would not take effect until cost reporting periods beginning on or after Oct. 1, 1983).

8. A National Prospective Payment Assessment Commission would be appointed to make recommendations to the Secretary on appropriate payment levels under the prospective payment system and to recommend improvements in the DRG system.

H.R. 2116 (Mrs. Boggs with cosponsors); reported to House Sept. 28, 1984.

H.R. 2116, as reported to the House on Sept. 28, 1984, by the Committee on Ways and Means, would extend medicare reimbursement under part B for occupational therapy services provided in three settings: (1) skilled nursing facilities; (2) rehabilitation agencies and public health agencies; and (3) the therapist's office or patient's home, where the services are provided by an independently practicing occupational therapist. The bill would be effective with respect to services furnished on or after the first day of the month beginning more than 60 days after enactment.

At the adjournment of the 98th Congress, H.R. 2116 was pending on the House calendar.

H.R. 2163 (Mr. Studds with cosponsors); passed Senate Oct. 11, 1984. (See Public Law 98–369 (H.R. 4170).)

H.R. 2163 was introduced on Mar. 16, 1983, and referred to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries. As introduced, the bill amended the Federal Boat Safety Act of 1971. The Merchant Marine Committee reported H.R. 2163 with amendments on May 16, 1983, and the bill was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means for a period ending not later than July 15, 1983. On July 1, 1983, the Committee on Ways and Means reported the legislation with an amendment.

H.R. 2163 passed the House on July 12, 1983. As passed, the bill expands the articles subject to the present 10-percent excise tax on sport fishing equipment and imposes the tax at a new 3-percent rate on electric trolling motors. The bill extends the time for paying the excise taxes on fishing equipment and trolling motors so that the tax generally will be due at the end of the quarter in which first sale is made. The bill also provides that an amount equivalent to the revenue received from the import duties on fishing equipment and on yachts and pleasure craft will be dedicated to the sport fish restoration program. Revenues from the excise tax on motorboat fuels will be reallocated among the boating safety program (up to $45 million annually), the Land and Water Conservation Fund ($1 million annually), and the sport fish restoration program (the remainder).

The bill establishes the Aquatic Resources Trust Fund (to be known as the Breaux-Forsythe fund) in the Trust Fund Code of the Internal Revenue Code to be administered by the Secretary of the Treasury. The new trust fund will consist of two accounts, the Sport Fish Restoration Account and the Boating Safety Account. The new trust fund will replace both the present sport fish restoration program and the National Boating Safety and Facilities Improvement Fund.

H.R. 2163 expands the present 11-percent manufacturers excise tax on arrows to include arrows less than 18 inches in overall length when the arrow is suitable for use with a taxable bow.

H.R. 2163 also provides that the National Fish and Wildlife Foundation, established in H.R. 2809, will be treated as a tax-exempt foundation eligible to receive tax-deductible contributions. This treatment would continue as long as the Foundation continues to satisfy requirements of the Internal Revenue Code.

On Nov. 7, 1983, the Senate Committee on Finance voted to amend H.R. 2163 to substitute 3 tariff bills for its text, and to approve and to report favorably the bill as amended. The three bills are:

1. S. 230, which would reclassify and increase duties on unfair cordage products.

2. S. 453, as amended, which would amend the current definition of "like product" in sec. 771(10) of the 1930 Tariff Act, to include agricultural products in earlier stages of processing than imported articles.

3. S. 759, as amended, which would accelerate, within a quota, the current staged duty reductions on fish nets which are now to become fully reduced (to 17 percent ad valorem) in 1989. The bill would permit the 17 percent tariff rate to apply immediately to the first 1.75 million pounds of fish nets, or 28 percent of the prior year's domestic consumption, whichever is greater.

The bill was reported to the Senate on Nov. 15, 1983. H.R. 2163 passed the Senate with amendments on Oct. 11, 1984.

The sport fishing excise tax and trust fund provisions were included in H.R. 4170 (P.L. 98-369) as it became law.

The Senate considered H.R. 2163 in April and May of 1984, adding numerous tax and spending related amendments which ultimately were included in the Senate passed version of H.R. 4170. After placing those amendments onto H.R. 4170, the Senate returned H.R. 2163 to the Senate Calendar.

On Oct. 11, 1984, the Senate passed H.R. 2163 after agreeing to a committee amendment in the nature of a substitute and several floor amendments. As passed by the Senate, H.R. 2163 would (1) extend energy tax credits for chlor-alkali electrolytic cells; (2) provide an additional period of time for the marketing of certain limited partnership interests; (3) express the sense of the Senate that no disallowance of deductions for certain home mortgage interest payments financed from tax exempt housing allowances be made against military homeowners without the consent of the Department of Defense and before the Congress acts; and (4) provide for the designation on income tax forms of contributions to retire the public debt.

As of the adjournment of the 98th Congress, H.R. 2163, as amended, had passed the Senate.

H.R. 2369 (Mr. Ford of Tennessee); Public Law 98-13; app. Mar. 29, 1983.

H.R. 2369 was introduced on Mar. 24, 1983, to insure that the extension of the Federal supplemental compensation program would be in effect on April 1. This action was taken as a precautionary measure as the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983 would not be completed in time to be signed into law prior to April 1. The Committee on Ways and Means was discharged from further consideration and the bill was deemed to be passed by the House on March 24. The Senate also passed the bill on March 24. H.R. 2369 was signed into law by the President as Public Law 98-13, on Mar. 29, 1983.

H.R. 2389 (Mrs. Vucanovich); passed House Nov. 1, 1984. (See Public Law 98–369 (H.R. 4170).)

H.R. 2389, for the private relief of the estate of Elizabeth Schultz Rabe, was introduced on Mar. 24, 1983, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary. The bill was reported from the Judiciary Committee on Oct. 24, 1983, and passed the House on Nov. 1, 1983. In the Senate, H.R. 2389 was referred to the Committee on Finance.

A comparison provision was added to H.R. 4170 by the Senate and accepted in conference. H.R. 4170 was signed into law on July 18, 1984, as Public Law 98–369.

H.R. 2568 (Mr. Shannon with cosponsors); Public Law 98-611; app. Oct. 31, 1984.

H.R. 2568, Extension of Educational Assistance Program, was reported to the House by the Committee on Ways and Means on Sept. 24, 1984, with amendments. The bill passed the House on Oct. 1, 1984, as amended, and passed the Senate on Oct. 11, 1984.

The prior exclusion from gross income and employment tax of amounts paid or expenses incurred by an employer for educational assistance provided to an employee under a plan that met certain requirements expired for taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1983. The act extends the exclusion for employee educational assistance for 2 years through 1985, subject to an overall annual limit of $5,000 of excludable educational assistance benefits per employee. The act waives penalties and interest for failure to withhold during 1984. In addition, it requires an employer with an educational assistance program to provide an annual information return on the plan to the IRS, and requires the Treasury Department to provide the tax-writing committees of Congress with a study on the effect of the exclusion. H.R. 2568 was signed into law by the President on Oct. 31, 1984, as Public Law 98-611.

H.R. 2602 (Mr. Gibbons); passed House May 17, 1983.

H.R. 2602, as reported on May 11, 1983, and passed the House on May 17, 1983, combines three separate agency authorizations for appropriations under the jurisdiction of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Sec. 1, as amended by the committee, amends paragraph (2) of sec. 303(c) of the Tariff Act of 1930 to authorize an appropriation of $21,241,000 to the International Trade Commission (ITC) for fiscal year 1984. This is the amount requested by the ITC. The committee amendment increases the authorization level set forth in the bill as introduced by $138,000. This amendment was requested by the ITC subsequent to the date of introduction to cover personnel costs associated with the executive pay cap increase.

The amount authorized by sec. 1, as amended, is $1,360,000 more than the amount appropriated for fiscal year 1983, assuming enactment of the fiscal year 1983 pay increase supplemental appropriation. This increase of 6 percent would maintain the current number of authorized positions at 438. The additional funding is attributable to built-in increases in employee compensation, inflation, and space rental.

Sec. 2, authorizes $627,759,000 for the Customs Service for fiscal year 1984. The section limits to $14 million the amount of authorized funds which Customs may expend for the implementation of the Operation Exodus program and also limits to $9 million the amount which may be spent on purchases of equipment for a second air module. The bill authorizes up to $1 million for Customs technical training and assistance for developing nations. In addition, the bill prohibits the Secretary of the Treasury from imposing any interest charges during the 10-day deferral period for the deposit of estimated duties and places a $25,000 "cap" on Customs inspectors overtime pay. Finally, the bill permits the Commissioner of Customs to waive this limitation under certain circumstances, provides for public disclosure of certain import manifest information and allows packaging materials for merchandise, the same condition drawback.

Sec. 3, as amended, amends sec. 141(f)(1) of the Trade Act of 1974, to provide a 1-year authorization of appropriations for fiscal year 1984 of $11,897,000 for the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative (USTR). Of this amount, a maximum of $60,000 may be used for official entertainment and representation expenses. Current law provides a permanent authorization of appropriations for each fiscal year beginning in fiscal year 1983, for salary increases provided under the Federal Pay Comparability Act of 1970.

H.R. 2602, as introduced, included an authorization of $11,647,000 for USTR, the amount originally requested by the agency. The committee amended this amount to reflect an additional $250,000 in a recent supplemental request to cover the expenses of the third Deputy U.S. Trade Representative provided under the fiscal year 1983 authorization (Public Law 97-456), enacted on Jan. 12, 1983.

As of adjournment of the 98th Congress, H.R. 2602 was pending in the Senate Finance Committee.

H.R. 2769 (Mr. Gibbons with cosponsors); passed Senate Nov. 18, 1983. (See H.R. 2973, and H.R. 4280 for related action.)

H.R. 2769 was reported to the House by the Committee on Ways and Means on June 24, 1983, and passed the House on July 14, 1983. As passed by the House the bill contains the following trade and tax incentives for 27 potential beneficiary countries:

TRADE PROVISIONS (TITLE I)

Under present law, imports from Caribbean countries qualify for limited duty-free treatment under the generalized system of preferences (GSP). Goods not qualifying for GSP are subject to normal rates of duty.

Title I permits the President to proclaim "duty-free" treatment for all "eligible articles" imported from designated beneficiary countries subject to certain limitations and conditions. Provisions to compensate Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands are also included.

A. Designation criteria

The President may designate from among 27 countries and independent territories. He may not designate a country if it: (1) has a Communist government; (2) fails to meet certain criteria regarding expropriation of U.S. property; (3) fails to recognize arbitral awards; (4) affords reverse tariff preferences to other developed countries; (5) engages in piracy of copyrighted broadcast material; or (6) fails to take adequate steps to assist in preventing illegal narcotics traffic. A committee amendment also prohibits eligibility of any country which has not entered into an extradition treaty with the United States. There are also certain discretionary criteria the President must consider prior to designation.

B. Rules of origin

Various "rules of origin" requirements regarding Caribbean imports are designed to prevent passthrough operations and ensure benefits to beneficiary countries. First, the product must be imported directly from a beneficiary country. Second, it must consist of at least 35 percent value-added in the Caribbean except that a certain percentage (15 percent of total value) from U.S.-made components may be counted toward this 35 percent minimum. This will encourage U.S. exports to the Caribbean duty-free zone and would also reduce the quantity of third-country components incorporated into duty-free products. Third, any product including foreign components must be substantially transformed into a "new and different article of commerce" in the Caribbean. Products not qualifying under these three rules will be dutiable. Certain types of passthrough operations such as simple combining, packaging and diluting would not qualify under the rules of origin.

C. Product exemptions

Certain products are ineligible for duty-free treatment. These are: textile and apparel, footwear, handbags, luggage, flat goods, work gloves, leather wearing apparel, petroleum products, canned tuna, and watches or watch parts containing components from Communist countries.

D. Limitation on sugar

Sugar is eligible for duty-free treatment but is subject to certain quantitative limits. The three largest suppliers (Dominican Republic, Guatemala, Panama) receive absolute quotas while other countries would be subject to either existing GSP treatment or quotas negotiated by the President. All limits could be adjusted by the President depending upon market conditions. More restrictive quotas proclaimed under other authority, such as those presently in effect, would take precedence over quota amounts under the bill.

E. Food production plan

Each country seeking duty-free treatment for sugar and beef must submit a "stable food production plan" within 3 months of designation to ensure that increased shipments of such products will not displace basic food production and adversely affect nutritional standards. The provision requires consultation with a particular country and possible suspension of duty-free treatment for sugar and beef if the President determines that measures are inadequate to protect basic food production.

F. Import relief

The President may suspend duty-free treatment for any article under the standard import relief provisions of the Trade Act of 1974 (secs. 201-203) or under national security provisions (sec. 232 of the Trade Expansion Act). Provisions are set forth to authorize specific findings regarding CBI imports during the course of normal import relief proceedings and to allow a range of Presidential action concerning such imports. An emergency relief procedure is established for perishable products which would allow restoration of duties within 21 days pending a finding on final import relief.

G. Measures to compensate Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands

The bill includes several provisions to preserve the special relationship of Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands and compensate them for any potential effects that duty-free Caribbean imports might otherwise have on their economies. These include:

1. A provision allowing inputs from the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico to be treated as Caribbean input for purposes of meeting the 35 percent value-added test described above.

2. A requirement that the President consider compensatory measures if the amount of excise tax rebates on rum is reduced.

3. Liberalization of the rule of origin under headnote 3(a) of the Tariff Schedules by increasing from 30 percent to 70 percent the foreign content maximum on articles entered from the insular possessions able to qualify for duty-free entry. Presently, the 70 percent rule only applies to watches. This change would not affect petroleum products.

4. Amendment of the Tariff Schedules to permit duty-free entry of 5 liters of alcoholic beverages by returning U.S. residents arriving directly from U.S. insular possessions if one liter is the product of an insular possession.

5. A provision ensuring that CBI duty-free treatment will not affect duties on coffee imported into Puerto Rico imposed by the Puerto Rican Legislature pursuant to sec. 319 of the Tariff Act of 1930.

6. Clarification of the term "industry" under sec. 201 of the Trade Act of 1974 to include producers located in the insular possessions. This allows such producers to be considered in injury determinations which are a part of import relief proceedings under sec. 201.

H. Economic impact report

The International Trade Commission is required to submit to Congress and the President periodic reports on the impact of the legislation on U.S. industries and consumers. Such reports shall commence 2 years from enactment and cover each year thereafter.

Each report shall include an assessment of the actual effects during the period covered by such report and the probable future effect. The Commission shall consider various enumerated factors pertaining to production, trade, and consumption.

I. Impact study by Secretary of Labor

The Secretary of Labor is required to undertake a continuing review of the impact of the legislation on United States labor and report the results of such review annually to Congress.

J. Feasibility study regarding a Caribbean Trade Institute

The Secretary of State is required to study the feasibility of establishing a Caribbean Trade Institute in Harlem, New York City, which would be supported by Federal and private funds. The study must be submitted to Congress within 6 months from date of enactment.

K. Effective date

The duty-free provisions of title I will take effect on the date of enactment.

L. Termination

The duty-free provisions will expire on Sept. 30, 1995.

TAX PROVISIONS (TITLE II)

A. Rum excise tax payments to Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands

Under present law, U.S. excise taxes paid on rum made in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands and brought into the United States are transferred to the Treasury of the island where the rum was made.

Under the bill, U.S. excise tax revenues collected on any imported rum would be transferred to the Treasuries of Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands.

B. Caribbean conventions

Expenses of attending business conventions in the Caribbean Basin and Bermuda would be deductible if the country where the business convention is held has agreed to exchange tax information with the United States and to provide reciprocal treatment for U.S. conventions. In addition, the Secretary of the Treasury would be required to report to the Congress on the use of Caribbean tax havens to evade or avoid U.S. taxes.

Amendments in the nature of a substitute were approved by the Senate Finance Committee to H.R. 2769. As it passed the Senate on Nov. 18, 1983, H.R. 2769 contains provisions cited as the "Retirement Equity Act of 1983."

The bill contains the following major provisions:

1. Participation and vesting

It reduces from age 25 to 21 the maximum age a pension, profit sharing or stock bonus plan can generally require an employee to attain as a condition of becoming a participant in the plan. Additionally, a plan is not permitted to ignore service after age 18 for purposes of determining the vested portion of a participant's benefit.

2. Break-in-service rules

It provides that, in the case of a nonvested participant, years of service with the employer cannot be ignored under certain circumstances. Generally, a nonvested plan participant will be able to leave employment with an employer for up to 5 consecutive years without losing any prior service credits for participation and vesting purposes. In addition, under the bill, certain absences from employment for maternity or paternity leave will be counted as hours of service so an employee will not incur a break in service for participation or vesting purposes.

3. Joint and survivor annuities

H.R. 2769 generally provides that, after a plan participant has at least 10 years of service for vesting purposes and has attained age 45, joint and survivor annuity coverage is automatic and the participant's spouse will be entitled to a survivor benefit even if the participant dies before reaching normal retirement age. The bill further provides that, in order for the plan participant to decline this automatic joint and survivor coverage, the participant's spouse must consent in writing.

H.R. 2769 also provides that the spouse who was married to the participant during the 1 year period before the annuity starting date is entitled to the survivor benefit unless a qualified domestic relations order provides otherwise.

The bill provides that the joint and survivor annuity rules apply to any plan that pays benefits in the form of an annuity over the life of the participant, whether or not such life annuity is the normal form of benefits under the plan. In addition, the bill requires that all defined benefit pension plans provide benefits in the form of an annuity payable for the life of the participant.

Present law generally requires that the plan furnish a participant with a statement of benefits. H.R. 2769 requires that the statement include a notice that certain benefits may be forfeitable if a participant dies before a particular date.

4. Domestic relations orders divorce

H.R. 2769 clarifies that certain State court orders relating to child support, alimony, or marital property rights are not treated as an assignment or alienation of plan benefits under ERISA. State law providing for the right to such payments is not preempted by Federal law.

The bill provides procedures that a plan administrator must follow in connection with domestic relations orders.

5. Cash-out of certain accrued benefits

H.R. 2769 permits a pension plan to cash-out a separated participant's benefit without the participant's consent if the value of the benefit does not exceed $3,500. The limit under present law is $1,750.

The provisions of the bill are generally effective for plan years beginning after Dec. 31, 1984. For plans subject to collective bargaining agreements, the provisions of the bill are effective for plan years beginning after the date when the current collective bargaining agreements relating to the plan terminate, or Jan. 1, 1987, whichever occurs first.

H.R. 2769 was added by the Senate Finance Committee as an amendment to H.R. 2973 (title II), the Interest and Dividend Tax Compliance Act of 1983. H.R. 2973 was signed into law by the President on Aug. 5, 1983, as Public Law 98-67.

H.R. 2769 was reported by the Senate Finance Committee on Oct. 29, 1983, amended. As amended, the bill deletes the House passed bill and substitutes the provisions of the Retirement Equity Act of 1983, as amended. The bill passed the Senate on Nov. 18, 1983, amended.

A summary of the provisions of the bill, as passed by the Senate follows:

1. Periods of employee service taken into account under pension, profit-sharing, and stock bonus plans

Maximum age conditions.—The bill reduces from 25 to 21 the maximum age a pension, profit-sharing, or stock bonus plan can generally require an employee to attain as a condition of becoming a participant in the plan. Additionally, a plan is not permitted to ignore service after age 18 for purposes of determining the vested portion of a participant's benefit.

Break in service rules.—The bill provides that, in the case of a nonvested participant, years of service with the employer or employers maintaining the plan before any period of consecutive 1-year breaks in service are not required to be taken into account after a break in service if the number of consecutive 1-year breaks in service equals or exceeds the greater of (1) 5 years or (2) the aggregate number of years of service before the consecutive breaks in service.

Maternity and paternity leave.—The bill provides rules relating to crediting of service for cases where an employee is absent from work because of maternity or paternity. Under the bill, certain hours of absence on account of maternity or paternity (up to 501 hours) are taken into account in determining whether a break in service has occurred under the participation and vesting rules.

2. Joint and survivor annuity requirements

Survivor annuity required.—Under the bill, a pension, etc., plan is generally required to provide a survivor annuity for a participant's surviving spouse if the participant dies before the annuity starting date and (1) has reached the earliest retirement age under the plan and has reached an age that is within 10 years of the normal retirement age under the plan, or (2) the participant has at least 10 years of service for vesting purposes and has attained age 45.

Election.—The bill provides that the survivor benefit is provided unless benefits in another form were elected. Under the bill, the election not to take a joint and survivor annuity is effective only if made by both the participant and the participant's spouse. The spouse who was married to the participant on the annuity starting date is entitled to the survivor benefit required by the bill unless a qualified domestic relations order provides otherwise.

Annuity form required.—The bill requires that all defined benefit pension plans provide benefits in the form of an annuity payable for the life of the participant. The provisions of the bill relating to joint and survivor benefits apply to any pension, etc., plan that provides a life annuity.

3. Notice of forfeitability of benefits

Present law requires that a plan furnish a participant with a statement of benefits under certain circumstances. The bill requires that the statement include a notice that certain benefits may be forfeitable in the event the participant dies before a particular date.

4. Special rules for assignment in divorce etc., proceedings

In the case of certain judgments, decrees, or orders relating to child support, alimony payments, or marital property rights, pursuant to a State domestic relations law (a qualified domestic relations order), the bill clarifies that the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 does not treat such orders as an assignment or alienation of benefits under the spendthrift provisions. State law providing for the right to such payments is not preempted by Federal law.

The bill requires that a qualified domestic relations order identify the parties involved and provide specific instructions for determining the portion of plan benefits payable to an alternate payee (a spouse, former spouse, or child) under the order. The bill provides procedures to be followed by the plan administrator in determining whether a domestic relations order issued by a court is qualified. The bill requires that benefits under the order be in a form otherwise provided by the plan.

5. Cash out of certain accrued benefits

The bill permits a pension, etc., plan to cash out a separated participant's benefit without the participant's consent if the value of the benefit does not exceed $3,500. The limit under present law is $1,750.

6. Effective dates

The provisions of the bill are generally effective for plan years beginning after Dec. 31, 1984. In the case of a plan maintained on the date of enactment pursuant to one or more collective bargaining agreements between employee representatives and one or more employers, the provisions are effective for plan years beginning on or after the earlier of (1) the date on which the last of the collective bargaining agreements relating to the plan terminates (determined without regard to any extension agreed to after the date of enactment) or (2) Jan. 1, 1987.

H.R. 2809 (Mr. Breaux with cosponsors); Public Law 98–244; app. Mar. 26, 1984. (See also H.R. 2163.)

H.R. 2809, the National Fish and Wildlife Foundation Establishment Act, establishes a National Fish and Wildlife Foundation as a charitable, not-for-profit organization to encourage, accept, and manage private donations for the benefit of, or in connection with, the activities or services of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. As reported by the Committee on Ways and Means the bill does not address the tax status of the Foundation nor the deductibility of gifts to the Foundation. See, however, the provisions of H.R. 2163, as reported by the committee on July 1, 1983, for provisions relating to these matters.

H.R. 2809 was reported by the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries on May 16, 1983, and was sequentially referred to the Committee on Ways and Means until July 15, 1983. The Committee on Ways and Means reported the bill on July 1, 1983. H.R. 2809 passed the House on July 12, 1983.

H.R. 2809 was reported from the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee on Oct. 19, 1983, with no tax provisions. The bill passed the Senate amended on Nov. 2, 1983. The House agreed to the Senate amendments with an amendment Feb. 6, 1984. The Senate agreed to the House amendment on Mar. 8, 1984. The bill was signed into law by the President on Mar. 26, 1984, as Public Law 98-244.

H.R. 2848 (Mr. Florio with cosponsors); passed House Oct. 3, 1984. (See Public Law 98–573 (H.R. 3398).)

H.R. 2848, the Service Industries Development Act of 1983, was reported unfavorably to the House by the Committee on Ways and Means on Sept. 22, 1983, on sequential referral. The Committee on Energy and Commerce, to whom the bill was originally referred, reported it favorably on May 15, 1983.

On Oct. 3, 1984, the House passed H.R. 2848 in an amended substitute version as described below.

H.R. 2848 encourages further expansion of international trade and investment services and promotes expansion of U.S. service industries in foreign commerce.

H.R. 2848 requires the establishment by the Secretary of Commerce of a service industries development program including the development, in consultation with other agencies, of policies to increase the competitiveness of U.S. service industries in foreign commerce and development and analysis of other information on services trade factors affecting the competitiveness of service industries. The Secretary would have to submit a biennial report to Congress on the information collected. The Secretary could require private sector submission of information critical to the program, subject to civil penalty proceedings, and would require confidential treatment of such information except for authorized disclosure. Regular consultations are required with service industries and with States on policy issues as well as establishment of intergovernmental policy advisory committees. USTR would coordinate services trade policies with the assistance of other agencies.

H.R. 2848 amends sec. 301 of the Trade Act of 1974 to clarify the President's authority to restrict or deny the access of foreign service industries to the U.S. market in response to unfair foreign trade practices. The bill also sets forth specific negotiating objectives for the President under sec. 102 of the Trade Act of 1974, to reduce or eliminate barriers to trade and investment in services and to develop dispute settlement procedures concerning such barriers.

Public Law 98–573 (H.R. 3398), signed into law on Oct. 30, 1984, includes provisions of H.R. 2848 as it passed the House of Representatives.

H.R. 2867 (Mr. Florio with cosponsors); Public Law 98–216; app. Nov. 8, 1984.

H.R. 2867, the Hazardous Waste Control and Enforcement Act of 1983, was introduced on May 3, 1983, and referred to the Committee on Energy and Commerce. The Energy and Commerce Committee reported H.R. 2867 on May 17, 1983. The bill was sequentially referred to the Committee on the Judiciary on May 17, 1983, through June 15, 1983. A supplemental report from the Energy and Commerce Committee was filed on June 9, 1983. Referral to the Judiciary Committee was extended on June 15, 1983, through June 17, 1983. On June 17, 1983, the Judiciary Committee reported H.R. 2867. The House passed the bill on Nov. 3, 1983. As H.R. 2867 passed the House, none of its provisions were within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Ways and Means.

In the Senate, H.R. 2867 was referred to the Committee on Environment and Public Works. That committee was discharged and the bill passed the Senate amended on July 25, 1984. The Senate amendments included a provision making the Post Closure Liability Trust Fund and its supporting taxes permanent. These provisions, within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Ways and Means, are scheduled to expire on Sept. 30, 1985.

The Senate asked for a conference on H.R. 2867 on July 25, 1984. The House agreed on Aug. 10, 1984, and members of the Committee on Ways and Means were named conferees on the tax provisions of the bill. The conference report (dropping the tax-related items) was filed in the House on Oct. 3, 1984, and the House agreed to the report on Oct. 3, 1984. The Senate agreed to the conference report on Oct. 5, 1984.

H.R. 2867 was signed into law by the President on Nov. 8, 1984, as Public Law 98-616.

H.R. 2973 (Mr. Jacobs with cosponsors); Public Law 98-67; app. Aug. 5, 1983. (See also H.R. 2769.)

H.R. 2973 was reported to the House by the Committee on Ways and Means on May 13, 1983, and passed the House on May 17, 1983. The bill passed the Senate amended on June 16, 1983. The conference report was filed on July 27, 1983, and passed the House and Senate on July 28, 1983. The bill was signed into law by the President on Aug. 5, 1983, as Public Law 98-67.

The act also provides relief for payors of interest or dividends who withhold under the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 rules prior to Sept. 2, 1983. The Secretary of the Treasury will provide procedures under which payors may refund withheld amounts to taxpayers. In addition, the act:

Increases the general rate on back-up withholding to 20 percent;

Increases the penalties for failure to file information returns and failure to provide or to report to the IRS a correct taxpayer identification number; in addition, a due diligence standard is imposed (instead of reasonable cause) in assessing penalties and penalties are to be self-assessed by payors;

Increases the penalties on taxpayers for failure to report interest and dividend income and for filing false certificates as to taxpayer identification numbers or the applicability of back-up withholding;

Requires payors filing 50 or more annual information returns to generally file information returns on magnetic media, beginning in 1985;

Requires information returns to be mailed to taxpayers under separate cover .

Title II of H.R. 2973 contains the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act, these provisions are nearly identical to the provisions of H.R. 2769, adopted by the House on July 14, 1983, except for minor differences agreed to in conference. See the summary of H.R. 2769.

H.R. 2990 (Mr. Rostenkowski and Mr. Conable); Public Law 98-34; app. May 26, 1983.

H.R. 2990 provides that the permanent public debt limit is increased to $1,389 billion. The act eliminates the distinction between the temporary and permanent debt limits. Under prior law, the permanent limit was $400 billion and the temporary limit was $890.2 billion through Sept. 30, 1983. In addition, the act increased the authority of the Treasury to issue bonds to the public (obligations of more than 10 years when issued) bearing interest rates above 4¼ percent from $110 billion to $150 billion.

H.R. 2990 was reported on May 13, 1983, and passed the House on May 18, 1983. In the Senate, H.R. 2990 was reported on May 24, 1983, and passed the Senate on May 25, 1983. The President signed the bill into law on May 26, 1983, as Public Law 98-34.

H.R. 3021 (Mr. Waxman with cosponsors); passed House Aug. 3, 1983.

H.R. 3021, the Health Care for the Unemployed Act, creates a new title XXI in the Social Security Act establishing a block grant to States to provide health care benefits for the unemployed.

The Energy and Commerce Committee reported H.R. 3021 on June 7, 1983, at which time the bill was sequentially referred to the Committee on Ways and Means. The Committee on Ways and Means reported H.R. 3021 on June 30, 1983, with an amendment in the nature of a substitute. The Rules Committee made in order on the floor an amendment in the nature of a substitute (H.R. 3521), making minor changes in H.R. 3021 as agreed to by the Committee on Ways and Means and the Committee on Energy and Commerce. H.R. 3021 passed the House without amendment on Aug. 3, 1983.

The bill as amended contains the following:

Block grant

Establishes a block grant to States to provide health care benefits for the unemployed. Participation would be voluntary for both the States and the unemployed. Funding for the block grant would total $350 million in fiscal 1983, $1.87 billion in fiscal 1984, and $1.54 billion in fiscal 1985, and is consistent with the funding levels contained in the first budget resolution for fiscal 1984.

Eligibility and benefits

States would be permitted to determine, within the broad category of those who are currently receiving unemployment compensation or have received it within the past 2 years, who would be eligible for health benefits. A State would be required to give priority to those who have been unemployed the longest. Five percent of the Federal funds would be set aside for the State to provide health care to persons who may not be eligible for unemployment compensation but who were previously employed and have been determined by the State to have a financial or medical need.

States would have broad authority to design a health benefit package. However, the package would be required to include some combination of hospital and physician care; to be uniform for all eligible persons; and to provide a coverage period of at least 1 year. In addition, special provisions would be made for benefits for pregnant women and small children.

Premiums and copayments

States would be permitted to impose premiums of up to 5 percent of an individual's unemployment compensation check. States would be required to impose copayments on benefits similar to the maximum copayments permitted under the Federal medicaid program.

State allocations

Federal funds would be allocated to States based on a three-part formula: One-third based on the total number of unemployed persons; one-third based on the number of individuals receiving unemployment compensation; and one-third on the number of individuals who have exhausted regular unemployment compensation benefits in the previous year.

Matching funds

States wishing to participate in the program would be required to provide a State match between 20 percent and zero depending on the State's unemployment rate. In a State with an unemployment rate of 6 percent or less, the State would be required to provide a 20 percent match. The match would decrease as the unemployment rate increases, until, in a State with 10 percent or more unemployment, the State match would be 5 percent. For those States which have an unemployment rate of 10 percent or more and also have a rate which is 133 percent or more of the national average rate, the State would have no matching requirement.

Private insurance coverage

The group health plans of private employers with 25 or more employees would be required to provide: (1) an open enrollment period so that an unemployed spouse (and family) may enroll in the employed spouse's plan (effective Jan. 1, 1984); (2) 90-day continuation coverage for employees who are laid off (effective Jan. 1, 1985); and (3) in the case of employers with insured group health plans, the right of an unemployed person to convert to an individual policy (at the employee's expense) without requiring evidence regarding any existing health condition (effective Jan. 1, 1985). Similar provisions would be effective for State and local government employers subject to loss of funds under the public program for failure to comply. The tax enforcement provision included in the bill, effective through Dec. 31, 1986, would impose a 10-percent excise tax on large employers who do not meet the social security coverage requirements.

Enforcement

The provisions affecting private health insurance coverage would be enforced through a 10 percent excise tax on the employer expenses of any plan which does not comply with the requirements. The tax enforcement provisions would sunset on Dec. 31, 1986. In addition, any person adversely affected by the failure of a plan to comply would have a right to seek injunctive relief in Federal district court.

Public hospitals

There would be authorized a discretionary grant program for assistance for public and other hospitals which are providers of last resort for uninsured and unemployed individuals. The funds authorized are: $96 million in fiscal year 1984; $77 million in fiscal year 1985; and $60 million in fiscal year 1986. The amounts are within the budget resolution.

Miscellaneous provisions

The measure contains miscellaneous and technical amendments relating to maternal and child health, professional review organizations, and hospices.

As of adjournment of the 98th Congress, H.R. 3021 was pending on the Senate Calendar.

H.R. 3050 (Mr. Jones of Tennessee with cosponsors); passed House Mar. 1, 1984.

H.R. 3050, the Rural Electrification and Telephone Revolving Fund Self Sufficiency Act of 1983, was reported to the House by the Agriculture Committee on Dec. 9, 1983. On Jan. 23, 1984, the bill was referred to Ways and Means and Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Committees, solely for consideration of sec. 5 of the bill.

The Ways and Means Committee by way of a letter dated Feb. 1, 1984, waived further consideration of sec. 5 of the bill, if it were amended to require the approval of the Federal Financing Bank before the Administrator could repurchase certificates of beneficial ownership.

The bill, as amended, would authorize the Administrator of the Rural Electrification Administration to repurchase certificates of beneficial ownership previously sold to the Federal Financing Bank without penalty whenever the interest rate exceeds the current interest rate on similar certificates by 1 percent or more.

On Feb. 24, 1984, the Ways and Means and Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Committees were discharged and on Mar. 1, 1984, the bill passed the House with the amendment to sec. 5 described above.

As of adjournment of the 98th Congress, H.R. 3050 was pending in the Senate Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

H.R. 3069 (Mr. Whitten); Public Law 98-63; app July 30, 1983.

H.R. 3069 was introduced on May 18, 1983, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations. The Appropriations Committee reported H.R. 3069 on May 18, 1983, and the bill passed the House on May 25, 1983. In the Senate, H.R. 3069 was reported to the Appropriations Committee on May 26, 1983, and the bill passed the Senate on June 16, 1983. The conference report was filed on July 20, 1983, and passed the House on July 28, and the Senate on July 29, 1983.

The Appropriations Committee conference report includes two provisions relating to jurisdiction of the Committee on Ways and Means: (1) Language added by the House, stricken by the Senate, but restored by the conference committee which prohibits the IRS from assessing or collecting tax on the value of lodging furnished to an employee by an educational institution (letter in opposition sent from Chairman Rostenkowski to Chairman Whitten on July 15, 1983); and (2) language added by the Senate and accepted by the House in conference which allows the Federal energy tax credit to certain veterans in Oregon who received State financing for tax years prior to Jan. 1, 1983. The IRS had ruled these taxpayers were ineligible for the energy tax credits because of the Federal anti-double-dipping rules which include State financing programs.

The President signed the bill into law on July 30, 1983, as Public Law 98-63.

H.R. 3278 (Mr. Studds with cosponsors); reported to House Aug. 2, 1983. (See H.R. 5640 for related action.)

H.R. 3278, the Comprehensive Oil Pollution Liability and Compensation Act, was introduced on June 9, 1983, and referred jointly to the Committee on Public Works and Transportation and the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries. The bill was reported by the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee on Aug. 2, 1983.

The Committee on Ways and Means requested sequential referral of H.R. 3278 upon completion of consideration by both committees with joint referral since the bill proposed major user fees to fund oil pollution cleanup and compensation. H.R. 3278 was similar to legislation which had been sequentially referred to the committee in 1980. At the end of the 98th Congress, H.R. 3278 was pending in the Committee on Public Works and Transportation.

A provision identical to H.R. 3278 was agreed to by the House as an amendment to H.R. 5640.

H.R. 3385 (Mr. Huckaby with cosponsors); Public Law 98-180; app. Nov. 29, 1983.

H.R. 3385, the Dairy Production Stabilization Act of 1983, as it passed the House on July 19, 1983, did not involve the Committee on Ways and Means. On Oct. 7, 1983, the Senate passed the bill with two amendments within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Ways and Means. Sec. 131 of the Senate amendment eliminated the quota floor imposed by the Meat Import Act of 1979. Sec. 213 of the Senate amendment imposed inspection and certification requirements on imported tobacco. On Nov. 9, 1983, the House disagreed to the Senate amendments and requested a conference. Ways and Means members were appointed as exclusive conferees on sec. 131 of the Senate bill and as additional conferees on sec. 213 of the Senate bill. On Nov. 16, 1983, the conference report was filed. The Senate receded on sec. 131, and conferees agreed to a House proposed modification of sec. 213 authority requiring limited inspection only. The conference report was agreed to in the Senate on Nov. 17, 1983, and in the House on Nov. 18, 1983.

The President signed the bill into law on Nov. 29, 1983, as Public Law 98-180.

H.R. 3391 (Mr. Pease and Mr. Gibbons); House agreed to Senate amendment with an amendment, Feb. 2, 1984. (See also Public Law 98-120 (H.R. 3813) and Public Law 98-460 (H.R. 3755).)

H.R. 3391, as reported favorably by the Committee on Ways and Means with technical amendments on June 29, 1983, reauthorizes and amends the trade adjustment assistance (TAA) programs for workers and firms under the Trade Act of 1974, as amended by the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981. The TAA programs, which terminate by statute on Sept. 30, 1983, provide weekly cash allowance plus training benefits and job search and relocation allowances to eligible import-impacted workers certified by the Secretary of Labor and technical and/or financial assistance to import-impacted firms with approved economic adjustment plans certified by the Secretary of Commerce.

H.R. 3391 reauthorizes the TAA programs for 2 years until Sept. 30, 1985. The bill also amends the programs as follows:

ELIGIBILITY REQUIREMENTS

Sec. 1 extends for the period of a reauthorized program the existing import causation standard for certification of petitioning groups of workers as eligible to apply for TAA. That standard requires that increased imports "contributed importantly" to significant worker layoffs and sales and/or production declines of the workers' firm or subdivision.

Sec. 1 also expands the coverage of program certification authority under sec. 222 of the Trade Act in two respects: (1) to workers in independent firms supplying "essential parts of essential services" to firms or subdivisions producing import-impacted end products; and (2) to workers laid off or threatened with layoff by reason of the relocation of production functions of that firm or subdivision to a foreign country.

The amendments under sec. 1 would apply to petitions for certification filed on or after date of enactment.

QUALIFYING REQUIREMENTS

Sec. 2 amends sec. 231(a)(2) of the Trade Act to increase the maximum number of weeks of employer-authorized leave or leave to serve as a union representative or of disability covered toward the minimum 26 weeks of employment in the 52 weeks preceding layoff required for individual certified workers to qualify for TRA benefits. Weeks in which a worker is laid off for any reason if he receives back pay would also be included as weeks of disability. This amendment would apply to petitions for certification filed on or after date of enactment.

LIMITATIONS ON TRADE READJUSTMENT ALLOWANCES

Sec. 3 extends the benefit period under sec. 233(a)(3) of the Trade Act during which a worker may collect up to 26 additional weeks of TRA benefits while in training, if such training is not approved until after his exhaustion of basic TRA benefits. This amendment would apply from date of enactment.

WORKER TRAINING

Sec. 4 amends worker training provisions under sec. 236 of the Trade Act in four respects. The Secretary of Labor would be required to approve training if the five statutory conditions under existing law are met, thereby removing lack of sufficient funds as a reason for not approving training. Sec. 4 adds a clarification to sec. 236(a)(1) that if funds to pay training costs are not available at the time a worker enters training, such costs shall be paid for as soon as possible from the next appropriation of funds.

Sec. 4 also amends sec. 236 to stipulate that the statutory requirement for training approval of a "reasonable expectation of employment" following training does not require the availability or an offer of employment immediately upon training completion.

Finally, sec. 4 adds a provision for supplemental assistance of $15 per day for each day a worker is in approved training after date of enactment but is not eligible for TRA benefits.

The amendments to worker training under sec. 4 would apply to workers covered by certifications issued after Sept. 30, 1982.

TRAINING VOUCHERS

Sec. 5 further amends the worker training provisions under sec. 236 of the Trade Act to establish a voucher system as an alternative method to the present program by which a worker may obtain on-the-job or other approved training if certain conditions are met.

JOB SEARCH AND RELOCATION ALLOWANCES

Sec. 6 amends sec. 237 of the Trade Act to increase the maximum job search allowance from $600 to $800 and sec. 238 of that act to increase the maximum lump sum allowance for relocation from $600 to $800. These amendments would apply from date of enactment.

SPECIAL ACCOUNT FOR ADJUSTMENT ASSISTANCE

Sec. 7 amends sec. 245 of the Trade Act to establish a special account consisting of appropriations from customs revenues to fund the costs of the TAA programs for both workers and firms. This amendment would apply from date of enactment.

ASSISTANCE TO INDUSTRY

Sec. 8 amends sec. 265 of the Trade Act to permit industrywide technical assistance based on a substantial number of workers having been certified in that industry, as well as on a substantial number of firms, and to increase the maximum annual amount of technical assistance per industry from $2 million to $10 million. These amendments would apply from date of enactment.

ACCOUNT FOR FIRM ASSISTANCE

Sec. 9 amends sec. 257(c) of the Trade Act to establish a separate account to be administered by the International Trade Administration in the Department of Commerce consisting of all repayments of loans, interest payments, and other receipts from transactions under the TAA program for firms. These funds shall be used for future loans, loan guarantees, technical assistance, or other functions under the program.

On Sept. 29, 1983, sec. 10 of H.R. 3391, relating to the extension of adjustment assistance of workers and firms, was added as a Senate amendment to H.R. 3813, which was signed into law by the President on Oct. 12, 1983, as Public Law 98-120.

H.R. 3391 was reported to the Senate on Oct. 29, 1983, in the nature of a substitute relating to ESOP's. The amendment was withdrawn and a floor amendment was adopted which extended a provision allowing payment of social security disability benefits during appeal; and extends social security income benefits for those who work despite a severe impairment. The bill passed the Senate as amended, on Nov. 18, 1983.

On Feb. 2, 1984, the House agreed to the Senate amendment with an amendment, which would delete the provision extending the payment of social security disability benefits during appeal. This provision is included in H.R. 3755, which became Public Law 98-460 on Oct. 10, 1984.

H.R. 3398 (Mr. Gibbons by request); Public Law 98-573; app. Oct. 30, 1984.

H.R. 3398, as reported to the House on June 24, 1983, incorporates 23 trade bills, involving permanent duty-free entry, temporary duty reductions, temporary suspension of duties, certain classification changes, certain provisions affecting U.S. Customs administration, and for other purposes.

On June 28, 1983, H.R. 3398, as reported, passed the House.

On Nov. 7, 1983, the Senate Committee on Finance approved H.R. 3398 with amendments and ordered it reported favorably to the Senate. The bill was approved as passed by the House with the exception of two sections: (1) Sec. 124 (S. 37), relating to a duty reduction for surgical drapes and gowns of manmade fiber; and (2) sec. 211(a) (S. 722), relating to the importation of bicycle parts into a foreign trade zone.

The Committee on Finance further voted to amend H.R. 3398 by adding a number of additional miscellaneous tariff provisions as well as the following new items.

S. 144, the International Trade and Investment Act previously reported favorably by the committee, was again approved, with two amendments. The first would include data flow within the definition of "commerce" in S. 144. The second would revive the TSUS items with respect to which the bill authorizes the President to negotiate and to proclaim lower tariffs. These items now are: (a) 687.70; (b) 687.72; (c) 687.74; (d) 687.77; (e) 687.81; (f) 667.85; and (g) 676.52.

The committee also approved an amendment based on S. 1035, the Fair Trade in Steel Tube Products Act. The amendment would authorize the Secretary of Commerce to take action, with the Secretary of the Treasury, to enforce a letter of agreement between the European Communities and the United States relating to steel pipes and tube imports.

S. 1940, the Canadian border broadcasting bill, also was approved as an amendment to H.R. 3398. The bill would deny a business-expense tax deduction for expenses of an advertisement carried by a foreign broadcast undertaking and directed primarily to a U.S. market, if the undertaking is located in a country that denies a similar deduction for the cost of advertising in the United States directed to that country.

On Nov. 10, 1983, the Committee on Finance reported H.R. 3398 to the Senate with amendments.

On July 31, 1984, the Committee on Finance approved a committee amendment in the nature of a substitute for H.R. 3398, which added a number of new provisions, including (1) 35 miscellaneous tariff and customs amendments; (2) the substance of S. 1718, a bill to renew the Generalized System of Preferences, and (3) the substance of S. 2746, to authorize negotiations for trade agreements for Israel and Canada.

On Sept. 20, 1984, H.R. 3398, with additional floor amendments, passed the Senate.

On Oct. 3, 1984, the House concurred in the Senate amendment in the nature of a substitute consisting of the following bills as passed the House: H.R.'s 2848, 3398, 3795, 4784, 4901, 5188, 5377, 6023, 6064, and 6301. The conference report was filed in the House on Oct. 5, 1984, and was agreed to in both the House and Senate on Oct. 9, 1984. H.R. 3398 was signed into law by the President on Oct. 30, 1984, as Public Law 98-573.

Although most of the errors were minor such as the omission of a comma or the misspelling of an article description, many of them, such as those involving improper indentions, have resulted in the frustration of the legislative intent of the provisions.

72. Effective dates

In general, most of the provisions contained in Title 1 become effective 15 days after the date of enactment. However, a number of provisions are made retroactive to the date of expiration of previous duty reductions and suspensions.

II. CUSTOMS AND MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

1. Drawback

Under prior law, if imported articles are used in the manufacture of other articles which are ultimately exported, drawback or a refund of duties paid on the imported articles is permitted. Three separate provisions of the act will expand the application of current drawback provisions. The first allows drawback if the same person requesting drawback, subsequent to importation and within 3 years of importation of the merchandise, exports from the United States or destroys under Customs supervision fungible merchandise (whether imported or domestic) which is commercially identical to the merchandise imported.

The second provides drawback for all packaging materials imported for packaging or repackaging imported merchandise.

Finally, the act provides that any domestic merchandise acquired in exchange for imported merchandise of the same kind and quality shall be treated as the use of such imported merchandise for drawback purposes if no certificate of delivery is issued for such imported merchandise.

2. Public disclosure of certain manifest information

Under prior law, which requires manifests for all vessels arriving in the United States, the Customs Service may limit public availability to some of the manifest information, such as the foreign shipper of cargo coming into the United States. Moreover, the Customs Service automatically honors requests by an importer even if the confidentiality request was submitted 40 or 50 years ago. These requests do not have to be renewed.

The act provides for the public disclosure of certain available manifest information on imports into the United States. Information on cargoes concerning defense related or foreign policy information will not be available for public disclosure. This provision practices regarding disclosure of import information as it now must follow export information.

3. Virgin Islands excursion vessels

Under prior law, vessels (other than private pleasure boats) which visit the British Virgin Islands and return to the U.S. Virgin Islands are subject to U.S. Customs entry requirements.

The act exempts from entry requirements of the customs laws certain vessels carrying passengers from the U.S. Virgin Islands to the British Virgin Islands and returning.

4. Unlawful importation or exportation of certain vehicles

The act adds a new section to the Tariff Act of 1930 establishing civil penalties of $10,000 for each violation of imports or exports of stolen self-propelled vehicles, vessels, aircraft and parts thereof. A verification procedure with appropriate documentation will also be established and any failure to comply will result in a civil penalty of $500. Customs officials are also encouraged to cooperate with other law enforcement agencies.

5. Increase in amount for informal entry of goods

Under prior law, formal customs entries are required for importations of goods valued in excess of $250. The act increases the allowance for informal entry from $250 to $1,250, excluding goods classified in schedule 3 of the TSUS, certain parts of schedule 7, and parts 2 and 3 of the Appendix.

6. Certain country of origin marking requirements

Under prior law, imported articles are required to be physically marked with the name of the country or origin. However, a number of exceptions to this marking requirement are permitted.

The act, without exception, requires permanent marking of imported pipe, pipe fittings, compressed gas cylinders, and manhole rings or frames, covers, and assemblies thereof, to show the country of origin.

7. Equipments and repairs of certain vessels exempt from duties

Under prior law, foreign-made equipment, parts, and materials for and repairs made in foreign ports upon U.S.-flag vessels are subject to a duty upon the vessels first arrival in a U.S. port.

The act exempts any U.S.-flag vessel that is away from a U.S. port for at least 2 years from the 50 percent ad valorem duty on repairs and equipment purchases, provided the repairs or equipment purchases were not made within 6 months of departure from a U.S. port and the vessel did not depart from a U.S. port for the purpose of obtaining overseas repairs.

Articles returned from space, like all other articles, are subject to U.S. Customs entry requirements. The act provides that return of certain articles from space shall not be considered an importation and customs entry of such articles shall not be required.

9. Date of liquidation or reliquidation

Under prior law, increased duties found to be due to the Customs Service need not be paid on liquidation and need not be deposited in order to protest their assessment before the Customs Service; they must be paid prior to filing a civil action in the Court of International Trade, or the expiration of the time for filing such an action (180 days).

The act prescribes the due date of liquidation or reliquidation of duties to be 15 days after the date of liquidation or reliquidation and, if not paid within 30 days after that date, interest would be assessed from the 15th day after the date of liquidation or reliquidation at a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury. The Government would also be liable for interest if the importer later substantiates his claim.

10. Operation of certain duty-free sales enterprises

Under prior law, "duty-free stores" are operated as bonded customs warehouses and the operators of such stores must be approved by the U.S. Customs Service. The act permits State and local government authorities having jurisdiction over airports or other exit points to require that operators of duty-free sales enterprises in such locations obtain concessions or approval before beginning business.

11. Customs brokers

The act makes comprehensive changes to the Tariff Act of 1930 with respect to the licensing of customs brokers. The legislation defines the term "customs business" and restricts the scope of Customs' review of customs brokers to such customs business. It also specifies that only licensed brokers may conduct business for third parties; sets forth licensing and permit procedures; establishes a duty for customs brokers to exercise responsibility and control over their customs business; and provides disciplinary proceedings, including monetary penalties and revocation or suspension of licenses or permits.

12. Seizures and forfeitures

Under prior law, judicial forfeiture proceedings must be used in all cases where the seized property exceeds $10,000, even though most cases are uncontested. Further, since Customs may not currently use the net proceeds on one seizure to offset the unrecouped costs of another seizure, such losses must be covered by their regular appropriations. The act provides for a more streamlined approach for handling civil forfeitures and expands the arrest authority of customs officers. It allows the use of administrative rather than judicial forfeiture proceedings in many more cases by increasing the current ceiling from $10,000 to $100,000 for most articles and by removing the ceiling entirely for prohibited merchandise and conveyances which are used to import, export, transport, or store any controlled substance. It also raises the amount of bond which is required to be posted in order to require a judicial forfeiture from $250 to the lesser of $2,500 or 10 percent of the value of the property. Additionally, the act establishes the Customs Forfeiture Fund to help defray the escalating costs associated with forfeiture procedures and provides the authority for Customs to transfer seized or forfeited property to State or local law enforcement agencies. Finally, it increases the compensation level which can be paid to informers from $50,000 to $250,000.

13. Effective dates

The provisions generally become effective 15 days after the date of enactment. Provision is also made for the retroactive application to Jan. 1, 1983, of the amendments relating to vessel repairs if prescribed procedures are complied with.

14. Small business assistance

The act provides for establishment of a Trade Remedy Assistance Office in the International Trade Commission to provide information to eligible small businesses on the remedies and benefits available under U.S. trade laws and the procedures for filing for those remedies and benefits. Each agency responsible for administering a trade law also is required to provide similar technical assistance to small businesses.

Although products of Puerto Rico used in the manufacture of other articles destined for the United States are entitled, under present law, to be considered as products of beneficiary countries for purposes of applying the rules-of-origin criteria under the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act (CBERA), final processing must occur in a beneficiary country to be eligible for duty-free treatment upon importation into the United States.

That section directs the Secretary to advise the President whenever he has reason to believe that imports of any article might interfere with U.S. price support or other programs in various ways. If the President agrees there is reason for such a belief, he may direct the ITC to investigate. Based on appropriate ITC findings, the President may impose tariffs, quotas, or other import restrictions.

Under the act, congressional disapproval of the President's action must take the form of a joint resolution passed within the 90-day period provided for in current law. A joint resolution must be presented to the President and, if signed, has the force of law.

3?. Sec. 201 criteria

In a case brought under sec. 201 of the Trade Act of 1974, the International Trade Commission must take all relevant economic factors into account when making a decision as to whether or not increased imports are a substantial cause or threat of serious injury to a domestic industry. Such factors may include the idling of productive facilities and trends in the industry's sales, inventories, profits, unemployment, or underemployment.

The act provides that the presence or absence of any one of these factors shall not by itself be the key to an injury determination by the Commission. The act also clarifies certain terms found in sec. 201.

III. INTERNATIONAL TRADE AND INVESTMENT (RECIPROCITY)

1. Negotiating authority and consultations

The act for the first time gives the President specific negotiating authority with respect to international trade in services; U.S. foreign direct investment and foreign export performance requirements; and international trade and investment in high technology products and related services. In general, the objective of negotiations in these areas is to reduce or eliminate foreign barriers (tariff and nontariff) or other distortions, and to develop internationally agreed rules, including dispute settlement procedures, aimed at reducing or eliminating such barriers or distortions. With regard to high technology, the act also specifies that commitments should be sought from foreign governments to provide minimum safeguards of intellectual property rights.

Present law provides for advice from the private sector when the U.S. Trade Representative formulates specific negotiating objectives on trade matters. The act requires regular consultations with services industries and with States on trade policy issues. Establishment of intergovernmental policy advisory committees also is required.

2. Trade estimates and reports on barriers

Current law provides for an annual report to Congress from the USTR on the trade agreements program and on import relief and adjustment assistance for workers, firms, and communities.

The act requires the USTR annually to identify and estimate the trade-disorting impact on U.S. commerce of significant foreign barriers to the exportation of U.S. goods and services and restrictions on U.S. foreign direct investment. In annual reports to Congress, the USTR must include information on such analyses and estimates and on actions taken to eliminate the barriers identified (or the reasons why no action was taken). The USTR also is required to consult with the House Committee on Ways and Means and the Senate Committee on Finance, on trade policy priorities aimed at expanding foreign market opportunities.

3. Retaliatory authority

Under sec. 301 of the Trade Act of 1974, if the President determines that a foreign government is unfairly restricting U.S. commerce, he may take action to obtain the elimination of such restrictions; the President may modify U.S. trade agreement concessions and impose duties or other import restrictions against the products or services of the foreign country concerned.

The act clarifies the President's authority to reflect the fact that he may take action in response to unfair foreign practices on investment, as well as goods and services. The act also clarifies the President's authority to impose restrictions on the access of foreign services firms to the United States, as well as to impose fees in response to foreign unfair practices.

In cases involving foreign export performance requirements affecting U.S. foreign direct investment made after the date of enactment, the act gives the USTR authority to impose duties or other import restrictions on the products or services of the country involved, including the exclusion from entry into the United States of products subject to such requirements. The USTR's authority is to be used for the purpose of seeking the reduction or elimination of foreign export performance requirements.

4. Data collection, and services industry development

The International Investment Survey Act of 1976 requires periodic reports on international investment in the United States and by U.S. persons overseas. The act redesignates the act as the International Investment and Trade in Services Survey Act and adds services to the reporting requirement.

The act also directs the Secretary of Commerce to establish a Services Industries Development Program to develop policies to increase the competitiveness of U.S. services industries in foreign markets; collect and analyze data and other information on a wide range of domestic and foreign factors which affect the international competitiveness of U.S. services industries; and report to Congress and the President biennially on the information collected under the program.

5. High technology exports

The act authorizes the President to enter into bilateral or multilateral agreements which may be necessary to achieve objectives relating to high technology products. The President also is given 5-year authority to eliminate duties on certain high technology products (generally semiconductors).

6. Initiation of section 301 petitions

Under sec. 301 of the Trade Act of 1974, if the President determines that a foreign country maintains unfair restrictions on U.S. commerce, he may take action in response to an investigation initiated as a result of a petition, or at his own discretion. The act authorizes the USTR to self-initiate sec. 301 investigations as a foundation for advice to the President.

IV. TRADE WITH ISRAEL

1. Scope of authority to enter into and implement trade agreements modifying or eliminating tariff and nontariff trade barriers

The President does not have authority under present law to enter into trade agreements proclaiming reductions, elimination, or increases in U.S. duties. Sec. 102 of the Trade Act of 1974 authorizes the President until Jan. 3, 1988, to negotiate and enter into trade agreements to harmonize, reduce or eliminate nontariff barriers subject to the expedited congressional approval procedure of secs. 151–154 if (1) he consults in advance with the committees of jurisdiction concerning implementation; (2) gives the Congress at least 90 days prior notification of his intention to enter into the agreement; and (3) after entry submits a copy of the agreement together with a draft implementing bill, statement of administrative action, and a statement of how the agreement serves U.S. interests and why the bill and proposed administrative action is required. Committees are automatically discharged from consideration of the implementing bill after 45 days; each House has 15 days to act on the bill with no amendments.

The act authorizes the President to negotiate and enter into trade agreements providing for elimination or reduction of U.S. duties under secs. 102 and 151–154 procedures with Israel only. However, the advance consultation and 90-day prior notification requirements would not apply to such a tariff agreement with Israel. The agreement with Israel must take fully into account any product that benefits Israel and a third country if the preference has been challenged by the United States under sec. 301 of the Trade Act and the GATT (e.g., citrus with the European Communities).

A trade agreement eliminating or reducing a U.S. duty may be entered into under sec. 102 authority with any country other than Israel only if the following requirements are met in addition to the advance consultations and 90-day prior notification procedures of present law: (1) the country requests negotiation of the agreement; (2) at least 60 legislative days in advance of the 90-day notice the President notifies and consults with the House Committee on Ways and Means and the Senate Committee on Finance regarding the negotiation; and (3) neither of those committees has disapproved of the negotiation during that 60-day period.

No trade benefit can be extended to any country by reason of extending any trade benefit to a country under a trade agreement entered into under sec. 102.

2. Provisions relating to trade agreement with Israel

The act requires that a trade agreement with Israel reducing or eliminating any U.S. duty apply only to articles which meet rule-of-origin requirements of (1) direct importation; (2) 35 percent minimum local content, of which 15 percent may be U.S. content; (3) the growth, product, or manufacture of Israel or substantially transformed into a new or different article of Israel; and (4) regulations to prevent mere pass-through operations or transshipments.

Present laws providing protections to U.S. industry against injurious import competition and unfair trade practices (e.g., dumping or subsidies) will apply to a trade agreement with Israel, as well as emergency relief provisions with respect to imports of agricultural perishable products from Israel, similar to such provisions under the Caribbean Basin Initiative.

V. GENERALIZED SYSTEM OF PREFERENCES (GSP) RENEWAL

1. Basic authority, time limits and reports

Present law authorizes the President to extend GSP duty-free treatment to eligible articles from designated beneficiary developing countries (BDCs) until Jan. 3, 1985, having due regard for (1) the effect of such action on furthering the country's economic development, (2) the extent comparable actions are taken by other developed countries, and (3) the anticipated impact on competing U.S. products.

The act extends the GSP program for 8½ years until July 4, 1993, and expands the authority criteria to include the effect of GSP duty-free treatment furthering the country's economic development through expansion of exports and the extent of the country's competitiveness with respect to eligible articles. The President must report to Congress within 5 years (on or before Jan. 4, 1990) on the operation of the program and annually on the status of worker rights within each BDC.

2. Eligible countries

Present law includes a list of developed countries ineligible for GSP and various mandatory criteria which must be met for a country to be designated by the President as a BDC. Some of these criteria may be waived on the basis of a national economic interest determination. Additional discretionary criteria must be taken into account by the President in designating beneficiary countries.

The act deletes Hungary from the statutory list of excluded countries. It also adds mandatory criteria subject to the national interest waiver relating to whether the country has taken or is taking steps to afford internationally recognized worker rights to workers in the country, and clarifies that present provisions on nationalization, expropriation, and seizure of property also include patents, trademarks, or copyrights.

Additional discretionary factors require the President to take into account (1) the extent the country provides adequate and effective means for intellectual property right protection, (2) the extent the country has taken action to reduce trade distorting investment practices and to reduce or eliminate barriers to services trade; (3) whether or not the country has taken or is taking steps to afford its workers internationally recognized worker rights; and (4) the extent the country has assured the United States it will refrain from engaging in unreasonable export practices.

3. Ineligible articles

Present law includes a list of products which cannot be designated eligible for GSP. In addition, the President cannot designate articles he determines to be import sensitive in the context of GSP.

The act adds footwear, handbags, luggage, flat goods, work gloves, and leather wearing apparel which were ineligible for GSP as of Apr. 1, 1984, to the statutory list of product exclusions. The Secretary of the Treasury must consult with the U.S. Trade Representative prior to prescribing regulations on the rule-of-origin requirements.

4. Limitations on preferential treatment

a. Review and reports.—The act requires the President to conduct a general review of eligible articles by Jan. 4, 1987, and periodically thereafter, and to report to the Congress by Jan. 4, 1988, on the actions he has taken to withdraw, suspend, or limit GSP benefits for failure to take actions described in the country designation criteria.

b. Competitive need limits (cutbacks and waivers).—Under so-called competitive need limits of present law, if imports of a particular article from a particular ocuntry exceed either (1) a dollar amount indexed to U.S. GNP (about $57 million in 1983) or (2) 50 percent of the total value of U.S. imports of the article in a calendar year, then that article from that country is no longer eligible for GSP treatment within 90 days after the close of that preceding calendar year. The President also has general authority to withdraw, suspend, or limit duty-free treatment for any eligible articles from any BDC.

The act requires the graduation of any beneficiary country from GSP on all articles if its GNP reaches $8,500, indexed by 50 percent of the annual change in U.S. GSP. Graduation would be phased out over a 2-year period. If, after any general product review, the President determines that a country has demonstrated a sufficient degree of competitiveness in a particular article relative to other BDCs, then he must reduce the competitive need limits on that article from that country from $57 million/50 percent to $25 million/25 percent.

The President may also waive competitive need limits on any article as of Jan. 4, 1987, if he (1) receives ITC advice on whether any U.S. industry is likely to be adversely affected; (2) determines a waiver is in the national economic interest based upon the country designation factors as amended under sec. 501 and 502(c); and (3) publishes his determination. In making the national interest determination the President must give great weight to (1) assurances of equitable and reasonable market access in the BDC; and (2) the extent the country provides adequate and effective intellectual property rights protection. Total waivers for all countries above the present competitive need limits (i.e., $57 million/50 percent) cannot exceed 30 percent of total GSP duty-free imports in any year, of which a maximum of one-half (i.e., 15 percent of total GSP duty-free imports) may apply to waivers on articles from countries which account for at least a 10 percent share of total GSP benefits or have a $5,000 per capita GNP. Changes in competitive need limits would apply no later than July 1 after the preceding calendar year.

c. Exceptions to competitive need limits.—The act retains the special exception to competitive need limits for the Philippines under present law. The act exempts least developed developing countries designated by the President from the competitive need limits after a 60 day notification to Congress. The exemption from the 50 percent competitive need limit under present law for articles not produced in the United States on Jan. 1, 1975, is updated to Jan. 3, 1985. The President may also waive the 50 percent competitive need limit if total imports of the article in the preceding calendar year do not exceed $5 million (an increase of the $1 million de minimis level under present law.

5. Agricultural exports of BDC's

The act adds a requirement to present law that appropriate U.S. agencies assist BDCs to develop and implement measures designed to assure that the agricultural sectors of their economies are not directed to export markets to the detriment of production of foodstuffs for their own citizens.

VI. TRADE LAW REFORM (AMENDMENTS TO THE COUNTERVAILING DUTY (CVD) AND ANTIDUMPING (AD) TRADE LAWS)

Title VI contains a number of amendments to the countervailing duty and antidumping laws which provide domestic industries and workers the basic trade remedies in the form of offsetting duties against injurious imports resulting from foreign subsidy and dumping practices. The administering authority for purposes of conducting investigations to determine the existence and amount of subsidies or dumping on imports of particular products is the Department of Commerce; the International Trade Commission determines whether such imports cause or threaten material injury to the domestic industry. The basic purposes are to clarify the coverage of the countervailing duty and antidumping laws with respect to particular practices, to simplify and improve the administration of these laws in order to reduce the time and expense of processing cases and of providing relief in the public interests, and to assist small businesses in seeking appropriate remedies under these and other trade laws. The substantive provisions of the act are described below.

1. Clarification of coverage

Present law applies CVD's when the administering authority finds a subsidy with respect to merchandise imported into the United States and the International Trade Commission (ITC) finds material injury or threat thereof by reason of imports of that merchandise. In AD investigations the administering authority determines whether foreign merchandise is being, or is likely to be, sold in the United States at less than its fair value.

The act clarifies that both laws cover sales and likely sales, as well as imports that have already occurred, and that they apply to certain leasing arrangements.

2. Waiver of verification

The act includes a procedure in CVD law, similar to that in AD law, to permit expedited preliminary determinations based on information received during the first 50 days (rather than the normal 85-day time period) if the petitioner and other interested parties waive verification and agree to have the determination made on the basis of the record then available.

3. Termination or suspension of investigation

Under present law in "extraordinary circumstances," the administering authority may suspend a CVD investigation before its final determination upon acceptance of an agreement from the Government to eliminate completely the injurious effects. The agreement may take the form of quantitative restrictions agreement on the volume of imports. Before suspending any CVD or AD investigation the administering authority must (1) notify and consult the petitioner of its intention, and give 30 days advance notice to other parties and to the ITC; (2) provide a copy and explanation of the proposed agreement to the petitioner; and (3) permit all parties to submit comments and information. No form of suspension agreement can be accepted unless the administering authority is satisfied suspension is in the public interest and effective U.S. monitoring of the agreement is practicable. Upon withdrawal of a petition the administering authority may terminate a CVD or AD investigation after notice to all parties to the investigation; the law does not specify the basis or criteria.

The act amends the CVD and AD laws to require the administering authority to take additional public interest factors into account prior to determining whether to terminate or suspend investigations based on settlement agreements involving quantitative restrictions and to consult to the extent practicable with potentially affected consuming industries and producers and workers in the domestic industry. The additional factors include whether the agreement would have a greater adverse effect on consumers than the imposition of duties, the relative impact on the U.S. international economic interest, and the relative impact on domestic industry competitiveness. Comments would be permitted from all interested parties, rather than only parties to the investigation, prior to a settlement agreement.

4. Critical circumstance determinations

Under present law, if the petitioner alleges and the administering authority finds critical circumstances in an affirmative preliminary CVD or AD determination, suspension of liquidation applies to unliquidated entries retroactively 90 days.

The act clarifies that final critical circumstance findings in CVD investigations may be affirmative even though the preliminary determination was negative.

5. Simultaneous investigations/hearings

In normal cases under present law, preliminary CVD determinations are required within 85 days, final determinations within 75 days thereafter; Ad preliminary determinations are required within 160 days, final determinations within 75 days thereafter. These time periods are extended in extraordinarily complicated cases. The administering authority and the ITC each must hold a hearing before making their final CVD or AD determinations, upon the request of any party to the investigation.

The act authorizes, if requested by a petitioner, extension of a final CVD determination until the date of the final determination on an AD investigation if there are simultaneous investigations involving imports of the same merchandise. Also, if investigations are initiated under both laws within 6 months of each other but before a final injury determination in either case regarding the same merchandise from the same country, only one ITC hearing would be required. The ITC could require a hearing in special circumstances and would allow submission of additional relevant written comments.

6. Countervailing duties application on country-wide basis

The act provides for presumptive application of CVD's to all merchandise from the country investigated, except that the CVD order may provide for differing CVD's if there is a significant differential between companies receiving subsidy benefits or a state-owned enterprise is involved.

7. Conditional payment of CVD's

The act adds a provision to CVD law similar to existing sec. 738 in AD law, requiring that estimated CVD's be deposited by the importer with Customs before merchandise subject to a CVD order can be removed from warehouse.

8. Initiation of AD investigations

Present law requires the administering authority to self-initiate an AD investigation whenever it determines, from information available to it, that a formal investigation is warranted. There is no formal requirement regarding monitoring of products subject to existing AD orders to determine whether self-initiation with respect to additional suppliers is warranted.

The act establishes a procedure whereby the administering authority may monitor imports from additional supplier countries for up to 1 year in order to determine whether self-initiation of additional dumping cases is warranted.

For monitoring to be established, three conditions must be met: (1) there is more than one AD order in effect on the product; (2) the administering authority has reason to believe or suspect an extraordinary pattern of persistent injurious dumping from one or more additional suppliers; and (3) in the judgment of the administering authority this extraordinary pattern is causing a serious commercial problem for the domestic industry.

9. Consultations and determinations regarding quantitative restriction agreements

Present law requires the administering authority or the ITC to review any CVD suspension agreement whenever it receives information or a request showing changed circumstances sufficient to warrant a review. If the ITC determines a suspension agreement no longer eliminates completely the injurious effect of subsidized imports, the administering authority and the ITC proceed with the investigation as if the agreement had been violated on that date. No provision of prior law requires efforts to eliminate the subsidy margin while the suspension agreement is in effect, or the imposition of CVD's upon its expiration equal to any remaining injurious subsidy.

The act requires that within 90 days after any quantitative restriction agreement is in effect while a CVD investigation is suspended the President enter into consultations with the foreign governments concerned to seek complete elimination of the subsidy practice or of its injurious effects. At the direction of the President, the administering authority would modify a quantitative restriction agreement as a result of the consultations. Before the expiration date, if any, of a quantitative restriction agreement, the administering authority shall at the drection of the President, initiate a proceeding to determine the existence and amount of any remaining subsidy and the ITC would determine whether imports upon termination of the agreement would cause or threaten material injury to the domestic industry. If the agreement terminates, the administering authority would issue a CVD order in the amount of any injurious subsidy margin.

10. Annual reviews/revocation

Prior law requires that at least once each 12-month period following publication of a CVD or AD order, or notice of supension of an investigation, the administering authority must (1) review and detemine the amount of any net subsidy; (2) review and determine the amount of any AD duty; and (3) review the current status of, and compliance with, any suspension agreement, including the amount of any net subsidy or dumping margin involved. The administering authority or the ITC also conduct a review whenever they receive information concerning or a request for the review of an agreement or determination warranted on the basis of changed circumstances.

The act requires annual reviews of outstanding CVD and AD orders only upon request. This is designed to limit the number or reviews in cases in which there is little or no interest, thus limiting the burden on petitioners and respondents, as well as the administering authority.

Under prior law the administering authority may revoke a CVD or AD order in whole or in part or terminate a suspended investigation after an annual review. The act requires that during an ITC investigation the party seeking revocation of an AD order have the burden of persuasion on whether there are changed circumstances sufficient to warrant revocation. Also, the administering authority cannot revoke a CVD order or terminate a suspended investigation on the basis of offsets (e.g., export taxes).

11. Cumulation

The ITC, in making its determinations of material injury, was required by prior law to assess both the volume of imports of the merchandise subject to investigation and the consequent effects of such imports. The decision to cumulate was made on a case-by-case basis and was solely within the descretion of each individual Commissioner. This practice has neither been ratified nor prohibited by statute.

The act requires that the ITC cumulatively assess the volume and effect of imports from two or more countries of like products subject to investigation if the imports compete with each other and with like products of the domestic industry in the U.S. market.

12. "Threat of material injury" criteria

In making material injury determinations under present law the ITC must consider, among other factors on a case-by-case basis, (1) the volume of imports of the merchandise, (2) the effect of such imports on prices in the United States for like products, and (3) the impact of such imports on domestic producers of like products. In determining whether there is a threat of material injury in CVD investigations, the ITC must consider such information as may be presented by the administering authority on the nature of the subsidy and the effects likely to be caused by the subsidy. There are no other factors specified in present law for determining the threat of material injury.

The act adds criteria the ITC must consider in determining whether there is a probability the merchandise (whether or not actually being imported at the time) will be the cause of actual injury based on any demonstrable adverse trend, including such factors as: (1) an increase in production capacity in the exporting country likely to result in a significant increase in exports of the merchandise to the United States, including any increase in existing unused capacity; (2) a rapid increase in U.S. market penetration and the probability such penetration will increase to an injurious level; (3) the likelihood that imports will enter at prices that will have a depressing or suppressing effect on domestic prices; or (4) a substantial increase in inventories in the United States; (5) the presence of underutilized capacity for producing the merchandise in the exporting country; and (6) the potential for product-shifting if production facilities owned or controlled by foreign manufacturers which can be used to produce products subject to Ad or CVD investigations or final orders are also used to produce the merchandise under investigation. Any determination must be based on the evidence that the threat of injury is real and actual injury is imminent, not on the basis of mere supposition or conjecture.

13. Interested parties

Prior law defines the term "interested party" for standing to file CVD or AD petitions on particular merchandise as (1) a foreign manufacturer, producer, or exporter, or U.S. importer, or a trade or business association, a majority of whose members are importers; (2) the foreign government; (3) a manufacturer, producer, or wholesaler of a like product; (4) a union or group of workers representative of an industry manufacturing, producing or wholesaling a like product; and (5) a trade or business association, a majority of whose members manufacture, produce or wholesale a like product.

The act expands the definition of an interested party with standing to file AD or CVD petitions to include coalitions of firms, unions, or trade associations that have individual standing.

14. Definition of domestic industry

The term "industry" for purposes of CVD or AD investigations under prior law means the domestic producers of a "like product", and the term "like products" has been defined and interpreted to include only those products which are identical or most similar in their characteristics to the imported article. Accordingly, producers of products being incorporated into a processed or manufactured article (i.e., intermediate goods or component parts) are generally not included in the scope of the domestic industry that the ITC analyzes for the purposes of determining injury.

The act defines the domestic industry for purposes of CVD or AD investigations on wine and grape products to include producers of the principal raw agricultural product, if they allege material injury or threat, as well as the producers of wine and grape products.

A previous petition may be refiled under the section if the purpose is to avail the petitioner of this amendment. The provision would expire in 2 years, i.e., apply to petitions filed or refiled on or before Sept. 30, 1986.

15. Upstream subsidies

Under prior law the term "subsidy" has the same meaning as the term "bounty or grant" and includes, but is not limited to, an illustrative list of export subsidies and certain domestic subsidies, if provided or required by Government action to a specific enterprise or industry, or group thereof (i.e., not generally available), and whether paid or bestowed directly or indirectly on the manufacture, production, or export of any class or kind of merchandise.

The act defines "upstream subsidy" as any subsidy described in present law that is (1) paid or bestowed by a government with respect to an input used to manufacture or produce in that same country merchandise subject to a CVD proceeding; (2) in the judgment of the administering authority bestows a competitive benefit on that merchandise, and (3) has a significant effect on the cost of manufacture or production of the merchandise. Customs unions are treated as one country if the subsidy is bestowed by the customs union. The administering authority shall decide that a competitive benefit has been bestowed when the price for the input used in manufacture or production of the merchandise subject to investigation is lower than the price the manufacturer or producer would otherwise pay for the input from another seller in the arms-length transaction. If the administering authority has determined a subsidy exists on the input in a previous proceeding, the authority may (a) where appropriate, adjust the price the manufacturer or producer would otherwise pay for the input to reflect the effects of the subsidy, or (b) select in lieu of that price a price from another source. Whenever the administering authority has reasonable grounds to believe or suspect an upstream subsidy is being paid or bestowed, the administering authority shall investigate whether it is in fact and, if so, shall include the amount of any competitive benefit, not to exceed the amount of upstream subsidy, in the amount of any CVD imposed on the merchandise under investigation. The act also extends the time periods for preliminary and final CVD determinations when the administering authority concludes additional time is necessary to make determinations concerning upstream subsidies.

The act does not affect the basic definition of subsidy in any way. The potential for an upstream subsidy exists only when a sector-specific benefit meeting all the other criteria of being a subsidy is provided to the input producer. The provision is also limited to subsidies paid or bestowed by the country in which the final product is manufactured.

16. Purchase price/foreign market value in AD determinations

The act allows a reseller's price to serve as purchase price in AD determinations if it is prior to the date of importation and the merchandise is for exportation to the United States, i.e., to deal with transshipment situations. The act also provides that the foreign market value in an exporter's sales price situation is the price at the time the goods are sold in the United States to an unrelated party, rather than the time of exportation of the merchandise to the United States.

17. Verification

The administering authority is required by present law to verify all information relied upon in making a final CVD or AD determination. If verification is not possible, the administering authority uses the best information available to it for making the determination. Verification is not required by statute in annual review proceedings of outstanding AD or CVD orders. However, the administering authority normally verifies information where it believes there is a significant issue of law or fact.

The act requires verification of information whenever the administering authority revokes a CVD or AD order. It also requires verification of information used in annual reviews and of outstanding CVD and AD orders if timely requested by an interested party; such verification is not required if it has occurred upon timely request in the two immediately previous annual reviews, except for good cause shown. This generally codifies the current administrative practice of the Department of Commerce.

18. Confidential information/ex parte meetings

Under prior law, information submitted to the administering authority or the ITC designated as confidential cannot be disclosed to any person (other than those directly concerned with carrying out the investigation) without the consent of the person submitting it unless pursuant to a protective order upon receipt of an application which describes the information requested and reason for the request. The act permits release of confidential information to an officer or employee of the U.S. Customs Service directly involved in conducting an investigation regarding fraud and provides a standardized procedure for requesting confidential treatment and obtaining release of confidential information.

Prior law requires the administering authority and the ITC to maintain a record of ex parte meetings between persons providing factual information for an "investigation" and the person making the determination or the person making a recommendation to that person. The act provides that ex parte record requirements apply to "proceedings," not just "investigations," and shall be written if information relating to that proceeding is presented or discussed.

19. Sampling and averaging

For purposes of determining foreign market value only in AD investigations, prior law authorizes the administering authority to use averaging or sampling techniques whenever a significant volume of sales is involved or a significant number of price adjustments is required, and to decline to take into account adjustments which are insignificant in relation to the price or value of the merchandise.

The act expands the instances in which the administering authority may use sampling and averaging techniques to determinations of U.S. price or foreign market value in AD investigations or in carrying out annual reviews of outstanding AD or CVD orders.

20. Interest

Prior law ties interest on overpayments or underpayments of AD or CVD duties to the publication date of an ITC affirmative injury determination. The interest rate is 8 percent or the rate in effect when duties are determined, whichever is higher.

The act changes (1) the date of interest payable to the date of publication of a CVD or AD order or AD findings and (2) the interest rate to the Internal Revenue Code level.

21. Drawbacks

Under prior law only AD duties are currently explicitly stated to be normal duties for drawback purposes; CVD duties are not addressed. The act treats CVD's as well as AD's like other duties for drawback purposes.

22. Judicial review

Title V of the Trade Act of 1930, as amended by title X of the Trade Agreements Act of 1979, provides for judicial review of CVD and AD proceedings initially in the U.S. Court of International Trade (CIT). The Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit may review the CIT's decision on an appeal. Under sec. 516A, certain determinations by the administering authority are reviewable by the CIT prior to the issuance of a final determination or the publication of a final order, i.e., certain interlocutory determinations are reviewable immediately even though the administrative proceeding has not been concluded.

The act eliminates all interlocutory judicial reviews by the U.S. Court of International Trade during the course of CVD and AD investigations. All challenges to agency determinations would be combined and reviewable by the court after final agency action has been taken. The act also clarifies when negative portions of affirmative determinations may be reviewed, and that a final affirmative determination by the administering authority may be contested when an appeal is based on a negative determination by the ITC.

23. Adjustment study

The act requires the Secretary of Commerce to undertake a study of current practices that are applied in making adjustments to purchase price, exporter's sales price, foreign market value, and constructed value in determining dumping duties. The Secretary must complete the study within 1 year after the date of enactment and submit a written report to Congress. The report would contain whatever recommendations the Secretary deems appropriate on the need and means for simplifying and modifying current adjustment practices.

24. Industrial targeting studies

The act requires the Secretaries of Commerce and Labor, the U.S. Trade Representative, and the Comptroller General to each undertake and submit to Congress not later than June 1, 1985, a comprehensive study of problems of foreign industrial targeting including: (1) whether it is an unfair trade practice; (2) whether existing laws adequately address the subsidy element; (3) the extent targeting significantly affects U.S. commerce; and (4) any recommended legislation necessary.

25. Trade remedy assistance

The act establishes a Trade Remedy Assistance Office in the ITC to provide information to the public, upon request, concerning remedies and benefits available under the various trade laws and procedural requirements.

Each agency responsible for administering these laws must provide technical assistance to small businesses (without adequate internal resources nor financial ability to obtain qualified outside assistance) to enable them to prepare and file petitions and applications.

VII. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR CUSTOMS AND TRADE AGENCIES

1. U.S. International Trade Commission

The act authorizes appropriations to the ITC of $28,410,000 for fiscal year 1985. The agency may use up to a maximum of $2,500 for entertainment expenses.

2. U.S. Customs Service

The act authorizes $686,399,000 in appropriations for the Customs Service for fiscal year 1985, of which $28,070,000 is for the Customs air interdiction program. A maximum of $15 million may be spent on the Operation Exodus export enforcement program. Also, the act imposes a $25,000 cap on the amount that individual Customs inspectors can earn in overtime pay each year.

3. U.S. Trade Representative

The Trade Act of 1974 authorized appropriations for the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative (USTR) in such amounts as may be necessary. Under the act, USTR is authorized $14,179,000 for fiscal year 1985 and an $80,000 limit is placed on entertainment and representational expenses.

VIII. STEEL PROVISIONS

1. Enforcement authority

Under prior law, the President does not have the authority to enforce quantitative restrictions on the importation of steel products, except with regard to enforcement of the U.S.-E.C. Arrangement on Carbon Steel Products.

The act provides the President with authority to enforce the quantitative limitations, restrictions, and other terms agreed to between the United States and steel-exporting nations as contained in bilateral arrangements regarding steel products. Such enforcement authority is broad in scope, authorizing the President "to carry out such actions as may be necessary or appropriate," including, but not limited to, requiring presentation of valid export licenses or other documentation as a condition for entry into the United States.

The act further provides the Secretary of Commerce specifically with authority to enforce restrictions on exports to the United States of steel pipes and tubes from the European Communities, in accordance with the terms of the U.S.-E.C. Arrangement of Pipes and Tubes. The Secretary of the Treasury is required to take action at the request of the Secretary of Commerce, whenever the Secretary of Commerce determines that (a) EC exports of pipes and tubes to the United States are exceeding the average of annual U.S. apparent consumption specified in the Arrangement, or (b) distortion is occurring in the pattern of U.S.-E.C. trade within the pipe and tube sector (taking into account the EC share within product categories developed by the Secretary of Commerce).

In taking action with respect to enforcement of the U.S.-E.C. Arrangement on Pipe and Tube, however, the Secretary of Commerce may authorize the importation of additional quantities of specific pipe and tube products in cases of short supply or emergency economic situations. Short supply or emergency economic situations shall not be considered to exist, however, solely because domestic producers are unwilling to supply products at prices below their costs of production (as determined by the Secretary of Commerce). This provision is designed to protect domestic purchasers of EC pipes and tubes from undue hardship due to an inability to obtain adequate supplies from domestic sources.

2. Bilateral arrangements subject to enforcement

The act provides authority to enforce "bilateral arrangements" regarding steel products. The definition of "bilateral arrangements" is intentionally broad, and refers to any arrangement, agreement, or understanding (including, but not limited to, any surge control understanding or suspension agreement) between the United States and any foreign country containing quantitative limitations, restrictions, or other terms relating to the importation into, or exportation to, the United States of steel products.

This definition is broad enough to include both formal agreements and informal understandings between the United States and foreign governments. The understanding need not be written to qualify as a "bilateral arrangement." It must, however, be based on some quantitative limitation, restriction, or other term regulating the foreign country's export of steel products to the United States.

3. Duration of authority

The act provides enforcement authority for a maximum of 5 years, subject to annual renewal within the 5-year period. At the end of the first year of enforcement authority, the enforcement authority shall renew for an additional year only if the President, prior to the anniversary date, submits in writing an affirmative determination to the House Committee on Ways and Means and the Senate Committee on Finance, along with his reasons for such affirmative determination. If the President does not submit such determination, the enforcement authority terminates permanently. If the President does submit such determination, the enforcement authority renews for an additional year, at which time it would again be subject to the annual determination requirement. This annual renewal process would continue until the authority terminates, or until the authority has been in effect 5 years, whichever is sooner.

4. Annual affirmative determination

The act provides that an affirmative annual determination is a three-part determination by the President that: (1) the major steel companies, taken as a whole, have, during the relevant 12-month period, (a) committed substantially all of their net cash flow from steel operations for purposes of reinvestment and modernization, and (b) taken sufficient action to maintain their international competitiveness; (2) each of the major steel companies committed, during the relevant 12-month period, not less than 1 percent of net cash flow to the retraining of workers, unless the President waives this requirement with respect to a particular company due to unusual economic circumstances; and (3) the enforcement authority under this title remains necessary to maintain the effectiveness of bilateral arrangements undertaken to eliminate unfair trade practices in the steel sector. The act contains additional specific criteria to be considered in making the first part of the determination, regarding the industry's efforts to reinvest and modernize and to remain internationally competitive. The terms "major company" and "net cash flow" are specifically defined for purposes of this provision.

5. Department of Labor worker assistance plan

Under present law, dislocated workers may be eligible for benefits under the trade adjustment assistance program under the Trade Act of 1974, or under the dislocated worker provisions of the Job Partnership and Training Act. These programs, however, are not limited to workers only in the steel industry.

The act requires the Secretary of Labor to prepare, in consultation with the Steel Advisory Committee, and to submit to Congress within 6 months a proposed plan of action for assisting workers in communities that are adversely affected by imports of steel products. Such assistance shall include retraining and relocation for former workers in the steel industry who are likely to be unable to return to employment in that industry. The plan shall be based on existing authorities for providing assistance, but shall include such recommendations for additional statutory authority as necessary to carry out the purposes of the plan.

6. Sense of Congress regarding fair import market share

The act provides the sense of Congress that the enforcement authority granted under this title should be used to ensure that the import market share for steel products in the United States is commensurate with a level which would obtain under conditions of fair, unsubsidized competition. It further provides the sense of Congress that when the national steel policy is fully implemented, it will result in an import market share in the range of 17.0-20.2 percent, subject to such modifications that changes in market conditions and the composition of the steel industry may require.

7. Sense of Congress regarding antitrust enforcement

The act provides the sense of Congress that the national policy for the steel industry should not be implemented in a manner contrary to the antitrust laws.

8. Sense of Congress regarding future legislative action

The act provides that, if the national policy for the steel industry does not produce satisfactory results within a reasonable period of time, the Congress will consider taking such legislative actions concerning steel and iron ore products as may be necessary or appropriate to stabilize conditions in the domestic market for such products.

9. Effective date

The provisions of this title on steel shall take effect on Oct. 1, 1984.

IX. PROVISIONS RELATING TO TRADE IN UNITED STATES WINE

The act requires the U.S. Trade Representative to designate major wine trading countries which are potentially significant markets for U.S. wine and which maintain tariff and nontariff barriers to (or other distortions of) U.S. wine trade. The President must direct the USTR to consult with each country to seek the reduction or elimination of these barriers or distortions. The President also is required to submit a report on each country to the House Committee on Ways and Means and the Senate Committee on Finance within 13 months of enactment of the act containing: (1) a description of each trade barrier; (2) an assessment of whether each barrier is subject to an existing trade agreement; (3) action proposed or taken to reduce or eliminate the barriers, including action under the Trade Act of 1974; (4) reasons for not taking action; and (5) recommendations to Congress on any additional authority or action considered necessary and appropriate. If the President determines that action is appropriate to respond to any unfair tariff or nontariff barrier on U.S. wine, he must take all appropriate and feasible action under the Trade Act of 1974. The act also encourages the President to initiate a wine export promotion program in cooperation with winery representatives.

(The definition of "industry" for purposes of countervailing duty and antidumping cases also was amended to include grape growers. See item 14 under Title VI, Trade Law Reform.)

H.R. 3409 (Mr. Shannon with cosponsors); Public Law 98-92; app. Sept. 2, 1983.

H.R. 3409, as amended, amends the Federal supplemental compensation program (FSC) with regard to the maximum number of FSC weeks payable in a State. The amendments provide:

1. That if the maximum number of weeks of FSC payable in a State for the week of July 24, 1983, is 4 or more weeks less than the maximum number of weeks payable in the State for the week of Mar. 27, 1983, the maximum number of weeks payable in the State for July 24, 1983, cannot be further reduced; and
2. If an individual had established an FSC account before the week of June 5, 1983, the maximum number of weeks of benefits payable to such individual cannot be more than 4 less than the maximum number of weeks payable in the State for the week of Mar. 27, 1983.

The bill was reported to the House by the Committee on Ways and Means on July 28, 1983, and passed the House on Aug. 2, 1983. The Senate passed H.R. 3409 with an amendment in the nature of a substitute on Aug. 4, 1983. The House concurred with the Senate amendment on Aug. 4, 1983. The bill was signed into law by the President on Sept. 2, 1983, as Public Law 98-92.

H.R. 3677 (Mr. Panetta and Mr. Gradison); Public Law 98-90; app. Aug. 29, 1983.

H.R. 3677 provides for a technical correction to sec. 122 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982, to clarify congressional intent as it related to the hospice "cap." The "cap" amount is specified at $6,500 and is indexed by the medical care expenditure category of the Consumer Price Index. The Committee on Ways and Means reported the bill on July 28, 1983. The House passed the measure on Aug. 1, 1983. The Senate passed the identical bill on Aug. 3, 1983.

The President signed the bill into law on Aug. 29, 1983, as Public Law 98-90.

H.R. 3755 (Mr. Pickle); Public Law 98-460; app. Oct. 9, 1984.

H.R. 3755, the Social Security Disability Benefits Reform Act of 1983, was included in H.R. 4170 (title IX), as it was reported on Oct. 21, 1983. In a hearing before the Rules Committee on Mar. 7, 1984, H.R. 4170 was amended to delete title IX. H.R. 3755 was reported to the House by the Committee on Ways and Means on Mar. 14, 1983. The bill passed the House on Mar. 27, 1984.

On May 22, 1984, H.R. 3755 passed the Senate amended. A conference report was filed on Sept. 19, 1984, and agreed to in the House and Senate on Sept. 19, 1984. H.R. 3755 was signed into law by the President on Oct. 9, 1984, as Public Law 98-460. A summary of the act follows:

1. Medical improvement standard

The act establishes a medical improvement standard under which the Secretary may terminate disability benefits on the basis that the person is no longer disabled only if

> (1) there is substantial evidence demonstrating that there has been any medical improvement in the individual's impairment or combination of impairments (other than medical improvement which is not related to the person's ability to work) and the individual is now able to engage in substantial gainful activity (SGA); or
> (2) there is substantial evidence consisting of new medical evidence and a new assessment of RFC which demonstrates that although there is no medical improvement, the person has benefited from advances in medical or vocational therapy or technology related to ability to work, and that he or she is not able to perform SGA; or
> (3) there is substantial evidence that although there is no medical improvement the person has benefited from vocational therapy and the beneficiary can now perform SGA; or
> (4) that, based on new or improved diagnostic techniques or evaluations, the person's impairment or combination of impairments is not as disabling as it was considered to be at the time of the prior determination, and that therefore the individual is able to perform SGA; or
> (5) there is substantial evidence either in the file at the original determination or newly obtained showing that the prior determination was in error or that the original decision was fraudulently obtained; or
> (6) the individual is engaging in SGA (except where he or she is eligible under sec. 1619), fails without good cause to cooperate in the review or follow prescribed treatment or cannot be located.

Effective date.—The medical improvement provision applies only with respect to the following categories:

(1) Determinations by the Secretary made after Oct. 9, 1984.

(2) Cases pending at any level of the administrative process on Oct. 9, 1984.

(3) Cases of individual litigants pending in Federal court on Sept. 19, 1984.

(4) Cases of named plaintiffs in class action suits pending on Sept. 19, 1984;

(5) Cases of unnamed plaintiffs in class action suits certified prior to Sept. 19, 1984;

(6) Cases where a request for judicial review is made on a decision of the Secretary made during the 60 days preceding Oct. 9, 1984.

Cases in categories (3), (4), (5), and (6) will be remanded to the Secretary for review under this standard. Individuals in (5) will be sent a notice via certified mail informing them that they have 120 days after the date of receipt of the notice to request a review under the medical improvement standard.

No class action may be certified after Sept. 19, 1984, which raises the issue of medical improvement with respect to an individual whose benefits were terminated prior to that date.

Persons whose cases are remanded to the Secretary will receive benefits pending the Secretary's decision and appeal of that decision if they so elect. If found eligible, any person whose case was remanded under this provision will receive benefits retroactive to the date they were last found ineligible.

2. Evaluation of pain

The Secretary of HHS is required in conjunction with the National Academy of Sciences, to conduct a study concerning the questions of using subjective evidence of pain in determining whether a person is under a disability, and the state of the art of preventing, reducing or coping with pain. This study is due to the House Committee on Ways and Means and the Senate Committee on Finance by Dec. 31, 1985.

A statutory standard is established to be in effect until Dec. 31, 1986, providing that an individual's statement as to pain or other symptoms may only be used as evidence of disability if there are medical signs and findings showing the existence of a medical impairment resulting from anatomical, physiological, or psychological abnormalities which could reasonably be expected to produce the pain, and which would lead to a conclusion that the individual is under a disability.

3. Multiple impairments

In determining whether a person's impairment or impairments are of a sufficient medical severity to be the basis of a finding of eligibility for benefits, the Secretary must consider the combined effect of all of the person's impairments, whether or not any one impairment would alone be severe enough to qualify the person for benefits.

4. Moratorium on mental impairment reviews

A moratorium is provided on reviews of all cases of mental impairment disability until the mental impairment criteria in the listing of impairments are revised to realistically evaluate the person's ability to engage in SGA in a competitive workplace environment. All persons claiming benefits based on mental impairment disability who received an unfavorable initial or continuing disability decision after Mar. 1, 1981, could reapply for benefits within 12 months of enactment.

5. Pretermination notice

The Secretary is required to initiate demonstration projects on providing face-to-face interviews for (1) pretermination continuing disability cases and (2) for all initial denial cases, in lieu of face-to-face evidentiary hearings at reconsideration, to be done in at least five States with a report due to the Committees on Ways and Means and Finance Apr. 1, 1986. The Secretary is also required to notify individuals upon initiating a periodic eligibility review that termination of benefits could be the result of the review, and that medical evidence may be provided.

6. Continuation of benefits during appeal

Provision is made for continuation of benefits during appeal for all continuing disability review cases through the decision of the administrative law judge, at the election of the individual. Where the ALJ's decision is adverse to the individual, these benefits would have to be repaid. The provision is permanent for SSI disability recipients, and will apply to title II disability beneficiaries through December 1987. The Secretary is required to report to Congress on the impact of this provision by July 1, 1986.

7. Qualifications of medical professionals

The Secretary is required to make every reasonable effort in cases based on mental impairments to insure that a qualified psychiatrist or psychologist complete the medical portion of the case review and of the residual functional capacity assessment before any determination may be made that an individual is not disabled. The act states that the Secretary has the authority to contract directly for such services if the State agency is unable to do so.

8. Standards for consultative examinations/medical evidence

The Secretary is required to promulgate regulations regarding consultative examinations, including when they should be obtained, the type of referral to be made and the procedures for monitoring the referral process. The Secretary must make every effort to obtain necessary medical evidence from any source. The Secretary must also consider all evidence in the case record and development of complete medical history over at least the preceding 12-month period.

9. Administrative procedure and uniform standards

The act requires publication of regulations setting forth uniform standards for DI and SSI disability determinations under sec. 553 of the Administrative Procedure Act, to be binding at all levels of adjudication.

10. Nonacquiescence

No statutory provision is included in the act. The act states that the agreement to drop both the House and Senate provisions is not be interpreted as approval of the practice of "nonacquiescence", that the conferees note that questions have been raised about the constitutional basis of the practice, that many of the conferees have strong concerns about the current application of the practice, and that a policy of nonacquiescence should be followed only where steps have been taken or are intended to be taken to receive a review of the disputed issue in the Supreme Court. The conferees also urge the Secretary to seek a resolution of the nonacquiescence issue in the Supreme Court.

11. Payment of costs of rehabilitation services

The act allows reimbursement to State agencies for costs of VR services provided to individuals receiving DI benefits under sec. 225(b) of the Social Security Act who medically recover while in VR, whether or not the person worked at SGA for 9 months, and whether or not the person failed to cooperate in the program.

12. Direction for quadrennial Social Security Advisory Council

The next quadrennial advisory council (as required in the Social Security Act) is directed to study the medical and vocational aspects of disability using ad hoc panels of experts where appropriate. The study must include alternative approaches to work evaluation disability program policies, standards and procedures. The Secretary must appoint the members by June 1, 1985.

13. Staff attorneys

The Secretary is to report, within 120 days of enactment, to the Committees on Ways and Means and Finance, on the actions taken by the Secretary to establish positions which enable staff attorney's to gain the qualifying experience and quality of experience necessary to compete for ALJ positions. It is assumed, given recent OPM actions, that statutory requirements for establishing specific positions are not required, and that the Secretary is urged to take all reasonable steps to see that the OPM actions result in SSA staff attorneys becoming qualified for GS-15 ALJ positions.

14. SSI benefits for persons working despite impairment

Secs. 1619 (a) and (b) are extended through June 30, 1987, and requires the Secretaries of HHS and Education to establish training programs for staff personnel in SSA district offices and State VR agencies, and disseminate information to SSI applicants, recipients, and potentially interested public and private organizations. This provision is effective retroactive to Jan. 1, 1984.

15. Frequency of continuing eligibility reviews

The Secretary is required to promulgate regulations establishing standards for determining the frequency of continuing eligibility reviews. Final regulations must be issued within 6 months; until that time, no individual may be subject to more than one periodic review.

16. Representative payees for Social Security and SSI beneficiaries

The Secretary is required to (1) evaluate qualifications of prospective payees prior to or within 45 days following certification, (2) establish a system of annual accountability monitoring where payments are made to someone other than a parent or spouse living in the same household with the beneficiary, and (3) report to Congress on implementation and annually on the number of cases of misused funds and disposition of such cases.

17. Measures to improve compliance with Federal law

The Secretary is required to federalize disability determinations in a State within 6 months of finding that a State is not in substantial compliance with Federal law and standards. Such a finding must be made within 16 weeks of the time a State's failure to comply first comes to the attention of the Secretary, during which period a hearing could be afforded to the State. The Secretary is directed to comply with current law requirements protecting employment of current State employees to the extent feasible, and is directed in order to accomplish that end, to exceed any applicable personnel ceilings and to waive any applicable hiring restrictions. The Secretary is directed to give preference in hiring to agency employees capable of performing the requisite duties.

H.R. 3795 (Mr. Coelho with cosponsors); passed House Oct. 3, 1984. (See Public Law 98-573 (H.R. 3398).)

H.R. 3795, the Wine Equity and Export Expansion Act of 1984, as amended, was reported to the House by the Committee on Ways and Means on Sept. 27, 1984, and passed the House on Oct. 3, 1984. As passed by the House, H.R. 3795 includes provisions to encourage greater equity in international wine trade and expansion of U.S. wine exports as described below.

The bill lists various findings concerning economic factors affecting the competitiveness of the U.S. wine and grape product industries, including restrictive foreign barriers to U.S. wine exports. The purposes of the bill are to expand wine consumer choice, to encourage wine promotion, and to achieve greater foreign market access for U.S. wine.

The bill requires the U.S. Trade Representative to designate major wine trading countries which are significant potential markets for U.S. wine and maintain tariff and nontariff barriers to (or other distortions of) U.S. wine trade.

The bill requires the following actions by the President:

The President must direct the USTR to consult with each country to seek reduction or elimination of its barriers to or other distortions of trade in U.S. wine.

The President must submit a report to the House Committee on Ways and Means and the Senate Committee on Finance within 13 months after the date of enactment on each country concerning efforts to expand wine exports during the previous year and since his 1982 report to Congress on wine trade barriers. Each report would include: (1) a description of each trade barrier, including its operation and legal basis; (2) an assessment of the extent each barrier is subject to a trade agreement; (3) action taken or proposed under existing authority to eliminate or reduce the barrier, such as action under sec. 301 of the Trade Act of 1974, and negotiations or consultations; (4) reasons for not taking such action; and (5) recommendations to Congress on any additional authority or action necessary and appropriate.

If the President has reason to believe a barrier to, or other distortion of, trade in U.S. wine is a violation of or inconsistent with a trade agreement or is unjustifiable, unreasonable, or discriminatory and burdens or restricts U.S. commerce, he must take action under sec. 301, if he determines such action is appropriate.

The bill requires the USTR to consult with representatives of the wine and grape products industries and with the House Committee on Ways and Means and the Senate Committee on Finance on identifying countries and trade barriers, on preparing the report, and on whether sec. 301 action is appropriate.

The bill encourages the President to use fiscal year 1985 funds under sec. 135 of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1982 to initiate a wine export promotion program in cooperation with winery representatives, and to request an appropriation each following year for the program which is not at the expense of requests for promotion of other agricultural commodities.

The bill amends sec. 771 of the Tariff Act of 1930 to provide that the domestic industry for purposes of countervailing duty or antidumping investigations on wine and grape products, shall include producers of the principal raw agricultural product, if they allege material injury or threat thereof, as well as the producers of wine and grape products.

Public Law 98-573 (H.R. 3398), signed into law on Oct. 30, 1984, includes H.R. 3795 as it passed the House of Representatives.

H.R. 3813 (Mr. Guarini and Mr. Frenzel); Public Law 98–120; app. Oct. 12, 1983.

H.R. 3813 as enacted into law, amends the International Coffee Agreement Act of 1980, by extending until Oct. 1, 1986, the President's authority to implement the International Coffee Agreement.

H.R. 3813 was reported to the House on Sept. 22, 1983, and passed the House on Sept. 27, 1983. The bill extended the President's authority to implement the International Coffee Agreement through October 1985. The Senate reported the bill on Sept. 28, 1983, and passed it on Sept. 30, 1983, with an amendment which would extend the President's authority to implement the International Coffee Agreement through October 1986 and also extended the trade adjustment assistance program for workers and firms through 1985. On Sept. 30, 1983, the House agreed to the Senate amendment and the bill was signed into law by the President on Oct. 12, 1983, as Public Law 98-120.

H.R. 3929 (Mr. Rostenkowski); Public Law 98-135; app. Oct. 24, 1983.

H.R. 3929, extension of the Federal supplemental compensation program, was reported to the House on Sept. 22, 1983, and passed the House on Sept. 29. The Senate passed the bill amended, and requested a conference on Sept. 30, 1983. On the same day the House disagreed to the Senate amendments and agreed to a conference. The conference report was agreed to in both the House and Senate on Oct. 21, 1983. H.R. 3929 was signed into law by the President on Oct. 24, 1983, as Public Law 98-135. A summary follows:

1. Extension of Federal supplemental compensation (FSC) program

1. The FSC program, with modifications, is extended effective from the week of Oct. 24, 1983, through the week of Mar. 31, 1985. (Public Law 98-118, H.R. 4101, extended the current FSC program for 3 weeks, from Sept. 30, 1983, through the week of Oct. 16, 1983.)

2. Basic FSC benefits.—The maximum number of basic weeks of FSC payable in the States will range from 8 to 14 weeks. The maximum in each State will be determined by the State's moving 13 week average insured unemployment rate (IUR), as determined in the current extended benefit and FSC programs, or the State's cumulative average IUR since Jan. 1, 1982, and through the second preceding calendar quarter. (To determine basic FSC weeks payable the week of Oct. 23, 1983, the first week of this extension, the cumulative average IUR will include the weeks of Jan. 1, 1982, through June 1983.)

A maximum of:

(a) 14 weeks will be payable in States with a moving 13 week average insured unemployment rate (IUR) of at least 6.0 percent or a cumulative average IUR since Jan. 1, 1982, of at least 5.5 percent.

(b) 12 weeks will be payable in States with a moving 13 week average IUR 5.0 to 5.9 percent or a cumulative average IUR since Jan. 1, 1982, of 4.5 to 5.4 percent.

(c) 10 weeks will be payable in States with a moving 13 week average IUR 4.0 to 4.9 percent.

(d) 8 weeks will be payable in all other States.

Unemployed workers who first apply for FSC benefits for or after the week of Oct. 23, 1983, will receive weeks of FSC benefits equal to 55 percent of the number of weeks of regular State unemployment benefits they received, up to the maximum number of basic FSC benefits payable in the State in the week in which they first file their claims.

There will be no adjustment, or tiering up or down, in the basic FSC entitlement of individuals who are receiving or who exhaust benefits before the week of Oct. 23, 1983. The basic FSC entitlement of these individuals will remain at the level established under the law in effect the week of Oct. 16, 1983.

3. Reach-back and transitional benefits.—Individuals who first became eligible for FSC between Apr. 1, 1983, and the week of Oct. 23, 1983, could receive the following amounts of reach-back or transitional benefits:

(a) a maximum of 5 weeks of reach-back benefits would be paid to individuals who exhaust FSC benefits before the week of Oct. 23, 1983;

(b) a maximum of 4 weeks of transitional benefits in 12 and 14 basic week States, and 2 weeks of transitional benefits in 8 and 10 basic week States, would be paid to individuals who, under current law, are eligible for FSC benefits the week of Oct. 16, and subsequent weeks.

However, individuals who qualify for reach-back or transitional weeks cannot receive more weeks of FSC benefits after Oct. 23, 1983, than the maximum number of basic weeks of FSC payable in the State as of that date.

4. Limitation on reduction of basic weeks payable in a State.—Beginning with the week of Oct. 23, 1983, (a) the maximum number of basic weeks payable in a State will be adjusted (up or down) no more frequently than every 13 weeks; and (b) a single adjustment shall not exceed 2 weeks.

5. Limitation on reduction of FSC weeks payable to individuals.—Beginning with the week of Oct. 23, 1983, individuals will continue to be eligible for the number of FSC weeks to which they were entitled at the time they first qualified for FSC, regardless of changes (up or down) in the number of basic weeks payable in the State. As under current law, an individual who makes an interstate claim for FSC benefits will receive the lesser of (a) the number of weeks of FSC payable in the State in which he receives the benefits or (b) the maximum number of weeks payable in his or her former State.

6. Phase-out of FSC benefits.—No provision.

2. Treatment of payments to estates of deceased individuals

Under the current law, Federal social security taxes (FICA) are not imposed on payments by employers to survivors or the estates of deceased individuals. However, such payments are subject to Federal unemployment taxes (FUTA).

Under the act, with regard to payments made by employers to the estates or survivors of deceased individuals, the Federal unemployment tax (FUTA) definition of taxable wages is conformed with the current social security tax (FICA) definition. As with social security taxes, Federal unemployment taxes will no longer be imposed on such payments after the calendar year in which the individual died.

3. Treatment of certain alien farmworkers

Under the Immigration and Nationality Act, residents of foreign countries who do not intend to abandon such residency may be admitted to the United States to work for a temporary period of time during peak agricultural crop seasons. Until Jan. 1, 1984, wages paid to such alien farmworkers were excluded from Federal unemployment taxes (FUTA).

The act extends for 2 years—from Jan. 1, 1984, to Jan. 1, 1986—the provision of current law that excludes wages paid to certain alien farmworkers from FUTA taxes.

4. Reports from Department of Labor

The act requires the Department of Labor to submit reports to Congress no later than Apr. 1, 1984, on (a) the feasibility of targeting FSC benefits to substate areas on the basis of unemployment levels in such substate areas; and (b) the feasibility of indentifying "structurally" unemployed workers at the time they claim unemployment compensation benefits.

5. Increase in title XX social service funds

Under current law, the title XX funding levels are:

Fiscal year 1983—$2,675 billion (including $225 million appropriated on a temporary basis in the emergency jobs bill);
Fiscal year 1984—$2.5 billion;
Fiscal year 1985—$2.6 billion;
Fiscal year 1986 and subsequent years—$2.7 billion.

The act provides that the title XX ceiling will be increased to $2.7 billion for fiscal year 1984 and subsequent fiscal years. States are to use a portion of the additional title XX funds for services that address problems related to unemployment and, to the extent feasible, direct these funds to areas within the State with the highest levels of unemployment.

6. Direct repayment of general revenue advances

Title XII of the Social Security Act authorizes advances from general revenues to the Federal Unemployment Account (FUA) of the unemployment trust fund. This is the account from which loans are made to the States and to which repayments of those loans are credited. Such advances may be repaid only if: (1) the FUA exceeds its statutory limit at the end of a fiscal year and (2) the employment security account (ESA) exceeds its statutory end-of-year limit. The law requires any excess from FUA to be transferred directly to the extended unemployment compensation account (EUCA) from which general revenue advances may be repaid.

The act allows for direct repayment of general revenue advances from the State loan account in the unemployment trust fund, if the Secretary of Labor and the Secretary of the Treasury determine that adequate funds are available in the account for such purpose. This would ultimately allow for the full repayment of all outstanding general revenue advances to the FUA account. The act also requires that any amounts which may have already been transferred under the prior law provisions are to be transferred back to the Federal Unemployment Account upon enactment.

7. Report on efforts to prevent incorrect unemployment compensation payments to retirees and prisoners

The act requires the Secretary of Labor, the Attorney General, and the Director of the Office of Personnel Management to make available to the States such information about Federal employees, retirees, and prisoners as may be useful in determining unemployment eligibility. The Secretary of Labor is also directed to issue a report to Congress which will detail the actions taken and other steps which could be taken to ensure that unemployment benefits are not paid to certain retired individuals or prisoners. The report should include recommendations for further legislation which might be necessary to aid in preventing such incorrect payments. The report must be submitted to Congress by Jan. 31, 1984.

8. Mansfield Foundation authorization

The act authorizes an appropriation of not more than $5,000,000 to the Department of Education for assistance to the Maureen and Mike Mansfield Foundation in developing the Mansfield Center for Public Affairs and the Maureen and Mike Mansfield Center at the University of Montana.

H.R. 4101 (Mr. Rostenkowski); Public Law 98-118; app. Oct. 11, 1983.

H.R. 4101, a bill to extend the Federal Supplemental Compensation Act of 1982, was introduced and referred to the Committee on Ways and Means on Oct. 6, 1983. The committee was discharged and the bill was considered and passed in both the House and Senate on Oct. 6, 1983. H.R. 4101 was signed into law by the President on Oct. 11, 1983, as Public Law 98-118. A summary follows:

1. Extension of Federal supplemental compensation (FSC) program

Under the current FSC program, which first became effective on Sept. 12, 1982, and, under provisions of Public Law 98-118, expired Oct. 19, 1983, additional weeks of Federally financed unemployment compensation benefits were provided to jobless workers who had exhausted all other State and Federal unemployment benefits. The number of weeks of FSC benefits that jobless workers could receive depended on (a) the number of weeks of State unemployment benefits received by each claimant, and (b) the State in which the claimant qualified for or received the benefits.

As originally enacted, the FSC program provided, depending upon State insured unemployment rates (IUR), a maximum of 10, 8, or 6 additional weeks of benefits.

As amended by provisions contained in the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982 (Public Law 97-424), beginning with the week of Jan. 9, 1983, the FSC program provided the following maximum weeks of benefits through Mar. 31, 1983:

(1) 16 weeks in States with an average insured unemployment rate (IUR) of at least 6.0 percent;

(2) 14 weeks in States that were triggered on the extended benefits program between June 1, 1982, and Jan. 6, 1983;

(3) 12 weeks in the remaining States that have an average IUR of at least 4.5 percent.

(4) 10 weeks in the remaining States that have an average IUR between 3.5 and 4.5 percent; and

(5) 8 weeks for all other States.

As amended by provisions contained in the Social Security Amendments of 1983 (Public Law 98-21), as of Apr. 1, 1983, the FSC program provided the following maximum weeks of benefits through Sept. 30, 1983:

(a) Basic FSC benefits.—For individuals who began receiving FSC on or after Apr. 1, 1983:

(1) 14 weeks in States with average IUR 6.0 percent and above;
(2) 12 weeks in States with average IUR 5.0 to 5.9 percent;
(3) 10 weeks in States with average IUR 4.0 to 4.9 percent;
(4) 8 weeks in all other States.

(b) Reach-back benefits.—Individuals who had exhausted or were receiving FSC as of Apr. 1, 1983, could receive additional weeks equal to three-fourths of the basic FSC entitlement payable in the State, up to a maximum of:

(1) 10 weeks in the 14 basic week States (average IUR 6.0 percent or above);

(2) 8 weeks in the 12 and 10 basic week States (average IUR 4.0 to 5.9 percent);

(3) 6 weeks in the 8 basic week States (average IUR below 4.0 percent).

However, for individuals who began receiving FSC before Apr. 1, 1983, and had some FSC entitlement remaining after that date, the combination of their remaining basic FSC entitlement received after Apr. 1, 1983, and the reach-back weeks could not exceed the maximum number of weeks of basic FSC benefits payable in the State.

Under Public Law 98-21, the FSC program would have ended on Sept. 30, 1983. Public Law 98-118 extended the program for 3 weeks, from Sept. 30, 1983, through the week of Oct. 16, 1983. (Public Law 98-135 provides an 18 month extension of a modified FSC program. The summary of Public Law 98-135 (H.R. 3929) provides an explanation of the FSC program as modified and extended until Mar. 31, 1985.)

2. Extension of provisions relating to dependent children voluntarily placed in foster care

The Adoption Assistance and Child Welfare Act of 1983 (Public Law 96-272) included a provision authorizing Federal matching on a temporary basis for payments made on behalf of children voluntarily placed in foster care. The statute provides that, in those States that have implemented specified foster care protections and procedures, Federal foster care matching funds are available until Sept. 30, 1983 for children who have been voluntarily removed from their home (without a judicial determination), if such removal is pursuant to a voluntary placement agreement. The voluntary placement agreement must be revocable on the part of the parent unless the child welfare agency objects and obtains a judicial determination that the return of the child to the home would not be in the best interests of the child. There must be a judicial determination of a voluntary placement within 6 months to the effect that such placement is in the best interests of the child. The Secretary of Health and Human Services must report annually to the Congress on the number of children placed under this provision.

Public Law 98-118 extends the voluntary placement provision for 1 year, to Sept. 30, 1984.

3. Cash-flow unemployment loans

Although interest is now generally charged on advances made by the Federal unemployment trust funds to enable States to meet shortfalls in their State unemployment accounts, an exception is made when the advances are solely for cash flow purposes and are entirely repaid by September 30 of the year in which they are taken out. To qualify for an interest-free cash flow advance, the State must repay the advance entirely by September and must not take out a new advance after the earlier advance is repaid. This has been interpreted to mean that a State which takes out and repays an advance early in the year cannot take out another advance without losing the interest-free status of both loans even though the full amount is repaid by September 30. (However, a State could avoid this situation by simply not repaying the entire series of advances until September 30.)

The act clarifies the statute so that advances received by States in the first 9 months of the year would be considered in the aggregate. Thus an advance or series of advances made during that part of the year would be interest free if all such advances are fully repaid by September 30 and no further advance is taken out during the remainder of that year.

4. Extension of period of continuing payment of social security disability benefits during appeal

Public Law 97-455, passed by Congress in December 1982, included a provision to allow beneficiaries whose benefits had been ceased because of a medical review of their eligibility to elect to continue receiving benefits until an Administrative Law Judge has rendered a decision on the case. If the case is denied, then the benefits, except for medicare, are subject to recoupment (subject to the waiver standards already in law). This provision expired Oct. 1, 1983.

Public Law 98-118 extended the provision until Dec. 8, 1983.

5. Two-year delay in social security treatment of salaries of senior status judges

Under a provision enacted in the Social Security Amendments of 1983 (sec. 101(c)), the compensation of Federal judges in senior status will be considered, for any period in which they perform judicial duties, as earnings for purposes of the social security tax and retirement-earnings test, effective Jan. 1, 1984.

The act delays for 2 years the effective date of sec. 101(c) of the Social Security Amendments of 1983.

H.R. 4170 (Mr. Rostenkowski with cosponsors); Public Law 98-369; app. July 18, 1984.

H.R. 4170, the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984, includes both revenue increase and spending reduction provisions.

H.R. 4170, the Tax Reform Act of 1984, as introduced, was reported by the Committee on Ways and Means on Oct. 21, 1983. As reported, the bill consisted of 11 titles, which were previously ordered reported by the committee as individual bills or separate provisions on July 26-27, Oct. 4-6, and 18-19, 1983.

As reported by the committee, the bill included the following titles:

Title I—The Tax Exempt Entity Leasing Act of 1983 (H.R. 3110, as amended)

Generally, this title reduced the tax benefits available for certain property that is leased to or otherwise used by tax-exempt entities.

Title II—The Life Insurance Tax Act of 1983 (H.R. 4065, as amended)

In lieu of the present law three-phase pattern of taxation, the bill provided a new single-phase structure. The bill also revised rules for the taxation of life insurance products and allowed nondeductible contributions to an individual retirement account.

Title III—The Private Foundation Tax Treatment Revision Act of 1983 (report and recommendations of the Subcommittee on Oversight, with amendments)

This title modified rules principally enacted in the Tax Reform Act of 1969, for the tax treatment of private foundations and charitable contributions to foundations.

Title IV—The Tax Law Simplification and Improvement Act of 1983 (H.R. 3475, as amended, including H.R. 3592 and H.R. 3593, as amended)

Title IV simplified and clarified estimated income tax rules, domestic relations taxation, prior law at-risk rules, charitable split-interest trust rules, and certain foreign tax provisions, including the definition of resident alien, foreign personal holding company rules, treatment of disposition of certain controlled foreign corporation interests, and the tax consequences of stapled stock. The title also included various Tax Court provisions, simplification of income tax credits, and miscellaneous provisions, including rollover of certain partial distributions of qualified plans, treatment of certain related party transactions, perferred stock treatment, medical expense deduction for certain lodging, repeal of obsolete provisions, and a study of a gross income tax.

Title V—The Permanent Tax Treatment of Fringe Benefits Act of 1983 (H.R. 3525, as amended)

Title V provided that certain fringe benefits provided by an employer are excluded from the recipient employee's gross income for Federal income tax purposes and from the wage and benefit base for purposes of social security and other employment taxes.

Title VI—The Technical Corrections Act of 1983 (H.R. 3805, as amended)

Title VI contained technical, clerical, conforming, and clarifying amendments to provisions enacted by the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982, the Subchapter S Revision Act of 1982, the Highway Revenue Act of 1982, the Social Security Amendments of 1983, and other recently enacted legislation.

Title VII—The Tax-Exempt Bond Limitation Act of 1983 (including H.R. 2504, as amended)

This title postponed the sunset date for mortgage subsidy bonds for 5 years, to Dec. 31, 1988, and modified various mortgage subsidy bond rules. The bill permitted State and local governments to elect to issue mortgage credit certificates instead of mortgage subsidy bonds. Title VII also provided State-by-State volume caps ($150 per capita) for private purpose bonds and restrictions on the use of industrial development bonds.

Title VIII—Miscellaneous revenue provisions (H.R. 699, H.R. 2476, H.R. 2831, H.R. 3096, and H.R. 3173, as amended)

In general, the bill provided that a taxpayer can elect to treat a portion of the gain realized on the sale or exchange of condominium units created in the conversion of qualified real property into condominium units as capital gain. Title VIII provided that no gain would be recognized from net gifts made before Mar. 31, 1981, and allowed a disaster loss deduction where the taxpayer is ordered to demolish or relocate his or her residence in a disaster area because of disaster. The bill also provided rules for offshore commodity funds, corporations formed to straddle, and the application of cash or deferred arrangement rules to pre-ERISA money purchase pension plans.

Title IX—The Social Security Disability Benefits Reform Act of 1983 (H.R. 3755, as amended) i77 Title IX provided standards for evaluation of disability, required the continuation of benefits for certain individuals, provided for a number of major changes in the disability administrative process, and made numerous miscellaneous revisions.

Title X—The Medicare Budget Reconciliation Amendments of 1983

The bill required the Secretary of Health and Human Services to issue guidelines regarding pacemakers, established a fee schedule for certain clinical laboratory services, modified medicare coverage of certain services, and revised miscellaneous other medicare provisions.

The committee agreed to the following committee amendment to the committee bill:

Prevailing charges for physicians' services provided to hospital inpatients would be frozen at the June 30, 1983, level, effective Jan. 1, 1984, through June 30, 1984. Physicians would be required to accept medicare assignment for all services provided to medicare hospital inpatients until 6 months after the Congress receives the Secretary of HHS's report on including physician payments under the DRG progressive payment system, which under the bill would be due by July 1, 1985. To participate in medicare, each hospital would be required to obtain from each doctor on its medical staff an agreement to accept assignment for any medicare inpatient services rendered in the hospital.

Title XI—Amendments to trade adjustment assistance programs

The bill contained provisions enabling workers to collect additional weeks of trade readjustment allowances, increasing the maximum job search allowance, and extending eligibility for and increasing the amount of industry-wide technical assistance.

COMMITTEE AMENDMENTS OF NOVEMBER 1983

On Nov. 16, 1983, the committee agreed to three amendments to be offered as committee amendments. The amendments are as follows:

1. Technical committee amendment

The committee approved an amendment which included mainly technical provisions for the purpose of perfecting various provisions of H.R. 4170. The committee amendment would insure that the committee's intent, the explanation in the committee report, and the actual statutory language are consistent. The amendment contained corrections in printing errors, incorrect citations, language usage, cross-references, and similar clarifications. The only nontechnical provision in the amendment would delete sec. 1002 of the bill relating to the medicare part B premium.

2. Tax-exempt bonds committee amendment

The committee approved an amendment which would make the following modifications to the tax-exempt bond provisions (Title VII) of H.R. 4170:

A. The $150 per capita volume cap would be modified by—

(a) Exempting all multifamily rental housing from the cap, and

(b) Correcting a drafting error to clarify that the reduction in the cap to $100 to reflect the sunset of small issue IDB's applies after 1986.

B. Arbitrage rules would be modified—

(a) Exempting multifamily rental housing entirely from the bill's arbitrage rules, and

(b) Delaying the effective date of the rules as they apply to student loan bonds until Jan. 1, 1986. Refunding of student loan bonds issued prior to Jan. 1, 1986, would be allowed on or after Jan. 1, 1986, to the extent the entire term of the refunding issue and the refunded issue does not exceed 15 years.

C. The rules relating to Federal guarantees would be modified by—

(a) Exempting guarantees for rental housing and owner-occupied housing,

(b) Allowing loans to lenders programs to continue, and

(c) Clarifying that the District of Columbia or a U.S. possession is not covered by the rule with respect to their nonprivate purpose obligations because of their ability to borrow from the United States.

D. The rules prohibiting use of IDB's to finance land or existing facilities would be modified by—

(a) Allowing the use of IDB's to purchase land if no more than 25 percent of the bond proceeds are used to purchase nonagricultural land, and

(b) Allowing the use of IDB's to purchase existing nonagricultural facilities if expenditures are made in an amount equal to at least 15 percent of the purchase price of the existing facilities for rehabilitation of an existing building purchased as part of the existing facilities.

3. Miscellaneous committee amendment

The committee approved an amendment to H.R. 4170 incorporating several miscellaneous bills. The committee amendment included the following provisions.

A. Effective date for NOL carryovers.—The effective date of the 1976 Tax Reform Act revisions to Code secs. 382 and 383 relating to the carryover of corporate net operating losses and other tax attributes in taxable acquisitions and tax-free reorganizations would be postponed until Nov. 1, 1984.

B. Payment-in-kind (PIK) program rules.—The favorable tax treatment accorded participants in the 1983 payment-in-kind program would be extended to participants in the 1984 PIK wheat program. For income tax purposes, however, the favorable treatment would apply only for up to $50,000 (less cash payments received under USDA acreage reduction programs) of PIK commodities, if it is determined in a proceeding to be brought by the Comptroller General in U.S. District Court, that the $50,000 limitation of the Agriculture and Food Act of 1981 applies to PIK payments.

C. Effective date for 1978 provision relating to unemployment benefits.—The effective date of the Revenue Act of 1978 provision relating to the inclusion in income of certain unemployment compensation benefits would be modified to exclude from income post-1978 payments of unemployment benefits for weeks of unemployment ending prior to Dec. 1, 1978.

D. U.S. military and civilian employees killed overseas.—An exemption from tax would be provided (for certain years) for the income of military or civilian employees of the United States Government who die (after 1979) as a result of wounds or injury incurred outside the United States in terroristic or military action against the United States or its allies.

E. Traveling expenses at Nekoma, N. Dak., missile site.—The provision would authorize tax refunds attributable to deducting certain travel expenses incurred during 1970-74 in connection with employment at the anti-ballistic missile site near Nekoma, N.Dak.

F. Tuition reduction for graduate study by teaching assistants.—An exclusion from income would be provided for the value of certain tuition reductions for graduate study (after June 30, 1984) provided by a college or university to its teaching or research associates or assistants.

G. Relief for winner of residence for handicapped child.—Under certain conditions, relief would be provided from interest and penalties assessed or collected with respect to tax attributable to a home won in a local radio contest and specially designed for a handicapped foster child of the taxpayer.

The committee estimated that the tax provisions of H.R. 4170, as reported, increased fiscal year revenue by $2.3 billion in 1984, $2.3 billion in 1985, $3.4 billion in 1986, $5.2 billion in 1987, and $7.1 billion in 1988 for a total increase of $20.4 billion over the period. The spending provisions were estimated to decrease fiscal year revenues by $0.1 billion in 1984, $0.3 billion in 1985, $0.8 billion in 1986, $1.4 billion in 1987, and $2.3 billion in 1988 for a loss of $4.8 billion over the period.

On Nov. 16, 1983, the House Rules Committee granted a modified open rule (H.Res. 376) for consideration of H.R. 4170. H.Res. 376 failed of passage on Nov. 17, 1983.

COMMITTEE AMENDMENTS OF MARCH 1984

On Mar. 1, 1984, the Committee on Ways and Means approved a committee amendment as a substitute for H.R. 4170 as originally reported. The committee filed a supplemental report on its amendment on Mar. 5, 1984.

The committee amendment generally incorporated all of the major provisions of the 1983 bill, including the modifications made in November. In addition, the committee amendment contained several "tax freeze" items in title I, as follows:

The bill deferred, through 1987, scheduled increases in (1) the foreign earned income exclusion; (2) expensing of business personal property; (3) the used property investment credit limitation; (4) limits on contributions to and benefits from certain pension plans; and (5) the tax credit for employer contributions to an employee stock ownership plan.

The bill deferred, through 1987, scheduled decreases in (1) the top estate and gift tax rate; (2) the windfall profit tax rate on newly discovered oil (percentage depletion is continued for secondary and tertiary production); and (3) the telephone excise tax rate.

The bill extended the cigarette excise tax at 12 cents per pack (under prior law it was scheduled to revert from 16 cents to 8 cents per pack) from Oct. 1, 1985, through Dec. 31, 1987, and increased the $10.50/proof gallon distilled spirits excise tax to $14.25/proof gallon from Oct. 1, 1985, through Dec. 31, 1987. The bill liberalized finance leasing rules through 1987, and repealed the net interest exclusion.

Besides including the Tax-Exempt Entity Leasing Act, title I of the committee amendment also contained numerous tax reform provisions. Title I revised the taxation of original issue discounts and market discounts; restricted tax shelter opportunities from certain dividends received by corporations, royalty trusts, stock warrants, stock for debt exchanges, corporate debt distributions, and other unintended corporate tax benefits; delayed the 1976 Act's limitations on net operating loss carryovers; restricted the use of tax shelter partnerships; revised the treatment of losses on mutual fund stock; limited the use of multiple trusts to reduce tax; and revised the treatment of trust distributions. Title I corrected accounting abuses by revising rules for timing and measurement of deferred interest payments, premature accruals, and prepaid expenses; limiting deferred like-kind exchanges; providing for LIFO conformity and for inclusion of tax benefit items; providing rules for tax treatment of low-interest loans; and modifying income averaging provisions. The bill restricted the use of tax straddles on stock options and similar products. Title I also set limits on prefunding of certain insurance-related benefits in voluntary employee benefit organizations; provided a statutory nondiscrimination standard for certain employee benefit organizations; clarified the nondiscrimination rules for certain deferred compensation plans; and limited vacation pay accruals.

The committee substitute restricted unintended tax benefits in the foreign area by providing rules relating to factoring income; transfers of appreciated property to foreign corporations; and exchanges of stock between a controlled foreign corporation and its U.S. parent. Title I prevented relabeling of U.S. income as foreign income and foreign interest income as dividend income; restricted use of U.S. territories to avoid U.S. tax; provided sourcing rules for certain transportation income; and addressed foreign collapsible corporations. Title I also increased the penalty for promoting abusive tax shelters and provided additional reporting requirements for certain transactions as well as new rules governing fraudulent appraisers.

The committee amendment contained titles II through XI of the 19883 bill, amended as noted above. In addition, the committee amendment included a new title XII, highway revenue provisions. Title XII reduced the heavy vehicle use tax from a maximum of $1,900 under prior law to $500 and applied this tax only to trucks over 55,000 pounds in weight. Also, title XII increased the diesel fuel tax by 5.5 cents to 14.5 cents per gallon and provided a rebate for vehicles weighing 10,000 or less.

The committee estimated that the tax provisions of the committee amendment to H.R. 4170 increased net budget receipts by $2.0 billion, $9.2 billion, $16.7 billion, and $21.3 billion in fiscal years 1984–87 respectively, for an increase of $49.2 billion during those fiscal years.

On Mar. 7, 1984, the House Rules Committee granted a modified closed rule on H.R. 4170, making the Ways and Means Committee amendment (without the three nontax titles) in order as a substitute for H.R. 4170 as originally reported (H.Res. 462). Under this rule, title XII (the highway tax provisons) became title IX. The House adopted the rule on Apr. 11, 1984, and passed the bill with the committee amendments, including a technical amendment, the same day.

SENATE ACTION

The Senate substituted the provisions of H.R. 2163, as amended by revenue provisions and spending-related provisions, as an amendment to H.R. 4170, on May 17, 1984. The Senate Committee on Finance had reported H.R. 2163 on Nov. 15, 1983, substituting miscellaneous trade and tariff matters from S. 230, S. 453, and S. 759 for the House-passed revenue provisions.

On Apr. 2, 1984, the Senate Finance Committee printed an explanation and statutory language of a deficit reduction proposal it had approved on Mar. 21, 1984. The deficit reduction proposal included the revenue and spending provisions of S. 2062, with further amendments, as well as new provisions. The deficit reduction proposal was considered as a floor amendment to H.R. 2163. The amendment, as amended by the Senate floor amendments, was approved on Apr. 12, 1984. The Senate continued floor debate on spending related amendments to H.R. 2163 through May 17, 1984.

As passed by the Senate, H.R. 4170 included many provisions similar or identical to those passed by the House of Representatives.

The Senate bill also addressed tax reform. The Senate bill omitted numerous tax reform, or simplification provisions adopted by the House. The Senate did not include any medicare provisions. Some of the numerous provisions included only in the Senate bill are phase-out of the 30 percent withholding on portfolio interest to foreign investors; decrease to 6 months in the holding period for long-term capital gain treatment and a decrease in the capital loss offset against ordinary income; the substitution of Foreign Sales Corporations for Domestic International Sales Corporations; spousal individual retirement accounts; extension and expansion of various income tax credits (e.g. energy tax credits, research tax credit).

As passed by the Senate, the tax provisions of H.R. 4170 were estimated to increase fiscal year revenue by $2.2 billion in 1984, $10.8 billion in 1985, $15.9 billion in 1986, $18.8 billion in 1987, $18.9 billion in 1988, and $19.4 billion in 1989, for a total of $47.6 billion for the period.

The Senate requested a conference on May 17, 1984. The House agreed to the Senate amendment with an amendment and agreed to a conference on May 23, 1984. The Senate disagreed to the House amendment to the Senate amendment to H.R. 4170 providing for certain spending reductions and revenue increases, and reducing deficits by including reconciliations and appropriations caps for defense and nondefense discretionary spending for fiscal years 1985–87, and agreed to a conference on May 24, 1984. On May 24, 1984, the House disagreed to the Senate amendment to the title to H.R. 4170, and insisted on its disagreement to said amendment. The conference report was filed on June 25, 1984, and agreed to in both the House and Senate on June 27, 1984. The House passed H.Con.Res. 328, correcting enrolling errors on June 27, 1984. The Senate amended the resolution and passed it on June 29, 1984. The House agreed to the Senate amendment on June 29, 1984. The bill was signed into law by the President on July 18, 1984, as Public Law 98–369.

SUMMARY OF PUBLIC LAW 98–369, THE DEFICIT REDUCTION ACT OF 1984 (PROVISIONS WITHIN THE JURISDICTION OF THE COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS)

TAX PROVISIONS

I. TAX FREEZE; TAX REFORMS GENERALLY

A. TAX FREEZE AND RELATED PROVISIONS

1. Investment credit for used property

Under prior law, the maximum amount of used property eligible for the investment credit was scheduled to increase from $125,000 to $150,000 in 1985. The act freezes the amount eligible for the credit at $125,000 through 1987, after which this limit increases to $150,000.

2. Finance leasing

Under prior law, liberalized leasing rules for agreements relating to limited use property or containing fixed price purchase options became effective on Jan. 1, 1984. The act postpones that effective date for 4 years. Prior to the new effective date, present liberalized leasing rules are allowed for certain cogeneration facilities and automotive manufacturing property and are continued for up to $150,000 of farm equipment per lessee. In addition, general transitional rules are provided.

3. Expensing of business personal property

Under prior law, the amount of personal property which businesses may elect to expense each year was scheduled to increase from $5,000 in 1983 to $7,500 in 1984 and 1985 and to $10,000 thereafter. The act freezes the maximum amount that can be expensed at $5,000 through 1987, increasing it to $7,500 in 1988 and 1989 and $10,000 thereafter.

4. Cost-of-living adjustments in pension plan limitations

TEFRA reduced the overall dollar limits on contributions and benefits under qualified pension, profit-sharing, and stock bonus plans (qualified plans). In addition, TEFRA suspended all cost-of-living adjustments to these dollar limits through 1985. Beginning in 1986, the limits will be adjusted for post-1984 cost-of-living increases under the formula then in effect to provide cost-of-living increases in social security benefits.

Under the act, cost-of-living adjustments are postponed until 1988.

5. Net interest exclusion

Under prior law, starting in 1985, individuals could exclude percent of interest income to the extent such income exceeds certain interest deductions, up to a maximum exclusion of $450 for single persons and $900 for married couples. The act repeals this net interest exclusion.

6. Foreign earned income exclusion

Under prior law, the maximum amount of income earned abroad that is excludible from an individual's taxable income was $80,000 for 1983. This amount is scheduled to increase in $5,000 annual increments to a permanent level of $95,000 in 1986. The act freezes the amount of the exclusion at $80,000 through 1987 and thereafter increases it annually in $5,000 increments to $95,000 by 1990.

7. Maximum estate and gift tax rate

Under prior law, the maximum estate and gift tax rate was 55 percent in 1984 and was scheduled to decline to 50 percent in subsequent years. The act freezes the maximum rate at 55 percent through Dec. 31, 1987, and reduces the rate to 50 percent in 1988 and thereafter.

8. Windfall profit tax rate on newly discovered oil

Under prior law, the rate of windfall profit tax on newly discovered oil was scheduled to fall from 25 percent for 1983 to 22.5 percent for 1984, 20 percent for 1985, and 15 percent thereafter. The act provides that this tax rate is 22.5 percent for 1984 through 1987, 20 percent for 1988, and 15 percent thereafter.

9. Percentage depletion on secondary and tertiary production

Under prior law, the allowance for percentage depletion on secondary and tertiary oil production expired at the end of 1983. The act corrects the technical error leading to this termination and clarifies that percentage depletion will not be available after 1983 for secondary or tertiary production from proven properties transferred after 1974.

10. Telephone excise tax

Under prior law, the 3-percent telephone excise tax was scheduled to expire after 1985. Under the act, the 3-percent tax remains in effect through 1987.

11. Excise tax on distilled spirits

Under prior law, the excise tax on distilled spirits is $10.50 per proof gallon. The act increases the tax to $12.50 per proof gallon after Sept. 30, 1985. The act also imposes a floor stocks tax on previously taxed distilled spirits held for sale on Oct. 1, 1985. A de minimis exception from the floor stocks tax is provided for small retail and wholesale dealers, and an installment payment schedule is available to middle-sized dealers.

12. Modification of manner of paying tobacco and alcohol product excise taxes

The act requires taxpayers who were liable for $5 million or more in any tobacco or alcohol product excise tax in the preceding calendar year to pay that tax during the succeeding calendar year by electronic funds transfer to a Federal Reserve Bank. This provision applies to payments due on and after Sept. 30, 1984.

B. LEASING PROVISIONS

1. Tax-exempt entity leasing

In general, the act reduces the tax benefits available for certain property that is used by tax-exempt entities. Under the act, tax-exempt entities include the United States, any State or local governmental unit, possessions of the United States, and most agencies and instrumentalities of any of the foregoing. The term also includes (1) organizations (other than farmers' cooperatives described in sec. 521) exempt from United States income tax and certain formerly exempt organizations, and (2) certain foreign persons or entities.

The act generally requires that ACRS or other depreciation deductions for that portion of tangible property leased to tax-exempt entities be computed using the straight-line method over a recovery period equal to the greater of the present class life of the property under the Asset Depreciation Range system (40 years in the case of real property), or 125 percent of the term of the lease. In the case of real property, this provision applies to the extent of use of a type or types specified in the bill, but only if more than 35 percent of the property is so used. The depreciation rules of the act do not apply to certain short-lived property.

The act also provides criteria for determining whether a transaction that is structured as a service contract or other arrangement (other than with respect to certain low-income housing) should be treated as a lease for all Federal income tax purposes. Special service contract rules are provided for certain solid waste disposal, energy, and clean water facilities. The rehabilitation credit will be denied for tax-exempt use real property. Finally, lessors generally will not be entitled to investment credits with respect to property leased to thrift institutions in excess of the credits that would have been allowed to the lessee had the lessee owned the property.

The act does not apply to property leased to a tax-exempt entity for a short term. For depreciation purposes, a short-term lease is generally a lease with a term less than 1 year or less than 30 percent of the property ADR mid-point life (to the extent that life does not exceed 10 years). For investment credit purposes, a short-term lease is generally a lease of less than 6 months, although for certain property, the depreciation short-term lease rule applies.

The act generally applies to property placed in service by the taxpayer after May 23, 1983, and to property used under an agreement entered into after that date. However, transitional rules are provided.

2. Motor vehicle operating leases

Leases of motor vehicles often contain terminal rental adjustment clauses (TRACs). A TRAC passes on to the lessee the risk that the vehicle will be worth less at the end of the lease term than the parties projected when the lease was entered into. Under prior law, it has been held that an agreement with a TRAC in it does not qualify as a lease for Federal income tax purposes.

Under the act, TRACs are to be disregarded in determining whether certain motor vehicle agreements with respect to property which the lessee intends to use for business purposes qualify as leases for Federal income tax purposes. However, no lessee can be treated as the tax owner of property subject to such an agreement.

The provision is effective for transactions entered into 90 days after the date of enactment.

C. TREATMENT OF BONDS AND OTHER DEBT INSTRUMENTS

1. Debt obligations acquired at a discount

a. Market discount.—Under prior law, upon the disposition of a market-discount bond issued by a corporation or a governmental unit and held for more than 1 year, capital gain treatment was accorded to the appreciation in value attributable to market discount. When a taxpayer borrows the funds used to purchase a market-discount bond, interest on the acquisition indebtedness generally could be deducted currently against ordinary income. Thus, a taxpayer who leveraged the purchase of a market-discount bond effectively converted ordinary income to capital gain.

The act generally requires that gain on disposition of a market discount bond be recognized as interest income, to the extent of accrued market discount. This provision is effective for bonds issued after the date of enactment.

The act also limits a taxpayer's ability to take current interest deductions on indebtedness incurred to purchase or carry a market discount bond. This change is effective for bonds acquired after the date of enactment. For bonds issued before date of enactment but acquired after date of enactment, gain will be recharacterized as ordinary income to the extent of deferred interest deductions.

The act provides an election to include accrued market discount in income currently. Neither the rule requiring ordinary income treatment on disposition nor the rule limiting interest deductions will apply to bonds with respect to which the election is made.

b. Original issue discount on tax-exempt bonds.—Under the Code, original issue discount (OID) on certain obligations issued by a State or local government is exempt from tax. Under Internal Revenue Service rulings, tax-exempt OID is apportioned on a straight-line basis among the original holder and subsequent purchasers of a bond. The application of this rule may permit the holder of a deep discount municipal bond to generate an artificial loss by disposing of the bond prior to maturity.

The act requires the holders of tax-exempt obligations to accrue tax-exempt OID by using the constant interest method provided by prior law for the holders of obligations issued by corporations and other entities. Under the act, the basis of an obligation is increased by the amount of accrued tax-exempt OID. Thus, the holder of a zero coupon municipal bond will be able to claim economic losses realized on disposition of the bond. These changes apply to bonds issued after Sept. 3, 1982, and acquired after Mar. 1, 1984.

c. Discount on short-term obligations.—For governmental obligations (Treasury bills) issued at a discount and payable without interest at a fixed maturity not exceeding 1 year, the acquisition discount is not considered under prior law to accrue until the obligation is paid at maturity or otherwise disposed of. A similar rule applies with respect to original issue discount on other obligations with a maturity of 1 year or less (e.g., bank certificates of deposit). Taxpayers who make leveraged purchases of obligations eligible for the special rules are able to defer tax liability on unrelated income.

The act limits the scope of the special rules permitting deferral of discount income on these short-term obligations. Accrual basis taxpayers and certain cash basis taxpayers including those who hold Treasury bills and short-term original discount obligations will be required to account for the discount on an accrual basis. Taxpayers may elect to treat this change as a change in method of accounting and space the payment of any net tax liability over 5 years. The act also limits the ability to use leveraged purchases of short-term obligations within the special rules to defer tax on ordinary income by deferring the deductions for interest on indebtedness used to purchase or carry short-term discount obligations. An election is provided under which taxpayers who remain eligible for the special rules can avoid application of the interest deferral rule by electing to include acquisition and original issue discount in income as it accrues.

This provision is effective for obligations acquired after the date of enactment.

D. CORPORATE TAX PROVISIONS

1. Dividends received by corporations

a. Debt-financed portfolio stock.—Under prior law, when a corporation borrows funds used to purchase dividend-paying stock, interest on the acquisition indebtedness is generally deductible against ordinary income. Dividends received by a corporation are eligible for an 85-percent dividends received deduction.

Under the act, the dividends received deduction is generally reduced by an amount determined by reference to interest paid or accrued on debt that is directly attributable to investment in the underlying stock. Certain regulatory authority is granted.

The provision applies to stock the holding period for which begins after the date of enactment.

b. Dividends from regulated investment companies.—Under prior law, a mutual fund, or regulated investment company (RIC), is not subject to Federal income tax if it distributes its income to its shareholders. If at least 75 percent of a RIC's gross income consists of dividends from domestic corporations, then the entire amount of the RIC's dividends to its shareholders is eligible for the 85-percent intercorporate dividends received deduction and the $100 dividend exclusion for individuals.

Under the act, the 75-percent rule of prior law is raised to 95 percent (100 percent for corporate shareholders). Technical changes are also made.

The provision applies with respect to taxable years of a RIC beginning after the date of enactment.

c. Extraordinary dividends and holding period.—Under prior law, dividends received by a corporation generally have no effect on its basis in the stock of the distributing corporation.

Under the act, if a corporate shareholder does not hold stock for more than one year, the fair market value of any extraordinary dividend (to the extent not subject to tax) reduces its basis in the stock. Extraordinary dividends include dividends received within any 85-day period with a fair market value equal to or greater than 10 percent (5 percent in the case of preferred stock) of the taxpayer's basis in the stock. This change applies to distributions after Mar. 1, 1984.

Under prior law, the dividends received deduction is allowed generally only if a 15-day holding period requirement is satisfied. The holding period is limited to exclude certain periods during which the taxpayer has sold short substantially identical stock or purchased a put option. The act extends the general holding period requirement to 45 days. It also excludes any period during which the taxpayer is the grantor of a deep-in-the-money option with respect to the stock and any period that the taxpayer's risk of loss is diminished because of holding substantially similar or related positions. This holding period provision applies to stock acquired after the date of enactment.

A corporate shareholder's holding period for certain property received in a distribution is amended. This change applies with respect to distributions after the date of enactment.

2. Ordinary nonliquidating dividends of appreciated property

Generally, under prior law, a distribution of appreciated property by a corporation with respect to its stock is not a taxable event to the distributing corporation.

Under the act, in general, an ordinary, nonliquidating distribution of appreciated property is taxable to the distributing corporation. Certain exceptions are provided. The provision generally applies with respect to distributions declared on or after June 14, 1984.

The provision does not apply to distributions before 1985 to certain 80-percent corporate shareholders. Transitional rules are also provided.

3. Transactions in mutual fund shares

Under prior law, mutual fund distributions from net capital gain income are taxed as long-term capital gain to shareholders even when made to a shareholder who holds the share for one year or less. If a shareholder who has held a share of a mutual fund for less than 31 days sells such share at a loss after a capital gain dividend has been received, the loss is treated as long-term rather than short-term to the extent of the capital gain dividend. Similar rules apply to real estate investment trusts.

Under the act, losses on mutual fund stock held 6 months or less are treated as long-term losses to the extent of any capital gain dividends paid on the stock. There is an exception for periodic redemption plans. A similar rule is provided for real estate investment trusts.

The provision applies to losses with respect to shares of stock with respect to which the taxpayer's holding period begins after the date of enactment.

4. Expenses incurred in connection with short sales

Under the act, in the case of a short sale of stock, payments in lieu of dividends are not deductible, to the extent they exceed amounts received as compensation for the use of collateral for property borrowed in connection with the short sale, unless the short sale is held open for at least 46 days. No deduction is allowed for payments in lieu of extraordinary dividends unless the short sale is held open for more than 1 year. Where the taxpayer's risk of loss is reduced from holding other positions, the rules applicable to the holding period requirement for the dividends received deduction apply. In addition, a short sale is treated as debt, and short sale expenses not capitalized are treated as interest, for purposes of Code rules limiting the deduction of investment interest or disallowing interest applicable to tax-exempt obligations.

The provision applies with respect to short sales after the date of enactment.

5. Transactions in stock warrants

Under the act, no gain or loss is recognized by a corporation on any transaction with respect to a warrant to buy or sell its own stock. The provision applies with respect to warrants acquired or lapsing after the date of enactment.

6. Companies that accumulate earnings

Under prior law, a corporation may deduct 85 percent of the dividends it receives on portfolio stock investments. Furthermore, gain on the sale of stock held by an individual for more than 1 year is generally taxed as long-term capital gains at rates not in excess of 20 percent. As a result, if a widely held investment company invests in dividend-paying stocks and pays no dividends, its shareholders could hold the stock for at least a year and then sell it at a price that reflects dividends received and retained by the company. Their gains would generally be long-term capital gain, so individual shareholders would essentially be recognizing dividend income at a tax rate substantially below 50 percent. The company may take the position that it is not subject to the accumulated earnings tax because it is widely held.

Under the act, generally, widely held companies including operating companies are not automatically excluded from the accumulated earnings tax. Also, the net capital loss deduction (including by carryover) is denied for mere investment or holding companies and amended, along with other provisions, for other companies.

These provisions apply with respect to taxable years beginning after the date of enactment.

7. Distribution of debt by a corporation

Under prior law, earnings and profits of a corporation are probably reduced by the principal amount of its obligations distributed to shareholders. Generally, for noncorporate shareholders, the amount of a distribution taken into account is the fair market value of the property distributed. A long-term obligation bearing little or no stated interest will have a fair market value well below its stated redemption price. The result may be to eliminate corporate earnings and profits at the cost of a relatively small dividend to shareholders.

The act amends the earnings and profits rules to limit the reduction in earnings and profits resulting from the distribution of the corporation's own debt obligations. Also, under the bill, these obligations are subject to the original issue discount rules.

These provisions apply with respect to distributions declared after Mar. 15, 1984.

8. Phaseout of graduated rates for large corporations

Under prior law, the first $100,000 of corporate taxable income is taxed at graduated rates. The taxable income in excess of $100,000 is taxed at the 46-percent rate. The graduated tax rates provide a tax reduction of $20,250 to corporations with taxable income in excess of $100,000 relative to a flat 46-percent tax.

The act provides that the benefits of the graduated rates will be phased out for any corporation with taxable income in excess of $1 million. An additional 5-percent tax, not to exceed $20,250 in amount, will be imposed on a corporation's taxable income in excess of $1 million. This provision will be effective for taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1983.

9. Corporate tax preferences

Under prior law, the following corporate tax preferences are reduced by 15 percent: special recapture rules for sales of real property; percentage depletion for coal and iron ore; DISC; amortization of pollution control facilities; bad debt reserves of financial institutions; interest with respect to tax-exempt securities owned by financial institutions; intangible drilling costs of major oil companies; and mineral exploration and development costs.

The act increases the prior law corporate tax preference cutback (other than for coal and iron ore depletion) from 15 percent to 20 percent, beginning in 1985, including applying the increased cutback to the new foreign sales corporation provision in lieu of DISC.

10. Golden parachutes

Under the act, certain payments under "golden parachute" or similar contracts substantially in excess of historic compensation will be presumed not to be reasonable compensation and not deductible. Furthermore a nondeductible 20-percent excise tax will be imposed on the recipient. The presumption will be rebuttable.

The provisions are generally effective with respect to payments under contracts entered into after June 14, 1984.

11. Earnings and profits

Distributions from a corporation are generally treated as dividends only if they are paid out of current or accumulated earnings and profits. The act makes a number of changes in the definition of earnings and profits in order to make them conform more closely to true or economic income. Special rules are provided for distributions to certain 20-percent corporate shareholders. The act also makes provision for the effect on earnings and profits of redemptions. With exceptions, the provisions are effective after Sept. 30, 1984.

12. Net operating losses

Provisions from the Tax Reform Act of 1976 relating to special limitations on the carryover of net operating losses and other tax attributes were scheduled to become effective at varying times during 1984. The act delays the effective date of those provisions, generally until 1986. As a result, the rules in effect prior to 1984 remain in effect.

13. "C" reorganizations

Prior law contains no requirement that the transferor corporation distribute all its assets to shareholders in order for a transaction to qualify as a "C" reorganization.

The act requires the transferor corporation to distribute all its assets to shareholders in order to qualify a transaction as a "C" reorganization. The Treasury is authorized to prescribe regulations providing relief from the rules in appropriate cases. The act also requires an appropriate allocation of earnings and profits in certain "C" and "D" reorganizations.

The provisions are effective for transactions pursuant to a plan adopted after the date of enactment.

14. "D" reorganizations

Under prior law, the transfer of assets of a corporation to another corporation qualifies as a non-divisive "D" reorganization if, among other things, shareholders of the acquired corporation are in control of the acquiring corporation immediately after the transaction. Control is defined as ownership of at least 80 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote and at least 80 percent of the total number of all other classes of stock.

The act changes the control requirement applicable to non-divisive "D" reorganizations. The provisions apply to transactions pursuant to a plan adopted after the date of enactment.

15. Collapsible corporations

In general, under present law, a collapsible corporation is one which is formed or availed of with a view (on the part of those in control of the corporation) to realize the value of the corporation's collapsible assets before the corporation has realized a "substantial part" of the taxable income to be derived from such property. Under the act, the substantial part requirement is defined to be "two-thirds" of the taxable income to be derived from the property.

The "70/30" rule of prior law is amended to authorize Treasury regulations specifying the extent to which all inventory assets are to be aggregated and treated as a single asset in determining whether the gain attributable to such assets should be treated as attributable to collapsible assets for purposes of the "70/30" rule.

The provisions are applicable to sales, exchanges, or distributions after the date of enactment.

16. Affiliated groups

The act redefines "affiliated group" for all Federal income tax purposes. In general, one corporation will not be affiliated with another unless one owns stock possessing (1) at least 80 percent of the total combined voting stock, and (2) at least 80 percent of the total value of all outstanding stock (disregarding certain preferred stock) of the other. Technical provisions are included, and broad regulatory authority is provided.

The provision is generally effective for taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1984. Special and transitional rules are provided.

17. Exchange of stock-for-debt

The act provides that a corporation transferring stock to satisfy its debt obligations will recognize income to the extent the principal of the debt exceeds the value of the stock. This rule will not apply to insolvent corporations or corporations under title 11. The provision generally applies to transfers after the date of enactment. Certain transitional rules are provided.

E. PARTNERSHIPS AND OTHER PASS-THROUGH ENTITIES

1. Allocations of partnership income or loss

a. Contributed property.—Under prior law, a partnership may elect to allocate depreciation, depletion, or gains or loss with respect to contributed property to reflect variations between the basis of the property and its fair market value when contributed. In the absence of the election, it is possible that the gain or loss with respect to contributed property may be effectively shifted among members of the partnership.

Under the act, the allocation of partnership items to reflect built-in gain or loss with respect to contributed property will be made mandatory. The provision applies to contributions made after Mar. 31, 1984.

b. Partnership losses.—Under prior law, retroactive allocation of partnership deductions to partners entering late in the year is prohibited. Nonetheless, it may be possible to accomplish such an allocation through the use of tiered partnerships or, in the case of cash method partnerships, by delaying actual payment for accrued expenses.

With respect to the tiered partnership technique, the act generally requires items of income, gain, loss, deduction and credit passing from a subsidiary partnership to a parent partnership to be allocated equally among the days in the parent's taxable year for which it has an interest in the subsidiary. Further, for cash basis partnerships, certain items such as taxes, interest, and rents are to be allocated proportionately over the periods to which they relate, so that a partner generally can be allocated only those items actually accrued while he is a partner. The provision applies to items paid or accrued after Mar. 31, 1984.

2. Conversion or deferral of income

a. Disguised payments.—Under present law, amounts expended to organize or promote a partnership generally must be capitalized. Other payments for property or services may also be required to be capitalized. It has been suggested that these capitalization requirements may, in effect, be avoided when the payee is also a partner by allocating a greater share of income to that partner.

The act provides that when a partner performs services for, or transfers property to, a partnership and receives a related allocation and distribution of partnership income or gain, the allocation and distribution, if properly so characterized, will be treated as a transaction occurring between the partnership and a person who is not a partner. The provision applies to services performed or property transferred after Feb. 29, 1984.

b. Disguised sales.—Under prior law, a partner may be able to avoid recognition of gain on the sale of property to a partnership or another partner by characterizing the transaction as a contribution of the property followed by a distribution of cash or other property to the contributing partner.

The act provides that, when properly so characterized, a transfer of property to a partnership and a related transfer to that or another partner will be treated as a sale between partners or between the partnership and one who is not a partner. The provision generally applies to transfers after Mar. 31, 1984 subject to certain transitional rules.

c. Gain or loss on contributed property.—Under the act, the ordinary income or loss character of unrealized receivables contributed to a partnership will be preserved in the hands of the partnership. Further, the ordinary income or loss character of inventory items will be preserved in the hands of the partnership for 5 years. Built-in losses on capital assets contributed to a partnership are treated as capital losses if recognized by the partnership within 5 years. The provision applies with respect to property contributed after Mar. 31, 1984.

d. Ordinary income property in tiered partnerships.—The act treats a partnership that owns an interest in another partnership as owning its proportionate share of the ordinary income assets of such partnership directly. A similar rule applies to interests in trusts. The provision applies to distributions, sales or exchanges after Mar. 31, 1984.

3. Transfers of partnership and trust interests by corporations

Under prior law, when a partnership interest is sold, any gain is ordinary income to the extent attributable to certain ordinary income items of the partnership. When a corporation distributes property, or sells property in the course of certain complete liquidations, recapture income is taxed to the corporation while nonrecapture gain attributable to appreciation in the transferred property goes unrecognized. It has been argued that the corporate recapture provisions do not apply to the distribution or liquidating sale of an interest in a partnership that holds recapture property.

Under the act, a corporate distribution or a liquidating sale of a partnership interest is treated as a transfer of the distributing corporation's proportionate share of certain recapture items (and other corporate recognition property) held by the partnership. The provision also clarifies that a distribution is treated as a sale or exchange for purposes of the basis adjustment rules. The provision applies to distributions after Mar. 31, 1984.

4. Like-kind exchanges of partnership interests: deferred like-kind exchanges

The act provides that tax-free like-kind exchange treatment is not available for exchanges of interests in different partnerships that are subject to tax under the partnership rules of the Code. If a partnership has elected out of partnership taxation, the exchanges of interests will be treated as exchanges of the underlying assets. The provision applies (subject to certain transitional rules) with respect to transfers after the date of enactment.

Under prior law, an intended like-kind exchange transaction may be held open for as long as five years under the case law. The act provides that property which is received in an exchange and is either not designated within 45 days of the time that the taxpayer transfers his property or received more than 180 days after the taxpayer transfers the relinquished property (or, if earlier, after the due date of the taxpayer's return), will not be treated as like-kind property. This provision generally will apply to transfers of property made after the date of enactment.

5. Use of partnerships to step-up basis

Under prior law, a partnership could elect to increase the basis of its assets by the amount of any basis that is "lost" when a distributee partner's basis in his interest is substituted for the basis of distributed property. Thus, a partnership distributing high basis property to a low basis partner would experience an increase in the basis of its other property, but the distributee partner would lose basis and be exposed to greater gain if the distributed property is sold. This result can be avoided by contributing the high basis property to a lower tier partnership which has not elected to make basis adjustments, and by distributing the partnership interest to the low basis partner. The result is that the partnership property of the first partnership will experience a basis increase without reducing the basis of the property.

The act eliminates the elective basis adjustment for distributions of interests in partnerships that have not elected to make basis adjustments. The provision applies to distributions after Mar. 1, 1984.

6. Allocation of liabilities to partners

The act reverses the holding of Raphan v. United States (U.S. Claims Court No. 952-78, Sept. 26, 1983), and instructs the Treasury to amend its regulations relating to the treatment of liabilities of partners and partnerships for purposes of sec. 752.

F. TRUST PROVISIONS

1. Multiple trusts

Treasury regulations prevent grantors of trusts from reducing present taxation by establishing multiple trusts for the same beneficiaries to take advantage of the separate graduated rates applicable to each trust. A recent court decision held these regulations to be invalid. Under the act, trusts established by substantially the same grantors for substantially the same beneficiaries with a principal purpose of tax avoidance will be consolidated for tax purposes under Treasury regulations. The provision is generally effective for taxable years beginning after Mar. 1, 1984.

2. Trust distributions

Beneficiaries are taxed on amounts distributed from a trust (or estate) to the extent of the trust's (or estate's) distributable net income. The trust (or estate) is allowed a deduction for amounts taxed to its beneficiaries. Distributions of appreciated property are deemed to carry out distributable net income to the extent of the property's value at the time of distribution. The basis of the property in the hands of the beneficiary is its value to the extent it carries out distributable net income.

Under the act, distributions of property are treated as carrying out distributable net income only to the extent of the property's basis. The beneficiary's basis will be the same as the trust's (or estate's) and the appreciation no longer will be exempted from tax. Alternatively, the trustee or executor may elect to recognize gain at the the trust level upon distribution of such property.

The provision applies to distributions after June 1, 1984.

G. TIME VALUE OF MONEY AND OTHER ACCOUNTING PROVISIONS

1. Deferred payment transactions

a. Time for inclusion or deduction of deferred interest.—In general, in a discount lending transaction, the borrower is treated as having paid, and the lender as having received, the annual unpaid interest, which is then relent to the borrower. These original issue discount (OID) rules match the interest inclusion by the lender with the interest deduction by the borrower. The OID rules of prior law do not apply to obligations issued in exchange for property where neither the obligation nor the property is publicly traded; to obligations issued by individuals; or, as to holders of discount obligations, to obligations not held as capital assets.

The act extends the OID rules to obligations issued for nontraded property, issued by individuals, and not held as capital assets. The interest element in obligations issued for nontraded property is to be compared to a test rate. The test (safe harbor) rate is 110 percent of an average yield on Federal obligations of similar maturity (the "applicable Federal rate"). This yield is to be redetermined semi-annually for 3 categories of maturities (short-, medium-, and long-term). If interest is not stated at least at the safe harbor rate, interest will be imputed at a rate equal to 120 percent of the applicable Federal rate and annually included in the income of the lender and deducted by the borrower at that rate. If interest is stated at or above the safe harbor rate but is paid annually at less than that rate, interest will be accrued annually by the lender and borrower at the stated rate. Exceptions to these rules are provided for sales of principal residences, certain sales of farms, sales involving total payments of $250,000 or less, and issuers of obligations issued in a sale of assets not used by the purchaser in a trade or business or held by the purchaser for investment.

The act also provides exceptions to the OID rules for loans of $10,000 or less between individuals, purchases of assets that do not constitute trade or business or investment assets in the hands of the purchaser, and for borrowers in negative amortization loan transactions where the loan proceeds are used to purchase non-business or non-investment property. These provisions generally apply to transactions entered into after December 31, 1984, except for sales or exchanges with respect to which there was a binding commitment on Mar. 15, 1984.

b. Measurement of interest in deferred payment transactions.—Under prior law, if the parties to a deferred payment sale fail to state interest at a safe-harbor rate fixed by regulation, interest is imputed at a higher rate fixed by regulation. The safe-harbor rate is a simple interest rate; the imputed rate is a compound rate. Imputed interest is allocated among deferred payments in proportion to the amount of the payment, without regard to the period of time that has elapsed since the sale.

The act provides that the adequacy of the interest element in a deferred payment sale is to be tested against a self-adjusting compound rate of interest which approximates a market rate. This test (safe-harbor) rate is the same rate applied under the proposed amendments to the OID rules: 110 percent of the applicable Federal rate. If insufficient interest is stated, interest is to be imputed at a rate equal to 120 percent of the applicable Federal rate. Interest income will be recognized by the lender and interest expense will be deducted by the borrower on an economic accrual basis when paid (in the case of a cash method taxpayer) or when due (in the case of an accrual method taxpayer). An exception is provided for purchasers of assets that do not constitute trade or business or investment assets in the hands of the purchaser.

In the case of certain sales of principal residences and farm land subject to the deferred payment rules of sec. 483 rather than the OID rules (i.e., sales of personal residences and the sale of a farm by an individual or small business where the total payment is less than $1,000,000) the test and imputed interest rates of sec. 483 will be fixed by the procedures provided by prior law (i.e., adjusted from time to time as appropriate by the Treasury in regulations). In the case of sales of personal residences where the sale price is less than $250,000 the rates set in Treasury regulations will apply. To the extent the sales price exceeds $250,000, the rates computed with reference to the applicable Federal rate will apply. The maximum amount of deferred payments that is subject to the rate set by Treasury regulations is $250,000. This amount is reduced on a sliding scale as the selling price rises above $250,000. Thus, where the sales price of a personal residence exceeds $250,000, prior law rates would apply to that portion of the deferred payments that $250,000 bears to the sales price; the rates computed under the new procedures apply to the remainder. The exceptions provided for personal residences and farms only apply to the test and imputed rates; even where the exceptions apply and the existing procedures to compute the rates are used, the rate will be computed on a compound basis and interest will be allocated among payments as provided under the general rule of the act.

The act generally applies to sales or exchanges after Dec. 31, 1984, except for sales or exchanges with respect to which there was a binding commitment on Mar. 15, 1984. However, as to any transactions entered into after June 8, 1984, and before Jan. 1, 1985, the act provides that a deduction will not be allowed for interest in excess of the amount properly allocable to the period.

2. Deferred payments for use of property and services

The act requires that rental and interest income attributable to a deferred rental payment agreement be reported as income by the lessor and deducted by the lessee as if both were on the accrual method, irrespective of their actual methods of accounting. If a transaction is subject to these provisions, the amount of rent to be accrued by the parties for a taxable year will be based upon a rental rate that is stated in the lease for each period of the lease.

In the case of long-term leases and sale-leaseback transactions, where rents are stepped and the reason for the stepping of the rents is tax avoidance, then the amount of rent will be based upon a rental rate that is constant or level for each period of the lease. For this purpose, a lease is a long-term lease if its length is greater than 75 percent of the ACRS life (i.e., 13.5 years in the case of real property).

In addition, in the case where payment of rent is deferred beyond the end of the calendar year subsequent to the year to which the rent relates and where rents are treated as level rents, the lessor will annually accrue interest income, and the lessee will deduct interest expense, at a rate equal to 110 percent of a self-adjusting statutory rate, on any unpaid accrued rent and interest.

Deferred payments under service contracts are treated in a manner similar to deferred rents, except that the annual inclusion and deduction rules apply only to the imputed interest element of the transaction.

Exceptions are provided for deferred payment transactions involving total payments of $250,000 or less and certain other situations.

The provisions are effective for agreements entered into after June 8, 1984, for taxable years ending after such date.

3. Premature accruals

Under the accrual method of accounting, an expense is deductible when all events have occurred which establish the fact of liability and the amount of the liability can be determined with reasonable accuracy. The proper time for deducting expenses for which economic performance has not yet occurred is the subject of controversy under present law.

The act generally requires that economic performance must occur before all events establishing the fact of liability will be considered to have occurred. Exceptions are made for items for which specific timing rules are already provided under the Code, such as bad debts and vacation pay. In addition, the act provides a general exception for ordinary business expenses of a recurring nature that are consistently accounted for by the taxpayer.

The act permits utility companies owning nuclear power plants to take deductions for contributions to a segregated reserve fund dedicated to plant decommissioning, subject to certain limits. This reserve fund will be taxed as a separate entity, with respect to fund earnings, at the maximum corporate tax rate (46 percent).

The act requires that all customer charges for decommissioning are to be included in the income of the company that is providing the services.

The act also provides an elective method for deducting site reclamation and closing costs of surface and deep mines and solid, liquid, and hazardous waste disposal sites (not including certain designated superfund sites), associated with meeting the requirements of Federal or State law (and local ordinance or permit in the case of a waste disposal site).

The act provides a 10-year carryback for losses arising from certain deferred liabilities and a longer period for certain losses associated with the decommissioning of nuclear generating plants (but not to a taxable year beginning before Jan. 1, 1984, unless otherwise permitted by prior law).

The act applies to expenses accruing after the date of enactment, subject to certain elective transition rules.

4. Prepayment of expenses

Under the act, tax shelter organizations will not be permitted to deduct any amount prior to the time it would be properly deductible under the accrual method of accounting (or under sec. 464 in the case of farming tax shelters). The act defines tax shelter organizations to include certain partnerships and enterprises, and any entity, plan or arrangement having the principal purpose of tax avoidance.

An exception is provided under which prepaid expenses are deductible under the rules of prior law if economic performance with respect to an item occurs before the 90th day after the end of the taxable year. For the purpose of this exception only, in the case of oil and gas activities, economic performance is deemed to occur when commencement of the well begins (i.e., the well is "spudded"). The amount of prepaid items which may be deducted under this exception is limited to the cash investment by the taxpayer in the tax shelter.

These rules apply to prepayments made after Mar. 31, 1984.

5. Construction period interest and taxes for residential property

The act requires corporations to capitalize construction period interest and taxes for residential real property other than low income residential real property. This change will apply to interest and taxes paid or incurred in taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1984, for construction of residential real property begun after Mar. 15, 1984.

6. Preopening expenditures

The act provides that business preopening or start-up expenditures (other than interest, taxes, and research and experimental expenses) must be amortized over a 5-year period. The provision is effective for taxable years beginning after June 30, 1984.

H. STRADDLES AND OTHER SECURITIES TRANSACTIONS

Under prior law, several special rules apply to limit tax benefits from straddle transactions. Under the loss deferral rule, losses on straddles are deferred to the extent of gains on offsetting positions. However, there is an exception from this rule for straddles involving stock and stock options. Also, a mark-to-market system applies to regulated futures contracts under which taxes are paid on unrecognized gains and losses at the end of each year. Under the mark-to-market rules, gains and losses are treated as 60-percent long-term and 40-percent short-term, providing a maximum tax rate of 32 percent. The tax treatment of options on futures contracts and cash settlement options is unclear under prior law.

The act repeals the exception from the loss deferral rule for stock options and stock offset by an option or by a position other than stock in substantially similar or related property (as determined under regulations), and substitutes a limited exception applying to covered calls which are not deep-in-the-money. The exception from the straddle rules for stock will not apply where the corporation is formed or availed of to enter into positions to offset the shareholder's own positions. When a taxpayer has written an in-the-money call that is not deep-in-the-money, the conference agreement requires long-term treatment for any loss on the call if gain on the stock would be long-term and excludes from the holding period applicable to the stock any period during which the taxpayer is the grantor of such an option. The act also subjects certain year-end losses from such options to deferral where the stock is disposed of soon after the option is closed but gain from the stock is in a later year.

The act also extends the mark-to-market system to options (other than stock options and certain narrow-based stock index options) and to options held by options market makers.

The act modifies the hedging exception to the anti-straddle rules to reduce the possibility that it may be used to generate losses that shelter unrelated income from tax.

The Treasury Department's authority to issue regulations with regard to the straddles rules is extended so that it can deal with the problems presented under prior law by mixed straddles. The act requires the regulations to provide rules that permit offsetting of gains and losses in mixed straddles by identification of each mixed straddle or by establishment of a mixed straddle account. The regulations are also to provide rules dealing with the requirement that carrying costs of a straddle position be capitalized. Treasury's authority to prescribe effective identification requirements for the hedging exception and broker-dealer investment accounts is also broadened.

The wash-sale rule is extended to apply to short sales, including short sales "against the box." The previous exception from the wash-sale rule is limited to dealers in stocks and securities after Dec. 31, 1984.

The act clarifies the treatment of cash settlement options and options on futures contracts.

The repeal of the exception for stock options from the anti-straddle rules is effective for positions entered into after Dec. 31, 1983. The extension of mark-to-market rules is effective for positions entered into after the date of enactment. Transition rules are provided similar to those which were provided when the mark-to-market system for regulated futures contracts was implemented in 1981.

The act clarifies that straddle losses prior to 1982 are to be allowed in certain cases where they were incurred in a transaction entered into for profit.

I. FOREIGN PROVISIONS

1. Maintaining the source of U.S source income

The United States taxes the U.S. source income of U.S. taxpayers. U.S. taxpayers' foreign source income can be free of U.S. tax under the foreign tax credit.

The act prevents relabeling of U.S. source income as foreign source income. Under the act, subpart F and foreign personal holding company inclusions are U.S. source income to the extent attributable to U.S. source income of the foreign corporation with respect to which the inclusions are required. If a foreign corporation has earnings and profits and 10 percent or more of the earnings and profits are attributable to U.S. sources, then (1) interest paid by the foreign corporation to its 10-percent U.S. shareholder (or a related person) is U.S. source income to the extent properly allocable to U.S. source income of the foreign corporation, and (2) a pro rata portion of dividends paid by the foreign corporation out of the earnings and profits is U.S. source income. The act applies only to 50-percent U.S-owned foreign corporations. Generally, it applies with respect to income earned by paying corporations after the date of enactment. Transitional rules are provided. The foreign tax credit limitation generally will be computed separately for income that benefits from the transitional rules.

2. Maintaining the character of interest income

The act generally subjects to the separate foreign tax credit limitation for interest the following: subpart F and foreign personal holding company inclusions of, and dividends and interest received by, a U.S. person that attributable to separate limitation interest income of a 10-percent U.S.-owned foreign corporation or a RIC. Inclusions and payments are treated as separate limitation interest to the extent of the separate limitation interest income of the foreign corporation or RIC. The provision applies only if the foreign corporation or RIC has earnings and profits for the taxable year to which the inclusion or payment is attributable and 10 percent or more of the earnings and profits are attributable to separate limitation interest. Interest payments to 10-percent U.S. shareholders (or related persons) do not reduce separate limitation interest or earnings and profits of the paying corporation for these purposes. The provision generally applies to income earned by paying corporations in taxable years beginning after the date of enactment. However, interest income earned with respect to investments by a taxpayer after June 22, 1984 (the date of conference action) will be treated as separate limitation interest. Transitional rules are provided.

3. Factoring trade receivables

A seller who sells goods for the buyer's receivable (a transferable debt) may sell that receivable to a third party—a factor—at a discount. If a U.S.-owned factor is in a tax haven, it may earn income free of U.S. tax. That income may be eligible for deferral, and it may be foreign source income that is sheltered by excess foreign tax credits. Further, when a foreign subsidiary of a U.S. corporation invests in U.S. property, that investment is taxable as a dividend to the U.S. parent. Some taxpayers allege that this rule does not apply to a foreign factoring subsidiary that buys receivables from its U.S. parent.

Under the act, when a foreign factoring subsidiary of a U.S. owner gets cash for a receivable that (1) it bought from a related person, and (2) the related person had taken in exchange for services or inventory, the U.S. owner is taxed on that factoring income. The act treats a purchase of receivables like a loan to the purchaser of the goods or services with all income attributable to receivables (and income from financing export transactions) treated as interest subject to the separate foreign tax credit limitation. The act also treats payments of cash from a foreign subsidiary to a related U.S. person for receivables arising from the U.S. person's sales of services or inventory as investments in U.S. property if the purchaser of the services or goods is a U.S. person. Thus, payments of cash for these receivables will be taxable as dividends to the U.S. parent, whatever the term of the obligation under the receivable. This provision will generally apply to accounts receivable and evidences of indebtedness transferred after Mar. 1, 1984 in taxable years ending after that date.

4. Source of transportation income

Under the act, transportation income earned from transportation that begins and ends in the United States is treated as U.S. income. Transportation income earned from transportation that begins in the United States and ends in a U.S. possession (or vice-versa) is treated as 50-percent U.S. source income, except in the case of certain income earned from aircraft leasing. Income earned from transportation includes services income and leasing income from ships, airplanes, and containers used in connection with ships and airplanes. The effective date is the date of enactment.

5. Foreign investment companies

Under prior law, taxpayers contend that a foreign corporation that is widely held by U.S. persons may establish a subsidiary to invest in U.S. commodities markets without any of the parties incurring U.S. tax. They also contend that when the U.S. shareholders eventually dispose of their shares in the foreign corporation they will be subject to tax at only the capital gains rate.

The act will, in certain cases, apply the accumulated earnings tax to earnings from U.S. investments, even after those earnings pass through corporate solution as dividends or interest. This provision applies generally to distributions received on or after May 23, 1983. It will also generally treat gains of U.S. shareholders from those investments as ordinary income. This provision applies generally to sales or exchanges on or after Sept. 29, 1983.

6. Extension of moratorium on application of research and experimental expense allocation regulation

In determining foreign source taxable income for purposes of computing the foreign tax credit limitation, taxpayers must allocate or apportion expenses between foreign source income and U.S. source income (Code secs. 861-863). Rules for allocating and apportioning research and other expenses are set forth in Treasury Regulation sec. 1.861-8.

In the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 (ERTA), Congress directed the Treasury Department to study the impact of its sec. 861 regulations on research activities conducted in the United States and on the availability of the foreign tax credit. Congress also provided that for a taxpayer's first 2 taxable years beginning after the date of enactment of ERTA (Aug. 13, 1981), all research expenditures in those years for research activities conducted in the United States are to be allocated or apportioned to sources within the United States. This 2-year moratorium on the application of the research and experimental expense allocation rules of Treas. Reg. sec. 1.861-8 does not apply to subsequent taxable years.

The act generally extends for 2 more years the moratorium on the application of the Treasury research expense allocation rules. The extension generally applies to a taxpayer's taxable years beginning after Aug. 13, 1983 and on or before Aug. 1, 1985.

7. Repeal of 30-percent tax on portfolio interest paid to foreign persons

Payments of passive income (interest, dividends, royalties, etc.) to foreign persons generally are subject to a 30-percent U.S. withholding tax if the payments are not effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business conducted by the foreign person. Exemptions from the tax are provided in certain situations. Some U.S. tax treaties reduce the tax. In the case of interest, some treaties eliminate the tax.

The Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (TEFRA) generally requires registration of debt obligations. An exemption from the registration requirement is provided for debt obligations that are sold under procedures reasonably designed to prevent sale or resale to U.S. persons, that bear interest payable outside the United States only, and that indicate that U.S. holders are subject to tax penalties.

The act generally repeals the 30-percent withholding tax on interest paid on portfolio indebtedness by U.S. borrowers to nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations. The repeal generally is effective for interest paid on a portfolio obligation issued after the date of enactment, provided the obligation, if in bearer form, is excluded from the TEFRA registration requirement under the exemption described above or, if in registered form, is certified to be held by a foreign person.

Otherwise eligible interest paid to a controlled foreign corporation (unless paid by a related party) will be exempt from the 30-percent tax, but will be subject to the subpart F rules without regard to the usual exceptions. Interest paid to banks and 10-percent or greater owners of the payor will not be exempt from the 30-percent tax.

The act grants the Secretary of the Treasury discretion to require registration of obligations excluded from the TEFRA registration requirement under the exemption described above. It also provides that interest paid to certain controlled foreign corporations will be treated as paid to a resident of the country in which the controlled foreign corporation is incorporated, if certain requirements are met.

8. Foreign investors—original issue discount and coupon stripping

Foreign investors acquiring pure original issue discount corporate bonds—those with no payment of interest until maturity—defer U.S. taxation until they surrender the bonds at maturity. The rules governing timing of income inclusion for foreign investors holding corporate OID debt differ in some respects from those governing income inclusion for U.S. investors. As for foreign holders of debt originally issued at a discount by obligors other than corporations and governmental entities, prior law is unclear.

The act conforms the timing of income inclusions for foreign investors to the timing for comparable U.S. investors, except that there is no inclusion for foreign investors until actual receipt of payment. The act also conforms the treatment of noncorporate debt to the treatment of corporate debt. These provisions generally apply to payments made on or after the 60th day after the date of enactment. The agreement denies a deduction to a U.S. borrower that accrues interest on original issue discount debt to a related foreign lender until payment of the interest. This provision is effective for obligations issued after June 9, 1984.

The Internal Revenue Code does not contain specific rules governing foreign investors who sell or surrender stripped bonds or who sell stripped coupons. The act generally conforms the rules governing foreign investors to those governing U.S. investors, except that there is no inclusion for foreign investors until actual receipt of payment. Thus, foreign investors will treat stripped coupons and stripped bonds as being OID instruments. These provisions will apply generally to payments made on or after the 60th day after enactment.

9. Withholding on dispositions by foreigners of U.S. real property interests

Under the Foreign Investment in Real Property Tax Act of 1980 (FIRPTA), foreign persons who dispose of U.S. real property interests generally are required to pay tax on any gain realized on the disposition. FIRPTA provides for enforcement of the tax on foreign persons through a system of information reporting designed to identify foreign owners of U.S. real property interests.

The act generally imposes a withholding obligation when a U.S. real property interest is acquired from a foreign person. The withholding duty generally applies to purchasers of U.S. real property interests from foreign owners unless they receive a sworn affidavit stating that the seller is not foreign and containing the seller's taxpayer identification number ("nonforeign affidavit"). The IRS may require the purchaser to file the nonforeign affidavit with it to obtain this exemption from withholding. If the purchaser has actual knowledge or has received formal notice that the nonforeign affidavit is false, the affidavit will not override his withholding duty. Agents for transferors and transferees are liable for withholding if they have actual knowledge that a nonforeign affidavit is false and fail to notify the transferee. This withholding duty is limited to the agent's compensation. In the case of a foreign corporate transferor, an agent of the transferor will be deemed to have actual knowledge that any nonforeign affidavit is false.

Special rules are provided for withholding by partnerships, trustees, executors, and certain distributing foreign corporations and domestic U.S. real property holding corporations.

Withholding does not apply to a purchaser buying U.S. real property for $300,000 or less, for use as his residence, or to the sale of stock that is regularly traded on an established securities market. Withholding does not apply if the purchaser receives a qualifying statement that the seller is exempt from tax, security has been provided, or other arrangements for payment of tax have been made. Withholding generally does not apply to a sale of stock in a non-publicly traded U.S. corporation if the purchaser receives a sworn statement that the corporation is not a U.S. real property holding corporation. The IRS may require the purchaser to file this statement with the IRS to obtain this exemption from withholding. If the purchaser has actual knowledge or had received formal notice that the statement is false, withholding is required.

The amount withheld generally is the lesser of 10 percent of the price, or the maximum tax liability on disposition (after proof of basis). A refund of any amounts withheld in excess of the maximum tax liability may be requested before a tax return would otherwise be filed. The IRS can also reduce or eliminate withholding on request in certain other cases.

The act generally repeals the information requirements of FIRPTA. However, the Secretary may require reporting by foreign persons not engaged in a U.S. business who hold direct investments in U.S real property of $50,000 or more.

Withholding will apply to dispositions on or after Jan. 1, 1985. The changes in the reporting requirements are effective retroactively to calendar year 1980.

10. Use of territories to avoid U.S. tax on foreign investors

Under the act, interest, dividends, and other passive income paid from U.S. sources to corporations organized in Guam, the Marianas, or the Virgin Islands are subject to U.S. tax unless the bulk of the recipient's gross income is from territories and unless the bulk of its beneficial owners are local residents. The provision applies with respect to payments made after Mar. 1, 1984.

11. Taxation of certain transfers of appreciated property outside the United States

Certain transfers of appreciated assets to foreign corporations in reorganizations and liquidations, which would be tax-free, are taxable if the Internal Revenue Service rules that one of the principal purposes of the transfers was the avoidance of Federal income tax.

Under the act, the rules governing transfers of appreciated property abroad are amended to provide for gain recognition without regard to purpose, unless the property is transferred for use in an active trade or business abroad. Certain transfers of assets containing built-in gain are automatically subject to tax. Transfers of stock are subject to the active trade or business test. In addition, transfers of intangibles that would otherwise be tax-free are subject to tax. The intangibles rule does not apply to good will or going concern value developed by a foreign branch.

To the extent provided in regulations, a domestic corporation will recognize gain on liquidating distributions of appreciated property to foreign persons; prior law in this area will continue to apply until regulations are promulgated.

The current Internal Revenue Service policy on incorporations of foreign branches generally is codified. Gain recognized on such incorporations will not exceed previous net losses of the foreign branch and will have the character of the previous losses. In the case of a previous overall foreign loss, the amount of gain recognized will be reduced by the amount recognized under Code sec. 904(f)(3) in the loss year, but not amounts simply recharacterized as U.S. source income by Code sec. 904(f)(1).

The provision generally applies to transfers after Jan. 1, 1985. A transitional rule is provided for ruling requests filed before Mar. 1, 1984. Transfers of intangibles that occur after June 6, 1984 (the date of conference action) and before Jan. 1, 1985 will be presumed to have a tax avoidance purpose, subject to terms and conditions prescribed by the Secretary.

12. Provisions relating to foreign personal holding companies

The act clarifies the family and partner attribution rules for determining when a foreign corporation is a foreign personal holding company. It also prevents avoidance of U.S. tax by interposition of a foreign trust or other foreign entity between a foreign personal holding company and a U.S. taxpayer. In addition, the act coordinates the foreign personal holding company rules with the controlled foreign corporation rules. It provides that shareholders of a controlled foreign corporation (that is also a foreign personal holding company) are subject to the controlled foreign corporation rules to the extent that income taxable under those rules exceeds income taxable under the foreign personal holding company rules. These provisions generally apply to taxable years beginning after the date of enactment. The act also extends the same country dividend exception of subpart F to the foreign personal holding company rules. This provision applies to taxable years beginning after Mar. 15, 1984.

13. Decontrol of foreign corporations

Under the act, certain exchanges by a controlled foreign corporation of its newly issued stock for shares of its U.S. parent corporation are treated as sales or exchanges by the U.S. parent of stock in the controlled foreign corporation. The act also clarifies the rules that tax the previously untaxed earnings and profits of a controlled foreign corporation at ordinary income rates when its U.S. owner disposes of the shares or liquidates the corporation. It prevents later double taxation of those earnings and profits and double crediting of associated foreign taxes. It also treats direct ownership of a controlled foreign corporation like indirect ownership for the purpose of these rules. The provision generally applies as of the date of enactment.

14. Foreign collapsible corporations

Sales of inventory yield ordinary income, not capital gain. "Collapsible" corporations' assets generally include inventory. Generally, a shareholder's gain on the sale or liquidation of a collapsible corporation is ordinary income rather than capital gain. However, if a collapsible corporation consents under sec. 341(f) to recognize ordinary income on the disposition of its inventory and the like, the shareholder gets capital gain treatment on the sale or liquidation of the corporation. In the case of a consenting foreign corporation, enforcement of the consent may be impractical.

Under the act, in general, a sec. 341(f) consent given by a foreign corporation is not given effect unless regulations provide otherwise. Specifically, this provision is effective for sales or exchanges after the date of enactment.

15. Stapled stock; stapled entities

The act provides generally that if a foreign and a domestic corporation are stapled entities, the foreign corporation generally will be treated as domestic. In addition, if two domestic corporations are stapled entities, each will be treated as owning the other. This provision is generally effective on the date of enactment.

16. Insurance of related parties by a controlled foreign corporation

The act provides that, for purposes of determining foreign base company services income (which is also currently taxable to U.S. shareholders of a controlled foreign corporation), any services performed with respect to any policy of insurance or reinsurance covering risks of a related party will be treated as having been performed in the country in which the insured risk is located. The result of this provision is that the income from this kind of service will be currently taxable. This provision will apply to taxable years of foreign corporations beginning after the date of enactment.

17. Resident aliens

The act provides standards for determining whether an alien individual is a resident of the United States. Under these standards, an individual who spends substantial time in the United States in any year or over a 3-year period will generally be a U.S. resident. A permanent resident for immigration purposes also will be a U.S. resident. This provision is generally effective on Jan. 1, 1985.

18. Community income of nonresident aliens

Prior law allows married couples composed of nonresident aliens to split income for U.S. tax purposes if their home county uses the community property system, but not if it uses the common law system. The act prevents married nonresident aliens from using the community property laws of their home country to split certain income for U.S. tax purposes. This provision is generally effective on Jan. 1, 1985.

19. Foreign sales corporations

Prior law provides a system of tax deferral for Domestic International Sales Corporations (DISCs) and their shareholders. A DISC is a domestic subsidiary of a U.S. company engaged in exporting. The income attributable to exports may be apportioned between the parent and the DISC using special pricing rules.

The act provides for the establishment of foreign sales corporations (FSCs) which typically will be foreign incorporated subsidiaries of U.S. parent corporations engaged in exporting. To qualify as an FSC, a corporation will have to be organized under the laws of a jurisdiction outside the U.S. customs area and meet certain foreign presence requirements.

The provisions of the act will apply to the export income of an FSC if it is managed outside the United States and if some economic processes of the transaction take place outside the United States. In addition, the provisions will apply to the export income of a small FSC attributable to up to $5,000,000 of export receipts whether or not its management or economic processes are foreign.

Under the optional administrative pricing rules, an FSC may earn the greater of 23 percent of the combined taxable income that it and a related party derive from an export transaction, or 1.83 percent of the gross receipts from the transaction.

The act will exempt a portion of the export income of an FSC from U.S. tax. If a transaction is subject to one of the administrative transfer pricing rules, the exempt portion will be 16/23 of the FSC's income from the transaction, generally 16 percent of combined taxable income or 1.27 percent of the gross receipts from the transaction. Under the sec. 482 pricing rules, the exempt portion is limited to 32 percent of FSC income. The provision of the act that decreases the benefits for certain corporate tax preference items reduces the exemption by an additional 1/17 for corporate shareholders. The rest of export income will be subject to U.S. tax. Dividends from export income but not investment income paid by a FSC to a U.S. corporate shareholder will be tax-exempt at the corporate shareholder level.

The act allows U.S. possessions to impose tax on income that arises after Jan. 1, 1987. The act also clarifies that FSC organized in a U.S. possession may maintain its office there rather than in a foreign country.

Companies may continue to use the prior DISC rules for up to $10 million of export receipts but will be required to pay interest based on the T-bill rate on the deferred tax. In addition, the act treats actual distributions of accumulated deferred DISC income as having been previously taxed, so that tax on those amounts will be forgiven.

The act treats deemed distributions for taxable years of DISCs that begin in 1984 and end on Dec. 31, 1984 under the provisions of this act as occurring over 10 years. Under regulations, taxpayers may elect to accelerate the inclusion income of these deemed distributions.

The act requires the Treasury Department to undertake a study of the advisability of providing FSC benefits for export services.

This provision generally will apply to transactions after Dec. 31, 1984.

J. REPORTING, PENALTY, AND OTHER COMPLIANCE PROVISIONS

1. Provisions relating to tax shelters

a. Registration of tax shelters and promoter lists.—Prior law does not provide the Treasury with the means of detecting and tracing tax shelter promotions through the activities of the promoters.

The act provides for registration of tax shelter promotions with the IRS so that the IRS can more effectively manage its activities with respect to tax shelters. Also, the act requires promoters to keep a list of their investors for inspection by the IRS.

b. Promoter penalty.—The Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 provides for a penalty on promoters and salespersons of abusive tax shelters equal to the greater of $1,000 or 10 percent of gross income to be derived from the activity. The act increases the 10 percent penalty to 20 percent of gross income. The act also makes actions aiding and abetting the understatement of tax liability subject to injunction.

c. Interest for tax shelter cases.—The act provides a special, higher interest rate for tax shelter cases of 120 percent of the regular rate, for interest accruing after 1984.

2. Information reporting provisions

a. Mortgage interest reporting.—Prior law does not require reporting by recipients of amounts (such as mortgage interest) that may be deducted by the payor. The act provides that persons who, in connection with their trade or business, receive interest payments totaling $600 per year or more on a mortgage must report that interest to the Internal Revenue Service.

b. Cash reporting.—Prior law provides for reporting of cash transactions by certain financial institutions, but does not require nonfinancial institutions to report receipts of cash.

The act requires persons who, in connection with their trade or business, receive cash payments from another person in excess of $10,000, to report those payments to the Internal Revenue Service.

c. IRA reporting.—Prior law generally allows an individual to deduct the amount of qualified individual retirement account (IRA) contributions made for a year, either during the year or before the due date (with extensions) of the income tax return for the year. The act provides that reports on these contributions are to include the amount and the year to which a contribution relates. The act also provides that an IRA contribution is not deductible for any year unless made on or before the unextended due date of the return for that year.

d. Foreclosure reporting.—Foreclosure in satisfaction of a debt or forgiveness of a debt may give rise to income to the debtor. The act requires persons lending in the course of a trade or business to report to the IRS when the security for a loan is acquired by foreclosure or otherwise in satisfaction of all or part of the debt. Reporting is also required when the borrower abandons the security.

e. Disposition of partnership interests.—When a partnership interest is sold or exchanged, the transferor partner may have reportable gain or loss. In addition, if the value received is attributable to appreciated inventory or unrealized receivables that could produce ordinary income if sold by the partnership, the transferor will be treated as having realized ordinary income. The act requires a partnership to inform the Internal Revenue Service, the seller, and the buyer of the fair market value of the allocable share of unrealized receivables and appreciated inventory when partnership interests are sold or exchanged.

f. Reporting on substitute payments.—A broker who holds securities for a customer in a street name may lend those securities to another for use in a short-sale. If dividends or interest are paid on the securities before the stock is returned to the broker, the short-seller will make substitute payments to the broker. These payments are not eligible for the dividends received deduction or any otherwise applicable interest exclusion. The act requires brokers to notify their customers when payments they receive are amounts in lieu of dividends or tax-exempt interest occurring by reason of a short-sale. Regulatory authority will permit the Treasury to extend these rules to other transactions when appropriate. This provision applies to payments in lieu of dividends or tax-exempt interest made after Dec. 31, 1984.

g. Reporting of State income tax refunds.—State and local governments are required to provide information to the Internal Revenue Service on refunds of State or local income tax, and to supply a copy to the taxpayer in January of the following year. Under temporary regulations, the Treasury Department has provided that reporting is not required when the officer making the refund determines that the individual receives no Federal tax benefit from the tax payment to which the refund relates. The act codifies the provisions of the temporary regulations providing exceptions from the requirements of the reporting to individuals.

h. Backup withholding.—The act provides that, with respect to backup withholding, the Secretary's authority to require that a payee certify under penalties of perjury that his taxpayer identification number is correct is limited to interest, dividends, patronage dividends, and amounts subject to broker reporting.

3. Other compliance provisions

a. Modifications to charitable contribution rules; incorrect valuation penalties.—A charitable contribution is deductible only if verified in the manner required by Treasury regulations (Code sec. 170(a)(1)). The act requires Treasury to issue such regulations, before Jan. 1, 1985, requiring individual donors to obtain an independent, qualified appraisal (and attach a summary of the appraisal, signed by the qualified appraiser, to the return) where the claimed value of donated property, other than publicly traded securities, exceeds certain dollar amounts (generally, $5,000). Also under such regulations, if the donee charity sells donated property for which an appraisal is required within 2 years after receipt, the charity must file an information report on such sale with the IRS (with a copy to the donor). These substantiation and reporting rules apply to contributions made after Dec. 31, 1984.

The act generally amends the penalty for valuation overstatements (sec. 6659) by deleting the exception for property held for more than 5 years, and by extending the penalty to incorrect valuations for estate and gift tax purposes. Also, in the case of charitable contribution deduction overvaluations only, the act increases the sec. 6659 penalty to a flat 30 percent of the tax liability understatement where the claimed valuation is 150 percent or more of the correct value, and provides that the penalty cannot be waived by the IRS unless (in addition to the waiver requirements of prior law) the claimed value was based on a qualified appraisal made by a qualified appraiser and the donor made a good faith investigation of value. These modifications apply to returns filed after Dec. 31, 1984.

b. Regulation of appraisers.—Prior law allows the Treasury to regulate the practice of attorneys and accountants who appear before the Treasury. No comparable authority exists with respect to appraisers. The act provides authority for the Treasury to bar disreputable appraisers from practice before the Treasury.

c. Tax deposits.—The act requires taxpayers required to deposit more than once a month to make any deposit of $20,000 or more on or before the due date of the deposit. They may no longer treat deposits mailed 2 days in advance of the due date as timely made.

d. Interest on penalties.—The act provides that interest shall be charged on the penalties for failure to file, valuation overstatement, valuation understatement, and substantial understatement of tax as if the penalties were assessed on the due date of the return (with extensions).

e. False withholding certificates.—Language in the criminal penalty with respect to false withholding information which provides that no other penalty may apply is eliminated.

f. Tax litigation.—The penalty (expanded in 1982) for maintaining dilatory Tax Court actions is made applicable to all cases pending 120 days after enactment. Title 18 is amended to provide for appropriate venue of multi-party criminal tax litigation.

g. Changes in accounting methods.—The act precludes a taxpayer from asserting that the Internal Revenue Service has not consented to a change in accounting method as a defense to any penalty unless the taxpayer has requested permission to change methods.

h. Statute of limitations relating to contributions to the capital of a corporation.—Prior law provides an exclusion from income for certain payments to a utility in aid of construction if expenditures are made in the following 2 years. The act provides that the statute of limitations does not expire before the expiration of 3 years from the date the Secretary is notified concerning whether or not the contribution has been expended in the manner required.

K. DEPRECIATION AND RELATED PROVISIONS

1. Real estate depreciation

Real estate can generally be depreciated, on an accelerated basis, over 15 years. The act provides that new or used real property, other than low-income housing, is to be depreciated over not less than 18 years under tables to be prescribed by the Treasury. Such tables are to use a mid-month convention. Special rules are provided for components.

Subject to transitional rules, the provision is applicable with respect to property placed in service by a taxpayer after Mar. 15, 1984 (June 22, 1984, in tax case of the mid-month convention).

2. Depreciation recapture and installment sales

The installment sale rules generally override the depreciation recapture rules applicable to real and personal property. Thus, generally, no real or personal property depreciation recapture income is recognized in an installment sale until the taxpayer receives installment obligation payments. Under the act, all such depreciation recapture income realized is to be recognized at the time of the installment sale. Gain in excess of such recapture income is taken into account under the installment method.

Subject to a transitional rule, the provision applies to installment sales after June 6, 1984.

3. Movies and sound recordings

Under the act, movies cannot qualify as recovery property and are eligible for the investment credit only under the special investment credit rules applicable to certain movies.

Subject to transitional rules, the provisions are effective as of the effective date of the rules defining recovery property.

Under prior law, it is unclear whether sound recordings qualify as tangible personal property for depreciation and investment credit purposes. The act provides that any sound recording may, by election, be treated as 3-year property and eligible for a 6-percent investment credit or, if the taxpayer fails to so elect, depreciated under the income forecast method or a similar method with no investment credit. Special rules are provided for contingent amounts, foreign production costs, and certain other items. Sound recordings distributed outside the United States are not subject to the tax-exempt entity leasing provisions of the act.

The provisions are generally effective for sound recordings placed in service after Mar. 15, 1984.

4. Three-month window for new property for tax credit purposes

The 3-month window applicable in determining whether property is new property for purposes of the regular investment credit is made applicable for energy credit purposes as well. The 3-month window rule is also clarified.

The provisions are effective for property placed in service after Apr. 11, 1984.

L. MISCELLANEOUS TAX REFORM PROVISIONS

1. Inclusion of tax benefit items

Under prior law, an individual taxpayer who receives a State tax refund may exclude from income an amount equal to the excess of the zero bracket amount over the taxpayer's other itemized deductions for the year in which the State taxes were deducted. This exclusion is permitted even though the deduction of this amount in the prior year resulted in a tax benefit.

The act provides that where a taxpayer recovers a previously deducted amount, the recovered amount is excluded from gross income only to the extent such amount did not reduce income subject to tax. This provision will apply to amounts recovered after 1983.

2. Low-interest and interest-free loans

Under prior law, an interest-free or low-interest loan (below-market loan) to a family member results in a gift from the lender to the borrower for Federal gift tax purposes. To date, no court has directly held that such a loan also has any income tax consequences. Although the Internal Revenue Service has taken the position that, in general, a below-market loan to an employee or shareholder results in an economic benefit that should be included in income for Federal income tax purposes, the Tax

Court has consistently held that these non-family below-market loans do not result in taxable income.

The below-market loan provision of the act requires recharacterization of below-market loans in cases where there is serious potential for tax avoidance. Where the act applies, the parties are treated as if (1) interest is charged and (2) the lender made a gift or other payment to the borrower which, in turn, is used by the borrower to pay the interest. A statutory interest rate is provided. Under de minimis rules, loans of $10,000 or less generally are not subject to the provision, unless a principal purpose of the interest arrangement is the avoidance of any Federal tax.

The act applies to the following enumerated categories of loans:

(1) Gift loans used to shift income between related taxpayers, such as family loans;

(2) Compensation-related loans used to avoid employment taxes or limits on the deductibility of investment interest;

(3) Corporation-shareholder loans used to claim deductions for dividends, or to circumvent other corporate tax rules; and

(4) Tax avoidance loans which are other loans if a principal purpose of the interest arrangement is the avoidance of any Federal tax.

In addition, under the act, the Treasury is authorized to promulgate regulations providing for the application of the provision to loans other than those described above. These regulations will apply the provision only in cases in which the interest arrangement has a significant effect on the tax liability of the lender or the borrower. Any loan recharacterized under the regulations will be treated under the general rules, so that interest will be imputed at the statutory rate and, in effect, rebated by the lender to the borrower. Finally, authority is provided for Treasury to issue regulations exempting from the provision classes of loans otherwise subject to the provision if the interest arrangements do not have a significant effect on the tax liability of the lender or the borrower.

The act also makes it clear that a loan under a Federal rural low-income housing program (e.g., the FmHA sec. 515 program) that provides for a market rate of interest, and a reduction in loan payments to compensate the borrower for the lower rents charged is not to be considered below-market interest rate loan, provided the principal balance of the loan is amortized in accordance with the market rate of interest.

The act applies to term loans made after June 6, 1984, and amounts outstanding on demand loans after such date. Amounts outstanding on demand loans on June 6, 1984, will not be subject to the provision if repaid prior to 60 days after the date of enactment. Advances to continuing care facilities by residents to such facilities made prior to June 6, 1984, are not subject to the provision.

3. Income averaging

Income averaging is presently available to taxpayers with "averageable income." Averageable income is current year taxable income in excess of 120 percent of average taxable income in the 4 preceding years. In effect, income averaging widens the tax brackets by a factor of five with respect to averageable income.

The act increases the 120-percent requirement to 140 percent and provides that only the three preceding years are to be taken into account. The act modifies income averaging so that it, in effect, widens the tax brackets by a factor of four, not five, with respect to averageable income.

These changes are effective for taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1983.

4. Limitations on luxury automobiles and personal use of business property

Prior law provides for deductions for the expenses of operating an automobile or other business property in connection with business use, except to the extent used for entertainment purposes. The act provides that the maximum investment tax credit that can be claimed with respect to an automobile is $1,000 and the maximum depreciation that can be claimed is $4,000 in the year it is placed in service and $6,000 in any other year. The act provides that unless business use of an automobile or other specified business property is more than 50 percent of total use, the investment tax credit and accelerated cost recovery system deductions (ACRS) are not allowed. Instead, the taxpayer must use a straight-line depreciation method and a longer useful life. This provision is effective for property purchased, or leases entered into, after June 18, 1984. The act also requires that adequate contemporaneous records, such as logs of business use of an automobile, be kept, effective in 1985.

5. Treatment of certain related party transactions

The act amends the related party rules (sec. 267) so that a taxpayer would generally be placed on the cash method of accounting for purposes of deducting business expenses and interest owed to a related party cash basis taxpayer. These rules will be extended to amounts accrued by a partnership to its partners and vice versa.

Also, the act provides loss deferral and accrual provisions to transactions between corporations which are members of a controlled group of corporations, using a 50-percent control test.

These provisions generally will apply to taxable years beginning after 1983. However, the provision will not apply to (1) interest on indebtedness incurred on or before Sept. 29, 1983, or incurred pursuant to a contract binding on that date and all times thereafter and (2) other expenses made pursuant to a contract which was binding on Sept. 29, 1983, and at all times thereafter.

6. Section 1231 property

The act provides that gains from the disposition of business property will be treated as ordinary income to the extent of ordinary losses from the sale or exchange of such property in the previous 5 years.

The provision will be effective for taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1984.

7. Use of related party structures to reduce tax on coal operations

Taxpayers may reduce the effective rate of tax on coal mining operations by establishing related party structures to take advantage of the capital gains treatment provided in sec. 631(c). The Code expressly prohibits such multiparty structures in the case of iron ore. The act extends the related party prohibition to coal royalties, effective for sales dispositions after Sept. 30, 1985, except for coal sold under certain fixed contracts prior to Jan. 1, 1990.

8. Taxation of Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation

The act repeals the tax exemption of the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation ("Freddie Mac"), effective Jan. 1, 1985.

9. Transfers of depreciable property between related parties

The act treats patent applications as depreciable property for purposes of characterizing income under sec. 1239, and treats a taxpayer and a trust in which the taxpayer has a beneficial interest as related persons, effective Mar. 1, 1984.

10. Application of related party rule to certain tax provisions

Present law (sec. 265(2)) disallows a deduction for interest on debt used to purchase or carry tax-exempt obligations. The application of this rule to related parties is unclear.

The act provides that the Treasury Department is to prescribe such regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to prevent the avoidance of tax under provisions (including sec. 265(2) and other provisions) which deal with (1) the linking of borrowing to investment, or (2) diminishing risks, through the use of related persons, pass-through entities, or other intermediaries. For purposes of sec. 265(2), related persons will include (1) a husband and wife, (2) a person and certain 80-percent entities with respect to such person, and (3) in appropriate cases, a person and any minor children of such person. No inference is intended that any other code provision may be circumvented by the use of related parties, pass-through entities, or other intermediaries, or that any provision (including sec. 265(2)), by its own terms, is not applicable in such cases. The related party rule will not operate to disallow a deduction merely because one corporation borrows in the ordinary course of business and an affilitated bank or insurance company holds tax-exempt obligations.

The provision regarding related parties, pass-through entities, and other intermediaries is generally effective on the date of enactment; however, for purposes of sec. 265(2) only, this provision is to be effective with respect to (1) term obligations incurred after the date of enactment, and (2) demand obligations outstanding 60 days after the date of enactment.

II. Life Insurance Tax Provisions

A. LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY TAXATION

Under prior law, life insurance companies could be taxed on different tax bases. As a consequence, different companies derive varying degrees of benefit from the various special deductions generally allowable only to life insurance companies and from the reserve computation rules of prior law.

In lieu of the three-phase pattern of taxation, the act provides a new single-phase tax structure. This structure embodies the tax rules applicable to corporations generally except that certain special rules apply to address issues unique to the life insurance industry.

1. Computation of the deduction for reserves

Under the act, deductions for additions to reserves more closely reflect each company's liabilities to policyholders than do solvency reserves used for State law purposes. Further, the deductions are computed on the basis of uniform rules regardless of the particular assumptions used for purposes of computing statutory reserves.

Under these rules, a life insurance company can deduct an amount equal to the excess of the higher of (1) the net surrender value of the contract or (2) the federally prescribed reserve of the contract, over the amount of the reserve for tax purposes at the end of the prior year. The Federally prescribed reserve is the reserve computed using assumptions that generally reflect the highest interest rates and most recednt mortality tables permitted to be used under most State laws. Companies that have traditionally used the net level term method of computing reserves with respect to noncancellable accident and health insurance contracts may continue to use that reserve method.

2. Limitation on mutual company deductions

A mutual life insurance company is owned by its policyholders. These policyholders receive distributions from the company which may represent price reductions or other policyholder benefits, interest, or returns on the policyholders' investment in the enterprise. (In contrast, a stock life insurance company is owned by shareholders. Although a stock company may pay policyholder dividends to its policyholders, such amounts would generally include only price reductions and policyholder benefits.) Under the act, amounts distributed by a mutual company to policyholders are, in effect, fragmented, and no deduction is allowed at the company level for amounts distributed to policyholders in their capacity as owners of the company. This is accomplished by means of an ownership differential provision. Under this provision, each mutual company's deductions for payments and credits to policyholders are reduced by the amount of an imputed return on the company's equity. There is a special 5-year transition rule for certain mutuals with much higher than average equities.

The act also mandates a study in which the Treasury would analyze the operation of the ownership differential provision in its first 3 years.

3. Stock life insurance subsidiaries of mutual companies

As a general rule, under the act, a stock life insurance subsidiary of a mutual life insurance company is treated as a stock company for tax purposes. However, for purposes of computing the limitation on mutual company deductions, the equity of a stock subsidiary is included in the mutual parent.

4. Special rule for small companies

Under the act, a small life insurance company is allowed a deduction equal to 60 percent of the first $3 million of its otherwise taxable income. This deduction phases out as otherwise taxable income increases from $3 million to $15 million. The amount of this deduction is computed on the basis of a controlled group and does not apply to income related to noninsurance activities. Generally, a small company is one the assets of which (computed on the basis of an affiliated group including both insurance and noninsurance members) are less than $500 million.

5. Rate reduction

All life insurance companies are allowed a deduction equal to 20 percent of their otherwise taxable income (reduced by the small company deduction). This deduction is computed on the basis of a controlled group and does not apply to income related to noninsurance activities.

6. Tax-exempt income

Under prior law, liabilities to policyholders are treated as funded proportionately out of taxable and tax-exempt income. The act generally continues this approach.

7. Reinsurance

The provision under which the Treasury is granted authority to allocate and recharacterize income, deductions, assets, reserves, credits, and other items in the case of related party reinsurance contracts is retained and broadened in its application. Also, the Treasury is given authority to make adjustments to eliminate significant tax avoidance effect in the case of unrelated party reinsurance contracts.

8. Definition of a life insurance company

For purposes of determining whether a company qualifies as a life insurance company, funds held with respect to contracts that do not involve permanent purchase rate guarantees are not to be treated as insurance reserves.

9. Variable contracts

The act eliminates capital gains on assets held for variable contracts, generally. It also gives authority to Treasury to prescribe diversification standards for funds underlying variable contracts, with a safe harbor for funds that meet the diversification requirements of a regulated investment company (provided no more than 55 percent of the fund's assets are in cash items).

10. Effective date

Generally, the effective date for provisions dealing with the taxation of life insurance companies is Jan. 1, 1984. Income that would otherwise result from recomputation of reserves (including sec. 818(c) recomputations and statutory-to-tax recomputations) and the change in accounting for policyholder dividends at the beginning of 1984 is forgiven under the act.

The amount of deferred gain from operations held in the policyholder surplus account of the company (the Phase III account) is frozen at its 1983 year-end level and distributions from such account will be taxed when distributed under the prior law rules, which are retained.

Treasury's authority over related party reinsurance contracts is effective for risks reinsured on or after Sept. 27, 1983, and over unrelated party reinsurance contracts for risks reinsured after Dec. 31, 1984.

B. LIFE INSURANCE PRODUCTS

1. Definition of life insurance

Prior law does not contain a definition of life insurance or of a life insurance contract. It does, however, contain temporary rules for purposes of determining whether benefits paid under certain flexible premium products qualify as life insurance benefits exempt from income tax. The act adopts a definition that is based on the temporary rules contained in prior law. A contract is treated as a life insurance contract if it meets (1) a "cash value accumulation" test, or (2) a "guideline premium" and "cash value corridor" test. Under the cash value accumulation test a contract qualifies if the cash surrender value accumulated under the contract does not exceed the cash surrender value which would arise in a traditional whole life policy assuming a reasonable interest rate is used in computing cash surrender value. Under the guideline premium limitation, contracts are disqualified if the amount of the policyholder's investment in the contract exceeds a traditional level of investment. The cash value corridor disqualifies contracts which build up excessive amounts of cash surrender value relative to life insurance risk. Generally, the new definition applies to contracts issued after Dec. 31, 1984, except for certain increasing death benefit policies which must satisfy new rules starting on July 1, 1984. The temporary rules for flexible premium products are also extended through 1984.

For contracts that fail to meet the definition at any time, the pure insurance portion of the contract (i.e., the difference between the face amount and the cash surrender value) will be treated as term life insurance. The cash surrender value will be treated as a currently taxable deposit fund.

2. Annuities

Under the act, the prior law exception from the 5-percent penalty for distributions of income allocable to investments within 10 years is repealed. Thus, the penalty generally will apply to distributions prior to age 59½. In addition, if the owner of a deferred annuity dies prior to annuitization, the income in the annuity must be distributed within 5 years unless the contract is annuitized within 1 year or the beneficiary receiving ownership of the annuity contract is a spouse.

3. Group-term life insurance

The antidiscrimination rules and the $50,000 limitation on the exclusion from income of premiums for group-term benefits are extended to retired employees. For plans not in existence on Jan. 1, 1984, these rules are effective for taxable years beginning after 1983. The extension of the $50,000 limitation will not apply to group plans existing on January 1, 1984, for any covered individual who was employed under the plan during 1983 (or was retired by Jan. 1, 1984) and was 55 years or older on January 1, 1984. The new antidiscrimination rules will apply to existing plans starting on or after Jan. 1, 1987, for employees retiring after that date.

III. CHARITABLE DEDUCTION RULES; PRIVATE FOUNDATION PROVISIONS; EXEMPT ORGANIZATIONS

A. CHARITABLE DEDUCTION RULES

1. Nonoperating (grantmaking) foundations

Contributions by individuals of cash or property to private nonoperating foundations (and certain other charitable organizations) generally are deductible up to 20 percent of the donor's adjusted gross income (Code sec. 170(b)(1)(B)), with no carryover of excess contributions. The act raises this limitation to 30 percent for gifts of cash and ordinary-income property (retaining the 20-percent limitation for all gifts of capital-gain property), and makes excess contributions eligible for a 5-year carryover.

The act also provides that contributions to private nonoperating foundations of certain appreciated stock are deductible at the stock's fair market value (rather than at the prior-law limitation of the donor's basis plus 60 percent of the appreciation). The increased deduction applies only to donations of up to 10 percent of the stock of a corporation for which (on the contribution date) market quotations are readily available on an established securities market.

The percentage limitation and carryover provisions of the act apply to contributions made in taxable years ending after the date of enactment. The increased deduction for contributions of certain appreciated stock applies to contributions made after the date of enactment and before Jan. 1, 1995.

2. Expansion of circumstances in which a deduction may be claimed for qualified conservation contributions

Prior law permits a deduction for contributions of qualified property interests for conservation purposes if certain requirements are satisfied. One of these requirements is that surface mining must be prohibited on the property with respect to which the contribution is made. The act repeals the surface mining prohibition if the following two requirements are satisfied: (1) the surface and mineral estates in the property were separated before June 13, 1976, and (2) the probability of surface mining occurring on the property is so remote as to be negligible.

This provision is effective for transfers after the date of enactment.

3. Charitable expense deduction for use of automobile

The act increases, from 9 cents to 12 cents per mile, the standard mileage rate allowed as a charitable deduction (if the actual expenses method is not used) for use of a passenger automobile in rendering services to a charitable organization, effective Jan. 1, 1985.

B. PRIVATE FOUNDATION PROVISIONS

1. Excise tax on investment income

The act reduces from 2 to 1 percent the rate of the excise tax on net investment income of private foundations (sec. 4940), effective for post-1984 taxable years, but only if the foundation's payout for charitable purposes (computed as a 5-year average) is increased by an equivalent amount.

Also, the act provides that a private operating foundation (such as a museum or library) which previously had been publicly supported for at least 10 years (or qualified as an operating foundation on Jan. 1, 1983), which has a governing body broadly representative of the general public (with at least 75 percent consisting of persons unrelated to the foundation), and none of whose officers otherwise are disqualified persons, is exempt from the 2-percent excise tax on net investment income, effective for taxable years beginning after 1984.

2. Mandatory payout rules

Under prior law, a private grantmaking foundation generally must make charitable payouts ("qualifying distributions") at least equal to 5 percent of the fair market value of its net investment assets (Code sec. 4942). Administrative expenses incurred in making grants to other charities or in directly engaging in the active conduct of charitable activities count, without limitation, toward satisfying the 5-percent payout requirement, and hence may reduce the amounts which the foundation actually distributes to charitable beneficiaries.

Under the act, a grantmaking foundation must actually pay out amounts equal to 4 35 percent of its payout base (net investment assets) as grants or contributions, expenditures (including qualifying administrative costs) incurred directly for the active conduct by the foundation of exempt activities of the foundation, or program-related investments (including qualifying administrative costs of making such investments). Other administrative expenses, including those incurred by the foundation in making grants or contributions, do not count toward the new 4.35-percent payout requirement; however, reasonable and necessary grant administrative expenses can be added to that amount in meeting the overall 5-percent qualifying distributions requirement. (The new payout computation is made on the basis of a 3-year average.) This modification to the prior-law payout requirement is effective for taxable years beginning after 1984, but will not apply to taxable years beginning after 1990.

3. Divestiture of excess business holdings

In the case of an unusually large gift or bequest after 1969 of diverse or complex excess business holdings, the act provides the IRS with discretionary authority to permit an additional five-year period for divestiture on a showing by the foundation of diligent efforts to dispose of the holdings within the 5-year period permitted under prior law, but that divestiture had not been possible because of the size and complexity or diversity of the holdings. This provision applies with respect to business holdings as to which the initial 5-year divestiture period ends after Oct. 31, 1983.

The act generally retains the divestiture rules of prior law (sec. 4943) with respect to "grandfathered" excess business holdings which were held by private foundations on May 26, 1969. The act includes provisions modifying the divestiture requirements with respect to the "downward ratchet" rule, eligibility for the 20-year first divestiture phase, the period for certain required divestitures in the second and third phases, technical correction in the description of the Herndon Foundation, and the treatment of an ESOP as a disqualified person for purposes of the divestiture rules applicable to holdings acquired under a pre-1969 will.

4. Expenditure responsibility and reliance rules

The act exempts from the expenditure responsibility requirements imposed on foundation grantors those grants to private operating foundations which the act exempts from the 2-percent excise tax on net investment income, effective for post-1984 grants.

The Treasury Department is to review its expenditure responsibility regulations for purposes of modifying requirements which are found to be unduly burdensome or unnecessary, and is to modify the required grantor reports to the IRS. Also, Treasury regulations are to be amended to extend to five years the advance ruling period during which qualifying new organizations may be considered public charities, and to permit greater reliance on IRS classifications of new charitable organizations in the first 5 years of their existence and in any other circumstances in which Treasury concludes that greater reliance is appropriate.

5. Abatement of first-tier penalty taxes

The act provides the IRS with discretionary authority to abate the automatic first-tier penalty taxes (other than the sec. 4941 tax on self-dealing) if the foundation establishes that the violation was due to reasonable cause and not to willful neglect, and corrects the violation. This provision applies to taxable events occurring after 1984.

6. Definitions

The act provides that the lineal descendants who are considered members of the family of a substantial contributor or other disqualified person, and thus themselves are considered to be disqualified persons, are limited to the individual's children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren, and their spouses, effective Jan. 1, 1985.

In addition, the act provides rules under which a person's status as a substantial contributor terminates in certain circumstances after 10 years with no connection to the foundation, effective for post-1984 taxable years. Also, the act provides special retroactive relief from the excise tax on self-dealing in a particular case where continued status as a disqualified person had triggered tax on a 1978 transaction, provided that the foundation received fair market value.

7. Public disclosure requirements

The act provides that, beginning in 1985, private foundation notices which must be published annually in a newspaper are to include the telephone number of the foundation's principal office. Also, the IRS is directed to enforce fully the present-law rules concerning Form 990-PF information returns.

C. EXEMPT ORGANIZATIONS

1. Acquisition indebtedness of certain educational institutions

Tax-exempt organizations (including qualified pension trusts and IRAs) generally are subject to tax on income from a trade or business that is unrelated to the organization's exempt purposes, with exclusions for certain types of passive income. Income that is subject to tax includes income from debt-financed property. A special exception is provided for real property acquired or improved by a qualified pension trust if the acquisition satisfies certain restrictions.

The act extends the special exception to the debt-financed property rules to certain educational institutions (and certain affiliated support organizations). For any organization (including a qualified pension trust) to qualify for the exception, certain additional restrictions must be met. This provision generally is effective with respect to indebtedness incurred after the date of enactment. Certain transition rules are provided.

2. Exemption from UBIT for certain gambling income

The act exempts from the unrelated business income tax income derived by nonprofit organizations from conducting certain games of chance, provided that State or local law as of Oct. 5, 1983, permits such games to be conducted only by nonprofit organizations. This provision applies retroactively to games of chance conducted after June 30, 1981.

3. Tax status of nonprofit child care organizations

The act provides that nonprofit day care centers qualify for tax-exempt status, and are eligible to receive tax-deductible contributions, if both (1) substantially all of the dependent care provided to children by the organization is for the purpose of enabling individuals to be gainfully employed, and (2) the services provided by the organization are available to the general public. This provision is effective for taxable years beginning after the date of enactment.

4. Church tax examinations

The IRS may examine church books of account (i.e., financial records) only to the extent necessary for a determination of tax. The IRS also is required to provide special advance notice before examining church books of account.

The act provides several new statutory procedures applicable to examinations of churches. Under these procedures, the IRS may commence an examination of church tax liabilities only if an IRS regional commissioner reasonably believes that the church is not tax-exempt or has taxable income. The IRS will be required to provide expanded notice before examining church records and to offer a pre-examination conference to church officials. In addition, an examination of church tax liabilities generally will be required to be completed within 2 years after it is commenced. These provisions are effective for church tax examinations commencing after Dec. 31, 1984.

IV. TAX SIMPLIFICATION PROVISIONS

1. Estimated income tax for individuals

The individual estimated income tax rules of prior law are simplified and clarified by the bill. Generally, an individual will be required to make estimated tax payments (including withholding payments) equal to the lesser of 80 percent of the current year's tax or 100 percent of the prior year's tax; penalties will be based on the underpayment from this amount. Payments based on annualized income will be allowed. The Secretary may waive the penalty for failure to make payments by reason of a casualty, disaster or other unusual circumstance where it would be inequitable to impose the penalty. Estimated tax payments of the alternative minimum tax will be required.

The provision will generally be effective for taxable years beginning after 1984.

2. Domestic relations

a. Transfers of property between spouses or incident to divorce.—Under prior law, gain is recognized on certain transfers of property in exchange for marital rights of a spouse or former spouse. The act provides that property transfers between spouses or, if incident to divorce, between former spouses, will not result in the recognition of gain or loss. The transferee will hold the property at the transferor's basis. Also, investment tax credits will not be recaptured.

The provision generally will be effective for transfers after the date of enactment of the act. The act also allows taxpayers to elect to have this provision apply to transfers after Dec. 31, 1983, and on or before the date of enactment.

b. Alimony.—Alimony is deductible by the payor and includible in the income of the payee. The act revises the rules relating to the definition of alimony. Generally, only cash payments that will terminate on the death of the payee spouse will qualify as alimony. Alimony payments, if in excess of $10,000 per year, generally must be payable for at least 6 years and must not decline by more than $10,000. The prior law requirement that the payment be based on a legal support obligation is repealed. Payors are required to furnish to the IRS the social security number of the payee spouse. A $50 penalty for failure to do so is imposed.

The provision generally is effective for divorce or separation agreements or orders executed after 1984.

c. Dependency exemption.—The act provides that the $1,000 dependency exemption for a child of divorced or separated parents generally will be allocated to the custodial parent unless the custodial parent signs a written declaration that he or she will not claim the exemption for the year. Each parent may claim the medical expenses that he or she pays for the child, for purposes of computing the medical expense deduction.

Income from certain sheltered workshops will not be taken into account in determining the dependency exemption.

The provision is effective for taxable years beginning after 1984.

d. Innocent spouse relieved of liability in certain cases.—Under prior law, a spouse may be relieved of liability where he or she signs a joint return and there was a substantial omission of income attributable to the other spouse. The act extends these rules to situations involving claims of grossly erroneous deductions and credits and replaces the substantial omission of income test with a substantial understatement of tax test. Also, the act overrides community property laws in certain situations where it is equitable to do so.

e. Gift and estate tax treatment of certain property settlements.—The act conforms the estate tax treatment with respect to transfers of property to a former spouse under certain property settlements with the law allowing a gift tax exemption for such transfers. The act also extends the period to enter into a property settlement agreement in order to avoid gift tax. The provision will apply to gifts made and to estates of decedents dying after date of enactment.

3. At-risk rules

The act amends the at-risk limitation on the investment tax credit by providing that the base for the credit will be reduced by nonrecourse indebtedness related to the property (i.e., a loan on which there is no personal liability). Qualified commercial financing, defined as financing from an unrelated party regularly engaged in commercial lending where no more than 80 percent of all financing for the property is nonrecourse, will be excluded from the limitation. In the case of an S corporation, recourse financing at the corporate level that is provided by a qualified commercial lender will be considered recourse financing at the shareholder level if the debt is related to property used by the corporation in an active trade or business with at least 3 full-time non-owner employees.

The act exempts from both the loss limitation rules of sec. 465 and the investment tax credit at-risk rules, the active trade or business activities of a regular business corporation. To qualify, a trade or business must have 3 full-time non-owner employees and its out-of-pocket expenses must exceed 15 percent of gross income.

The act also requires that, for a lessee to be eligible to claim the full investment tax credit, the lessee must be at risk for rental payments the present value of which is equal to at least two times the credit percentage plus 10 percent of the fair market value of the property.

The investment tax credit provisions generally will apply to property placed in service in taxable years ending after the date of enactment. The changes to the sec. 465 rules will apply to taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1983.

4. Miscellaneous Treasury administrative provisions

The act makes a number of minor amendments relating to Treasury administrative provisions.

5. Distilled spirits administrative provisions

The act repeals the occupational tax on manufacturers of stills and makes the statutory requirement that the Treasury Department be notified upon removal of any still from the place of its manufacture discretionary with the Treasury. The act also modifies the rules governing allowance of drawbacks with respect to distilled spirits used for food or medicinal purposes. Additionally, the Treasury Department is authorized to disclose certain information about alcohol fuel producers to administrators of State alcohol laws. The requirement that certain containers of distilled spirits bear Government-supplied strip stamps is repealed; these containers will continue to be required to bear tamper-proof closure devices. The act also expands the circumstances in which distilled spirits can be withdrawn from bond without payment of tax for use in the production of nonbeverage (e.g., cooking) wine.

6. Tax Court provisions

The act increases the small claims case dollar limit from $5,000 to $10,000. The title of the Tax Court "commissioners" is changed to "special trial judges". The act provides that the Tax Court may prevent public disclosure of trade secrets or other confidential information.

7. Simplification of income tax credits

In general, the act groups existing income tax credits into logical categories and provides uniform tax liability limitations and carryover rules. The business credits (i.e., investment tax credit, targeted jobs credit, alcohol fuels credit, and ESOP credit) are combined into one credit and allowed up to 100 percent of the first $25,000 of tax liability and 85 percent of the remainder. The research credit continues to be allowable against 100 percent of tax liability. A 3-year carryback and 15-year carryforward period on a FIFO basis is allowed for the business credits.

This provision applies to taxable years beginning after 1983.

8. Miscellaneous tax provisions

a. Perferred stock eligible for small business corporation treatment.—A taxpayer is allowed to deduct, as an ordinary loss, up to $50,000 ($100,000 in the case of a joint return) of loss on the disposition of certain common stock of a domestic small business corporation. The act, which applies to stock issued after the date of enactment, extends ordinary loss treatment to preferred stock of qualified small business corporations.

b. Medical expense deduction for certain lodging.—Individuals who itemize deductions may deduct certain expenses paid for medical care to the extent the expenses exceed 5 percent of adjusted gross income. Amounts paid for transportation primarily for and essential to medical care are treated as expenses paid for medical care. Amounts paid for lodging while away from home, however, do not qualify for the deduction.

Under the act, certain expenses for lodging while away from home to receive medical care as an outpatient at a hospital or certain similar medical care facilities are treated as expenses paid for medical care, up to a limit of $50 per eligible person per day. This provision is effective for taxable years beginning after 1983.

9. Repeal of certain obsolete provisions (deadwood)

Three provisions (Code secs. 405, 409, and 1251) are repealed as deadwood.

V. Provisions Relating to Employers, Employees and to Retirement

A. WELFARE BENEFIT PLANS

1. Employer deductions

The act provides new rules for determining the timing and the amount of an employer's deduction for contributions to a welfare benefit plan. Under the act, no deduction is allowed with respect to a deferred compensation arrangement or an unfunded plan before the time the compensation or benefit is provided. In the case of a funded plan, a the extent that it does not exceed the amount that could be deducted by a cash-basis employer who paid the benefit directly, plus a limited allowance for an addition to a reserve. The reserve limits provided under the act generally do not apply in the case of a fund under which no employer provides more than 10 percent of total contributions.

A reserve generally is allowed equal to the value of claims that have been incurred but which are unpaid for disability, medical, life insurance, severance pay and supplemental unemployment compensation benefits. In addition, a reserve allowing prefunding over the working lives of employees is allowed for retiree medical benefits and for the tax-free portion of retiree life insurance benefits if the plans satisfy certain requirements. An excise tax of 100 percent applies to coverage provided under plans which do not satisfy these or other requirements. Further, a special reserve is allowed for supplemental unemployment compensation and severance pay benefits, based upon past experience, and higher limits for all benefits are to be provided by regulation for collectively bargained plans.

Generally, under the act, employer deductions with respect to a contribution of a facility to a welfare benefit fund are allowed under the usual depreciation rules. In the case of a child care facility, 60-month amortization is provided for the depreciable element of the adjusted basis of the property. Corresponding rules are provided in the case of a facility purchased by a welfare benefit fund.

2. Taxes on excess reserves

The act provides that income on excess reserves of a welfare benefit fund are to be subject to income tax. In the case of a tax-exempt fund, the income is to be subject to the tax on unrelated business taxable income. In the case of other funds, the income is includible in the gross income of the employer. Generally reserves are to be treated as excess reserves to the extent they exceed the level that applies in determining deduction limits. The act provides a transition rule, however, with respect to excess reserves to provide certain life insurance and medical benefits to retirees.

3. Additional requirements for tax-exempt status

The act provides rules prohibiting discrimination in favor of highly compensated employees by a tax exempt voluntary employees' beneficiary association (VEBA) or a group legal services organization (GLSO). The act also requires that a VEBA, GLSO or supplemental unemployment compensation benefit trust notify the Internal Revenue Service of a claim to tax-exempt status.

4. Study

The act provides for a study to be submitted to the Congress by the Secretary of the Treasury on or before Feb. 1, 1985, of the desirability and possible means of providing minimum standards for participation, accrual, vesting, and funding of welfare benefit plans.

5. Effective dates

The provisions of the act relating to deductions for contributions to funded plans and taxes on excess reserves are generally effective for contributions paid or accrued in taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1985. The limitations affecting deductions with respect to facilities, however, generally apply after June 22, 1984, and the provision applicable to unfunded deferred compensation or unfunded benefit plans generally applies to amounts paid or incurred after the date of enactment. The provisions relating to additional requirements for tax exempt status of such a fund apply for taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1984.

B. GENERAL PENSION PROVISIONS

1. Distribution rules for qualified plans

Distributions to an individual under a qualified pension, profit-sharing, or stock bonus plan ("qualified plan") prior to age 59½ are subject to an additional 10-percent income tax to the extent that the amounts are attributable to years in which the individual was a key employee in a top-heavy plan. In addition, prior law requires that distributions to a key employee in a top-heavy plan commence no later than age 70½ without regard to whether the key employee has retired.

Under prior law, in the case of a qualified plan or an IRA, after the death of the participant and the participant's surviving spouse, any distributions to beneficiaries must be made within 5 years after the death of the participant or surviving spouse.

Under prior law, if the balance to the credit of an employee is paid as a qualifying rollover distribution from a qualified plan (or tax-sheltered annuity), all or any portion of the distribution may be rolled over, within 60 days of the date of the distribution, to another qualified plan (or tax-sheltered annuity) or to an IRA. No rollover is permitted for a plan distribution that is not a total distribution.

Under the act, the additional 10-percent income tax applies to amounts attributable to years in which the individual was a 5-percent owner of the employer without regard to whether the plan was top heavy. Rollovers to IRAs of certain partial distributions under a qualified plan are permitted. In addition, the act provides that distributions are to commence at age 70½ to all 5-percent owners of the employer.

The act changes the after-death distribution rules to provide that the 5-year rule is satisfied under a qualified plan or an IRA if (1) an immediate annuity contract is distributed to the beneficiary or (2) an annuity is paid from or under the plan. Similar rules are provided for annuity contracts (including tax-sheltered annuities).

The provisions generally are effective for plan years beginning after Dec. 31, 1984. The provisions relating to rollovers of partial distributions apply to distributions made after thedate of enactment, in taxable years ending after that date.

2. Treatment of distributions of benefits substantially all of which are derived from employee contributions

An employee-contribution-only plan may be a qualified plan. In addition, nondeductible employee contributions to a qualified plan may be withdrawn at any time without penalty. The first withdrawals before an annuity commences are treated as a return of any nondeductible contributions, which are not includible in gross income.

Under the act, in the case of a plan in which more than 85 percent of total contributions during a representative period are employee contributions, the first amounts withdrawn from the plan are treated as coming out of earnings in the employee's account. In addition, if an employee receives a loan (directly or indirectly) under the plan, the act treats the amount of the loan as a distribution under the plan.

The provision is effective for any withdrawals occurring, or loans made, more than 90 days after the date of enactment.

3. Provisions relating to top-heavy plans

If a qualified plan is top heavy, then certain minimum requirements must be met. These requirements include rules relating to the provision of minimum benefits or contributions to non-key employees.

Under the act, the definition of a key employee is amended to exclude officers who earn less than 150 percent of the dollar limit on annual additions under a defined contribution plan ($45,000 for 1984). The accrued benefit of any individual is disregarded after the individual has been separated from service for 5 years. Employer contributions made pursuant to a salary reduction arrangement are counted for purposes of the top-heavy plan rules. The act exempts governmental plans from the top-heavy plan rules. In addition, a simplified amendment procedure applies if the Secretary fails to issue final regulations with respect to the top-heavy plan requirements by Jan. 1, 1985.

The provisions generally are effective for plan years beginning after Dec. 31, 1983. The rules relating to separated employees and salary reduction arrangements are effective for plan years beginning after Dec. 31, 1984.

4. Repeal of estate tax exclusion for qualified pension plan benefits

TEFRA reduced the estate tax exclusion for certain benefits under qualified plans, and IRAs, and military retirement benefits to $100,000, for decedents dying after Dec. 31, 1982.

Under the act, the separate estate tax exclusion for retirement benefits is repealed, effective for decedents dying after Dec. 31, 1984. A transition rule is provided for this change and for the TEFRA change with respect to certain participants whose benefits were in pay status as of the effective date of either provision.

5. Affiliated service groups, employee leasing arrangements, and collective bargaining agreements

Under prior law, certain aggregation rules apply to treat employees of related employers as if they are employed by a single employer for purposes of the qualified retirement plan provisions and certain other benefit provisions. Thus, all employees of employers that are members of an affiliated service group are treated as employed by a single employer. Further, certain leased employees are treated as employees of the lessee unless, under a safe harbor, the leasing organization provides certain minimum benefits to the employee.

Under the act, the affiliated service group rules are changed so that the attribution-of-ownership rules include "brother-sister" relationships. Further, leased employees who are common-law employees of the lessee are treated as the lessee's employees regardless of whether the safe-harbor requirements are satisfied.

Under prior law, many rules applicable to qualified plans do not apply to a plan maintained pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement. Under the act, an agreement involving an employee organization more than one-half of the members of which are owners, officers, or executives of the employer is not considered a collective bargaining agreement for purposes of these rules.

The modifications to the rules for affiliated service groups are effective for plan years beginning after Dec. 31, 1984. The employee leasing provision is effective for plan years beginning after Dec. 31, 1983. The collective bargaining agreement provision is effective on Apr. 1, 1984.

6. Standards for cash or deferred arrangements

Under prior law, an employee may elect to defer compensation (within limits) under a qualified cash or deferred arrangement that is provided by a tax-qualified profit-sharing or stock bonus plan. Permitted deferrals are generally not taxed until they are distributed. In determining whether a cash or deferred arrangement meets the standards of the Code, either a special nondiscrimination standard of cash or deferred arrangements or the general nondiscrimination standard applicable to qualified plans may be applied. The general standard allows integration with social security benefits.

Under the act, a cash or deferred arrangement is to qualify (and elective deferrals are to be excluded from gross income) only if the arrangement meets the special standards provided for a qualified cash or deferred arrangement. The provision generally is effective for plan years beginning after Dec. 31, 1984.

7. Application of cash or deferred arrangement rules to pre-ERISA money purchase pension plans

Through 1979, the tax treatment of cash or deferred arrangements under qualified plans in existence on June 27, 1974, was subject to a transition provision of ERISA. Under the transition provision, these plans were subject to the rules in effect before Jan. 1, 1972, relating to cash or deferred arrangements. The Revenue Act of 1978 provided new rules for cash or deferred arrangements under qualified profit-sharing and stock bonus plans (sec. 401(k)), but the new rules do not apply to money purchase pension plans.

Under the act, the rules for qualified cash or deferred arrangements under qualified profit-sharing plans are made applicable to cash or deferred arrangements under certain pre-ERISA money purchase pension plans (plans in existence on June 27, 1974). The act provides that the rules for qualified cash or deferred arrangements apply to such a money purchase pension plan only if employer and employee contributions under the plan do not exceed the limits under the plan's contribution formula in effect on June 27, 1974.

This provision applies for plan years beginning after the date of enactment.

8. Treatment of certain medical benefits under pension plans

Prior law limits contributions and benefits under a qualified plan. Post-retirement medical benefits provided under a qualified plan are not taken into account in applying the limits.

Under the act, in the case of post-retirement medical benefits provided for a key employee, separate accounting is required and the contributions allocated to a separate account are considered employer contributions to a defined contribution plan in applying the limits. The provision applies to years beginning after Mar. 31, 1984.

9. Alimony treated as compensation for IRA purposes

An individual generally is entitled to deduct individual retirement arrangement (IRA) contributions up to the lesser of $2,000 or 100 percent of compensation. Under the act, all alimony received by a divorced spouse is treated as compensation for this purpose, effective for taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1984.

C. EMPLOYEE BENEFITS

1. Exclusions for certain employer-provided fringe benefits; 2-year moratorium on faculty housing regulations

A moratorium first enacted in 1978 prohibited issuance of Treasury regulations relating to the income tax treatment of nonstatutory fringe benefits.

Under the act, the general legislative moratorium on regulations that expired Dec. 31, 1983, is not extended. Instead, the act sets forth statutory provisions under which (1) certain fringe benefits provided by an employer are excluded from the recipient employee's gross income for Federal income tax purposes and from the wage base (and, if applicable, the benefit base) for purposes of income tax withholding, FICA, and FUTA, and (2) any fringe benefit that does not qualify for exclusion under the bill and that is not excluded under another statutory fringe benefit provision of the Code is includible in gross income for income tax purposes, and in wages for employment tax purposes, at the excess of its fair market value over any amount paid by the employee for the benefit.

The excluded fringe benefits are those that qualify under one of the following five categories as defined in the agreement: (1) a no-additional-cost service, (2) a qualified employee discount, (3) a working condition fringe, (4) a de minimis fringe, or (5) a qualified tuition reduction for education below the graduate level. Special rules apply with respect to certain free parking or subsidized eating facilities provided to employees, on-premises athletic facilities, and demonstration use of an employer-provided car by full-time automobile salespersons. In the case of a no-additional-cost service, a qualified employee discount, a subsidized eating facility, or a qualified tuition reduction, the exclusion applies with respect to benefits provided to officers, owners, or highly compensated employees only if the benefits are also made available to other employees on a nondiscriminatory basis.

Also, the act imposes a moratorium on the issuance of income tax regulations providing for the inclusion in gross income of the excess of the fair market value of qualified campus lodging over the greater of the operating costs paid in furnishing the lodging or the rent received, applicable to qualified campus lodging furnished after Dec. 31, 1983 and before Jan. 1, 1986.

The provisions of the act generally take effect on Jan. 1, 1985, except that the tuition reduction exclusion applies with respect to education furnished after June 30, 1985.

2. Cafeteria plans

A participant in a nondiscriminatory cafeteria plan is not treated as having received a taxable benefit offered under the plan solely because the participant may choose among the taxable and nontaxable benefits offered under the plan. Proposed Treasury regulations provide that employer contributions with respect to an accident or health plan, qualified group legal services plan or a dependent care assistance program are not excluded from a participant's gross income to the extent that the participant is assured of receiving benefits under the plan without regard to whether he or she incurs covered expenses.

The act changes the cafeteria plan provisions in several respects. First, benefits provided under certain plans in existence on Feb. 10, 1984, or for which substantial implementation costs had been incurred before that date, will not fail to be excluded under the cafeteria plan provisions of the proposed Treasury regulations, provided that these plans are not modified after that date in a way which allows additional benefits to be provided. The provision is effective for benefits provided before Jan. 1, 1985, for all such plans. For plans under which an employee must fix the amount of contributions before the beginning of the year and under which unused contributions generally are not available to the employee until the end of the year, the provision is effective for benefits provided before July 1, 1985.

Second, the act provides that cash generally is the only taxable benefit which may be offered in a cafeteria plan and that the new fringe benefits described in the previous section (no-additional cost services, qualified employee discounts, working condition and de minimis fringes and qualified tuition reduction) may not be offered in such a plan.

Third, no more than 25 percent of total nontaxable cafeteria plan benefits may provided to key employees.

Fourth, annual reports are required from employers utilizing cafeteria plans on the cost of, and number of employees receiving, statutory fringe benefits. Additional information will be required from a sample of the employers that provide substantial benefits.

Finally, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, in cooperation with the Secretary of the Treasury, is required to submit a study concerning the effect of the cafeteria plans on the containment of health care costs by Apr. 1, 1985.

The provisions relating to permissible taxable benefits, proportion of benefits to key employees, and reporting requirements take effect on Jan. 1, 1985.

D. EMPLOYEE STOCK OWNERSHIP PROVISIONS

Under prior law, the limit on the tax credit for employer contributions to an employee stock ownership plan (ESOP) was scheduled to increase from one-half of 1 percent of payroll in 1983 and 1984 to three-fourths of 1 percent in 1985. The act freezes the limit at the current rate through 1987.

In addition, the act provides a number of incentives for employee stock ownership. First, it permits a tax-free rollover of the proceeds from the sale of a business to an ESOP or to certain worker-owned cooperatives, provided (1) the proceeds are reinvested in the securities of another business and (2) immediately after the sale, the ESOP owns at least 30 percent of the value of employer securities. Second, a corporate deduction is allowed for dividends paid on ESOP stock, provided the dividends are paid out currently to employees. Third, a bank, insurance company, or other commercial lender is permitted an exclusion from income for 50 percent of the interest received on loans to ESOP companies, provided the loan proceeds are used to finance an ESOP's acquisition of company stock. Fourth, the act provides that the liability for estate taxes may be assumed by an ESOP in return for a transfer from the estate of stock of an equal value, provided the company sponsoring the ESOP guarantees payment of the taxes.

E. MISCELLANEOUS BENEFIT PROVISIONS

1. Treatment of certain distributions from a qualified terminated plan

A distribution under a qualified plan is not a lump sum distribution eligible for a tax-free rollover to an IRA unless it consists of the balance to the credit of the employee and is made within one taxable year of the recipient.

Under the act, special relief is provided for certain plan distributions received by a taxpayer during 1976 and 1977 so that the amounts received are treated as a lump sum distribution eligible for rollover. In addition, the usual period of limitations is extended. The provision is effective upon date of enactment.

2. Special rule for Trans-Alaskan pipeline employees

In the case of the partial termination of a qualified pension plan, the rights of all affected employees to benefits accrued to the date of the partial termination generally become nonforfeitable upon the partial termination to the extent those benefits have been funded.

Under the act, in the case of certain multiemployer pension plans located in the state of Alaska, no partial termination is deemed to have occurred merely because there was a reduction in workforce upon completion of the Trans-Alaskan pipeline. The provision is effective on the date of enactment.

3. Distribution requirements for plans, accounts and annuities of insurer in rehabilitation proceedings

Distributions to the owner of an IRA must be made by the end of the taxable year in which the owner attains 70½. In addition, after the death of the owner, distributions must be made to beneficiaries within 5 years after the death of the owner. In the event that distributions are not made as required under prior law, an excise tax of 50 percent applies to the amounts that are required to be distributed. Similar requirements apply to certain distributions of benefits under qualified plans and certain annuity arrangements.

Under the act, an amount is not required to be distributed under the usual rules for IRAs or qualified plans to the extent that the amounts are held by an insurance company that, on Mar. 15, 1984, is engaged in rehabilitation proceedings under applicable State law. The provision is effective on Mar. 15, 1984.

4. Extension of time for repayment of qualified refunding loans

TEFRA imposed limits on the extent to which an individual can borrow amounts from a qualified plan without the loan being treated as a distribution under the plan. A transition rule was provided for certain "qualified refunding loans" made on or after Aug. 13, 1982, and repaid before Aug. 14, 1983.

Under the act, the period for making and repaying qualified refunding loans is extended to Jan. 1, 1985, for qualified refunding loans of non-key employees. The provision is effective as if enacted in TEFRA.

5. Incentive stock options

Under the act, the fair market value of stock, for purposes of applying the incentive stock option provisions, is to be determined without regard to restrictions which may lapse. The provision is generally effective for options granted after Mar. 20, 1984.

6. Certain sec. 83(b) elections

The time for filing an election under sec. 83(b) with respect to the transfers of property after June 30, 1976, and before Nov. 18, 1982, to an individual in connection with the performance of services is extended until the time for filing the taxpayer's next tax return, where the transfer was at fair market value and the transferor consents.

7. Employer and welfare benefit fund treated as related persons

Under prior law, the gain from the sale of depreciable property between certain related taxpayers is treated as ordinary income but an employer and a welfare benefit fund to which the employer contributes generally are not treated as related parties. The act treats an employer and a welfare benefit fund as related parties if the employer controls the fund directly or indirectly, effective for sales or exchanges after the date of enactment.

8. Elimination of retroactive application of amendments made by Multiemployer Pension Plan Amendments Act of 1980

The Multiemployer Pension Plan Amendments Act of 1980 (MPPAA) was enacted on Sept. 26, 1980. That act generally imposes liability on an employer who withdraws from a multiemployer defined benefit pension plan on or after Apr. 28, 1980.

Under the act, an employer does not have withdrawal liability under the MPPAA as a result of a withdrawal from a multiemployer plan before Sept. 26, 1980. In addition, withdrawal liability does not apply to a withdrawal completed before Dec. 31, 1980, pursuant to a binding agreement in effect on Sept. 26, 1980. Employers are entitled to a refund of amounts collected. The provision is effective on the date of enactment.

9. Pension portability involving telecommunication divestiture

Generally all years of service with the employer maintaining a qualified plan must be taken into account for purposes of the minimum participation and vesting requirements. In any case in which an employer maintains a plan of a predecessor employer, service for the predecessor is treated as service for the employer.

Under the act, the period of service of a qualified employee (an employee of AT&T or any of its subsidiaries immediately before divestiture) with any of the companies after divestiture includes service with any of the other companies whether or not that service was performed before divestiture. Accordingly, the rules provided for 1985 and thereafter by the court order requiring divestiture of certain former subsidiaries of AT&T, under which post-divestiture service with another divested company would not be taken into account, will not be effective.

10. Accrual of vacation pay

Under prior law, an accrual method taxpayer may elect to accrue a deduction of an addition to a vacation pay account equal to the amount payable (but not necessarily paid) within 12 months after the close of the taxable year, regardless of when actually paid or whether the employees' right to the vacation pay is vested or contingent. The act limits the account balance to the amount expected to be paid before 12 months after the close of the taxable year, effective for taxable years beginning after Mar. 31, 1984.

VI. TAX-EXEMPT OBLIGATIONS

A. MORTGAGE SUBSIDY BONDS

1. Extension of qualified mortgage bond program

Under the Mortgage Subsidy Bond Tax Act of 1980 (as amended), State and local governments were allowed to issue limited amounts of tax-exempt bonds to finance mortgages on owner-occupied residences. The authority to issue qualified mortgage bonds expired on Dec. 31, 1983.

The act extends the tax-exemption for qualified mortgage bonds for 4 years, for bonds issued after Dec. 31, 1983, and before Jan. 1, 1988.

Under the act, reporting requirements, similar to the TEFRA reporting requirements for private activity bonds, are imposed on issuers of mortgage subsidy bonds (including qualified mortgage bonds and qualified veterans' mortgage bonds).

Elected officials of issuing jurisdictions are required to submit an annual statement to the Treasury Department which states the policy of the issuer in distributing proceeds of qualified mortgage bonds and mortgage credit certificates (but not qualified veterans' mortgage bonds) and evaluates the performance of the issuer's program relative to that congressional intent. i77 These provisions are effective for bonds issued after Dec. 31, 1984.

The act also terminates most of the transition rules under the Mortgage Subsidy Bond Tax Act of 1980.

2. Qualified veterans' mortgage bonds

Prior law allows States to issue tax-exempt general obligation bonds to provide mortgages to finance residences for veterans (qualified veterans' mortgage bonds). Qualified veterans' mortgage bonds are not subject to a statewide volume ceiling and the authority to issue these bonds did not expire on Dec. 31, 1983.

The act places new restrictions on issuance of qualified veterans' mortgage bonds. Under these restrictions, authority to issue qualified veterans' mortgage bonds is limited to programs that issued such bonds before June 22, 1984; loans made with the proceeds of qualified veterans' mortgage bonds issued after June 22, 1984, are to be limited to veterans who served in active duty before 1977; and applications for a loan to be made with the proceeds of qualified veterans' mortgage bonds must be made before the later of (a) the date which is 30 years from the date of discharge from military service, or (b) Jan. 31, 1985. Additionally qualified veterans' mortgage bonds may only be used to finance principal residences as defined for purposes of qualified mortgage bonds. The act further provides that the volume of qualified veterans' bonds that States may issue is limited by a formula based on the volume of such bonds issued by the States in the period Jan. 1, 1979 through June 22, 1984.

These provisions generally are effective on the date of enactment; however, the restrictions on for qualified veterans' mortgage bonds is effective for bonds issued after June 22, 1984. Bonds issued pursuant to State referenda held or authorized to be held before Oct. 18, 1983, are exempt from the restrictions.

The act also permits the State of Oregon to borrow from the Federal Financing Bank, under specified conditions, amounts necessary to meet the debt service on certain qualified veterans' mortgage bonds.

3. Treatment of Kansas City, Mo., and Kansas City, Kans., as a unified metropolitan statistical area

The act provides that Kansas City, Mo., and Kansas City, Kans. (and surrounding counties), are to be treated as one metropolitan statistical area for tax and all other purposes of Federal law, effective on the date of enactment.

B. MORTGAGE CREDIT CERTIFICATES

The act allows State and local governments, as an alternative to qualified mortgage bonds, to exchange all or part of their qualified mortgage bond authority (as extended by the act) for authority to issue mortgage credit certificates (MCCs). Home purchasers receiving MCCs are entitled to a non-refundable income tax credit equal to a specified percentage of the interest that the homebuyer pays during the taxable year on the mortgage on his principal residence. This percentage may not be less than 10 percent or more than 50 percent of the interest on the qualifying indebtedness. In addition, the maximum credit which any taxpayer may use in a given year is limited to the greater of (i) 20 percent of the qualifying indebtedness, or (ii) $2,000. The amount of a homebuyer's interest deduction in any year is reduced by the amount of the credit for that year. Excess unused credits may be carried forward by the recipient for up to 3 years.

Eligibility to receive MCCs generally is determined on the same basis as eligibility for qualified mortgage bonds. MCCs are also to be available for certain manufactured homes and to residents of housing cooperatives who otherwise meet the applicable eligibility requirements. MCCs may be limited to residences in particular developments only if the developer certifies that the price is not increased because of the MCCs, and may not be limited to specified lenders unless this rule is waived by Treasury regulations. No MCC is allowed for loans between related parties or for loans made with tax-exempt bond proceeds.

A State may issue MCCs in an aggregate principal amount equal to 20 percent of the amount of the qualified mortgage bond authority that the State trades in for the year. However, if (1) the State volume ceiling exceeds 20 percent of the average annual amount of mortgages originated in the State during the preceding 3 years, or (2) the State issued less than $150 million of qualified mortgage bonds in 1983, then the weighted average size of credits issued in the State may not exceed 20 percent.

The MCC program is to be administered primarily by State and local governments, with Federal reporting requirements and appropriate penalties and fees. However, the Treasury Department has the option of adopting a centralized (i.e., national) system of administration.

The MCC program is effective for credits issued on or after Jan. 1, 1985, using qualified mortgage bond authority for 1984 and later years. The program will sunset on Dec. 31, 1987, together with the sunset for qualified mortgage bonds.

C. PRIVATE ACTIVITY BONDS

1. Volume limitations

Under the act, private activity tax-exempt bonds are subject to statewide volume limitations. The limitations apply to certain industrial development bonds (IDBs) and to student loan bonds issued within the State. Bonds issued to finance projects for multifamily residential rental property are exempt from the limitations. Additionally, IDBs issued to finance convention or trade show facilities, airports, docks, wharves, and certain mass commuting facilities are exempt from the limitations if the facilities are owned for tax purposes by a State or local governmental unit and the rents charged tenants are not front-loaded to achieve an effect more accelerated than a straight-line rent.

The limitations are set at the greater of $150 for each resident of the State (according to the most recent census estimates) or $200 million. The limitations will be reduced to the greater of $100 per capita or $200 million after 1986 (when the small issue IDB exception expires except with respect to manufacturing facilities). Within each State, the limitation is to be allocated among State and local issuers according to rules similar to those used for allocating qualified mortgage bond authority.

The act provides for a 3-year carryover (6 years in the case of pollution control bonds) of a State's volume limitation to finance specific projects or for student loan bonds. The carryover is not applicable for small issue IDBs. Additionally, for States whose 1983 volume exceeded the statewide limitation, a 2-year phase-in is applicable.

This provision applies generally to bonds issued after Dec. 31, 1983. A transitional rule exempts bonds for which an inducement resolution was adopted before June 19, 1984, if the bonds are issued before Jan. 1, 1985. Additionally, bond issues for which an inducement resolution was adopted before Oct. 19, 1983, are to receive priority in allocation of the State's volume limitation in the year in which such bonds are issued if either construction on the project had commenced or a binding contract existed before Oct. 19, 1983.

2. Restrictions on cost-recovery for IDB-financed property

The act repeals three of the four prior law exceptions to the rule requiring straight-line cost recovery deductions (over ACRS periods) for IDB-financed property. However, the act allows projects for multifamily residential rental property to continue to receive full accelerated cost recovery deductions over ACRS periods.

Subject to certain transition rules, this provision applies to property placed in service after Dec. 31, 1983, which is financed by obligations issued after Oct. 18, 1983.

3. Denial of tax-exemption to federally guaranteed bonds

The act denies tax-exemption for the interest on obligations guaranteed directly or indirectly by the Federal Government, including bonds issued in connection with Federal deposit insurance. Exceptions are provided for guarantees for various housing-related agencies and student loan guarantees, for guarantees of pollution control bonds by the Small Business Administration, and for a specified program of the Bonneville Power Administration (for 5 years only). Bonds issued to finance multifamily residential rental property are exempt from the Federal guarantee rule.

This provision applies generally to bonds issued after Dec. 31, 1983. The provision applies to bonds issued in connection with Federal deposit insurance after Apr. 14, 1983, except bonds issued pursuant to a contract binding at all times after Mar. 3, 1983.

4. Arbitrage restrictions

IDBs.—The act applies new arbitrage restrictions to IDBs in addition to the previous arbitrage rules applicable to those bonds. Under these rules, after an initial temporary period (and except for temporary periods related to debt service), all bond proceeds, other than an amount that may not exceed 150 percent of annual debt service, must be applied to the governmental purpose for which the bonds are issued. All bond proceeds must be applied to the governmental purpose for which the bonds were issued. Arbitrage earned on investments that are not acquired in order to carry out a governmental purpose must be paid to the Federal Government at 5-year intervals, with any remaining balance being paid 30 days after the bonds are retired. Bonds issued to finance multifamily residential rental property are exempt from these new restrictions.

A special provision is included providing that a certain State university permanent fund does not violate the arbitrage restrictions of prior law or of the act as that fund is operated presently.

These rules apply to bonds issued after Dec. 31, 1984.

Student loan bonds.—Subject to Treasury regulations, the act applies generally the same rules as the new rules provided for IDBs to student loan bonds guaranteed under the GSL program. Non-GSL student loan bonds are subjected to arbitrage rules similar to the rules applicable to qualified mortgage bonds.

The new arbitrage rules for non-GSL student loan bonds apply to bonds issued after Dec. 31, 1985; for GSL bonds, the new rules will apply on the effective date of the new Treasury regulations.

5. Limitations on acquisition of land and existing facilities

Nonagricultural land.—The act eliminates the use of tax-exempt bonds to finance nonagricultural land if 25 percent or more of the proceeds of an issue are used for such land. This limitation is increased to 50 percent in the case of an industrial park, and exceptions are provided for certain airport and dock land acquired for expansion or pursuant to noise abatement or environmental regulations.

Agricultural land.—The act permits tax-exempt bond financing up to $250,000 per first-time farmer for agricultural land (and facilities located on such land). Additionally, used equipment may be purchased in connection with agricultural land by a qualified first-time farmer. A first-time farmer is defined as an individual who has never owned an amount of agricultural land in excess of 15 percent of the county median farm size. In no event can the value of that land exceed $125,000.

Existing facilities.—The act generally denies the use of tax-exempt bonds to finance the purchase of existing facilities. An exception is provided for the purchase of existing buildings if an amount equal to at least 15 percent of the lesser of (1) the cost of the building or (2) the amount of IDB financing is spent on rehabilitation. In the case of structures other than buildings, the rehabilitation expenditures must exceed 100 percent of the lesser of those two amounts. Where more than one building is involved, the determination of whether the rehabilitation threshold is satisfied is to be made on a project (rather than a building or structure) basis.

Effective date.—These provisions apply generally to bonds issued after Dec. 31, 1983. A transitional rule exempts bonds issued before Jan. 1, 1985, pursuant to an inducement resolution adopted before June 19, 1984.

6. Repeal of advance refunding for qualified public facilities

The act repeals the provision permitting advance refundings for certain convention and trade show facilities, airports, docks, wharves, and mass commuting vehicles. This provision applies to advance refunding bonds issued after the date of enactment, except for advance refunding bonds for airports and docks issued before Jan. 1, 1985.

7. Elimination of IDB financing for certain facilities

The act eliminates the use of tax-exempt IDBs to finance airplanes, luxury boxes, gambling facilities, alcoholic beverage stores, and health clubs. This provision applies generally to bonds issued after Dec. 31, 1983 (in the case of health clubs, Apr. 13, 1984). An exception applies to bonds issued to finance racetracks where an inducement resolution was adopted before June 19, 1984, and the bonds are issued before Jan. 1, 1985.

8. Amendments to the small-issue exception

Extension of small-issue exception.—The act extends for 2 years, through 1988, the small issue exception for manufacturing facilities. The exception will expire on Dec. 31, 1986, as presently scheduled, in the case of other facilities.

Aggregate limit per taxpayer for small-issue exception.—The act provides that interest on small-issue IDBs is not tax-exempt if the portion of the issue allocated to any beneficiary (when increased by all other outstanding IDBs allocated to the beneficiary) exceeds $40 million.

This provision applies generally to bonds issued after Dec. 31, 1983. Transitional rules apply in the case of bonds issued before Jan. 1, 1985, to finance a project for which an inducement resolution was adopted before June 19, 1984.

Aggregation of issues for single project.—The act provides that if two or more issues of bonds are to be used with respect to a single project, the issues are to be treated as one issue for purposes of applying the small-issue volume limitation. Subject to certain transitional rules, this provision applies to bonds issued after Dec. 31, 1983.

Clarification that residential property may be in a mixed use structure.—The act clarifies that a part of a building qualifying as low- and moderate-income residential rental property may be used for nonresidential purposes, but limits tax-exempt financing to the portion of the building used for such housing. This provision applies to bonds issued after Dec. 31, 1983.

9. Extension of substantial user rules

The act expands the definition of related party for purposes of the rule under which interest on bonds is not tax-exempt if the bonds are held by a substantial user of the facilities financed by the bonds or a related party to treat as related parties all partners of a partnership and all shareholders of an S corporation as well as spouses and dependent children or such partners and shareholders. This provision applies to bonds issued after Dec. 31, 1983.

10. Extension of certain requirements of the Internal Revenue Code to bonds exempt from tax pursuant to other provisions of law

Extension of requirements.—The act subjects all bonds for which tax-exemption is provided outside of the Internal Revenue Code or which are excepted from any requirements of the Code to the Code rules governing tax-exempt bonds. Exceptions are provided to the income tax rules for bonds issued to finance the Alaska Railroad, the Bonneville Power Administration, and the Oregon Small Energy Bond Program.

The act clarifies that transfers of all non-Code bonds are subject to the Federal gift, estate, and generation-skipping transfer taxes. A Federal district court had ruled on April 25, 1984, that transfers of certain bonds issued pursuant to sec. 11(b) of the Housing Act of 1937 were exempt from Federal estate tax (Haffner v. Comm'r).

This provision applies for income tax purposes to bonds issued after Dec. 31, 1983, except it applies to bonds issued after June 18, 1984, in the case of bonds exempt from tax under sec. 11(b) of the Housing Act of 1937.

In the case of the Federal gift, estate, and generation-skipping transfer taxes, the provision applies to estates of individuals dying, gifts made, and generation-skipping transfers occurring after June 18, 1984. The act further provides that no inference is to be drawn from the June 18, 1984, effective date that transfers of non-Code bonds occurring before that date are exempt from these taxes. Special reporting requirements are imposed for transfers where the position is taken that such a transfer is not taxable.

Extension of IDB authority to the District of Columbia and certain territories.—The act authorizes American Samoa and the Virgin Islands to issue tax-exempt IDBs, subject to the restrictions of the Code. Additionally, the District of Columbia is authorized to issue IDBs for multifamily residential rental property and mortgage subsidy bonds. (This rule reverses the effect of the Chadha decision insofar as it affects the ability of the District of Columbia to issue those bonds.) The $200 million minimum volume limitation does not apply in the case of American Samoa or the Virgin Islands. This provision sunsets after 3 years.

11. Prohibition on use of tax-exempt bonds for consumer loans

The act generally prohibits the use of tax-exempt bonds to provide consumer loans, effective for bonds issued after the date of enactment.

D. MISCELLANEOUS TAX-EXEMPT BOND PROVISIONS

The act provides that the Pennsylvania State University is to be treated as a State governmental unit for purposes of issuing tax-exempt bonds. The public approval requirement of prior law is clarified as it applies to certain airports. The Power Authority of the State of New York is authorized to issued tax-exempt bonds, subject to the applicable volume limitation, for certain projects; certain other utilities are authorized to issue tax-exempt IDBs; and, certain issues for specific projects are exempted from various requirements of the law. Finally, certain clarifications of the rules governing tax-exempt student loan bonds are provided.

VII. Technical Corrections

This title contains technical, clerical, conforming and clarifying amendments to provisions enacted by the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982, the Subchapter S Revision Act of 1982, the Highway Revenue Act of 1982, and other recently enacted tax legislation.

VIII. Highway Revenue Provisions

1. Heavy vehicle use tax and diesel fuel tax

Use tax.—Under prior law, the highway use tax was scheduled to increase on July 1, 1984, starting at $50 for vehicles of 33,000 pounds and reaching a maximum of $1,600 ($1,900 by July 1, 1988) for vehicles over 79,000 pounds.

The act restructures and reduces the use tax, so that it starts at $100 for vehicles of 55,000 pounds and reaches a maximum of $550 for vehicles over 75,000 pounds. Rules applicable to small owner-operators are amended. The tax rate on certain vehicles registered to haul harvested forested products is reduced by one-quarter the rate otherwise applicable. The prior law exemption generally allowed for vehicles traveling fewer than 5,000 miles is increased to 7,500 miles in the case of agricultural vehicles used for farming purposes. These provisions are effective on July 1, 1984.

In addition, the act requires the Secretary of Transportation to study the use tax, as it relates to the heaviest vehicles and to trans-border trucking, and the feasibility of weight-distance taxes and to report to Congress before Oct. 2, 1987.

Diesel fuel tax.—Under prior law, an excise tax of 9 cents a gallon in imposed on the sale of diesel fuel for use in a highway vehicle. A refund or credit is allowed for tax paid on diesel fuel used in an intercity, local or school bus.

The act increases this tax by 6 cents a gallon (the diesel differential) to 15 cents a gallon. A fixed rebate, generally claimed one time on income tax forms, is allowed for the estimated diesel differential to be paid over the expected life of new or recent model-year, diesel-powered vehicles of 10,000 pounds or less. The act increases the credit or refund of tax paid on diesel fuel (not otherwise exempt because, e.g., purchased by a State or local government or non-profit educational organization for its exclusive use) used in an intercity, local or school bus to 12 cents a gallon (15 cents, if a local bus is operated for a State or local government), generally resulting in a 3-cents-a-gallon tax. These provisions are effective on Aug. 1, 1984.

2. One-year extension of refund of taxes on fuels used in certain taxicabs

The act extends for 1 year, through Sept. 30, 1985, the rule permitting a 4-cents-per-gallon refund or credit with respect to Federal excise taxes paid on fuels used in certain taxicabs. The act further requires a Treasury Department study of the effectiveness of this exemption, to be submitted to Congress not later than Jan. 1, 1985.

3. Modification of excise tax exemption for alcohol fuels mixtures and alcohol fuels; alcohol fuels credits; and duty on imported alcohol fuels

The act increases the 5-cents-per-gallon excise tax exemption for alcohol fuels mixtures (e.g., gasohol) to 6 cents per gallon. The alcohol fuels credit and the duty on imported alcohol fuels are correspondingly increased to 60 cents per gallon from their present level of 50 cents per gallon. These provisions are effective on Jan. 1, 1985.

The act reduces the tax rate from 9 cents to 4.5 cents a gallon for alcohol fuels (e.g., methanol) that are at least 85 percent pure and are comprised of alcohol derived from natural gas. This provision is effective on Aug. 1, 1984.

4. Temporary reduction in excise tax on piggyback trailers

Prior law imposes a 12-percent excise tax on the first retail sale of heavy truck trailers, including piggyback trailers. The act reduces this tax to 6 percent only for piggyback trailers sold within the 1-year period beginning on the date of enactment, after which the tax rate on such trailers returns to 12 percent. The Secretary of Transportation is required to report to Congress before May 2, 1985, on this excise tax as it relates to piggyback trailers.

IX. Miscellaneous Revenue Provisions

A. ESTATE AND GIFT TAX PROVISIONS

1. Qualification of certain holding company stock for installment payment of estate tax

Estate tax attributable to interests in certain closely held businesses may be paid in installments extending up to 14 years, with principal payments being deferred for up to 5 years of that time. Additionally, a special 4-percent interest rate is available for certain amounts of deferred tax. Generally, only directly owned interests in active business operations are eligible for this benefit.

The act permits executors to elect to consider the value of indirectly owned non-readily tradeable stock in an active business for certain purposes under the installment payment provision if the business interest would qualify were it owned directly. If this election is made, the 4-percent interest rate and 5-year deferral of principal payments are not available.

The act further provides that investment assets held by any business are to be disregarded for all purposes under the installment payment provision. This rule is consistent with the prior-law rule for valuing businesses carried on as proprietorships.

These provisions are effective for estates of individuals dying after the date of enactment.

2. Clarification that certain usufruct interests qualify for estate tax marital deduction

The act clarifies that certain usufructs for life under the Louisiana Civil Code may qualify as QTIP property, and therefore, for the marital deduction, if certain requirements are satisfied. This provision is effective as if included in the Economic Recovery Tax Act.

3. Special estate tax credits for the Estate of Nell J. Redfield and the Estate of Elizabeth Schultz Rabe

The act provides a special credit against Federal estate tax for the estates of Nell J. Redfield and Elizabeth Schultz Rabe.

4. Perfection of estate tax current use valuation elections

The act permits perfection of estate tax current use valuation elections by estates when the elections, as originally filed, substantially complied with the requirements of the Treasury regulations. This provision applies to estates of individuals dying after 1976.

5. No gain recognized from net gifts made before Mar. 4, 1981

The act provides that no income will be recognized to donors who made net gifts before Mar. 4, 1981.

6. Permanent rules for reforming governing instruments creating charitable remainder trusts and other charitable interests

The act permits governing instruments of charitable split-interest trusts which do not meet the requirements of the 1969 act rules to be reformed where (1) the instruments evidence an intent to comply with the 1969 act rules (or the reformation begins within a specified period), and (2) the actuarial values and durations of the charitable and noncharitable interests in the trust generally remain the same before and after the reformation.

This provision generally will be effective with respect to reformations made after Dec. 31, 1978.

7. Alternate valuation date election

The value of property includible in the decedent's gross estate for Federal estate tax purposes generally is determined on the date of the individual's death. However, the executor of the individual's estate may elect to have the value of all property included in the gross estate determined as of the alternate valuation date (which generally is 6 months after the individual's death).

The act provides that the election to use the alternate valuation date may be made only where both the total value of all property in the gross estate and the Federal estate tax liability of the estate are reduced by making the election. The act also allows the alternate valuation election to be made on the first estate tax return filed (whether filed timely or late), provided the return is filed no more than 1 year after the due date.

This provision is effective with respect to estates of individuals dying after the date of enactment. The provision also applies to estates of individuals dying before the date of enactment that would qualify under the amended alternate valuation date provision had the individuals died after the date of enactment.

B. EXCISE TAX PROVISIONS

1. Excise tax on sport fishing equipment

The act expands the manufacturers excise tax on fishing equipment. Certain additional articles and accessories are subject to the expanded tax at the present-law 10-percent rate and others (i.e., certain fishfinders and electric outboard motors) at a 3-percent rate. The act also extends the time for payment of the tax, with payments to be required on a quarterly basis.

Further, the act alters the financing sources and expenditure purposes for the existing sport fish restoration and boating safety programs and the financing sources for the Land and Water Conservation Fund. Among these changes, the act transfers part of the revenues from the existing tax on motorboat fuels (the excess each year over the $1 million to the Land and Water Conservation Fund and the up to $45 million per year, through fiscal year 1988, to the boating safety program) to the sport fish restoration program, as well as the revenues from import duties on sport fishing equipment and yachts and pleasure craft. The act also transfers administration of funding for the sport fish restoration and boating safety programs to a new Aquatic Resources Trust Fund, to be included in the Internal Revenue Code.

These provisions are effective on Oct. 1, 1984.

2. Excise tax on certain arrows

The act expands the existing 11-percent excise tax on arrows to include arrows used by crossbow hunters, effective on Oct. 1, 1984.

3. Exemption from aviation excise taxes for certain helicopter operations

The exemption from the airways fuels and passenger ticket taxes for helicopters engaged in timber operations or hard mineral exploration and not using the Federally aided airport or Federal airways control systems is extended to helicopters engaged in oil and gas exploration, effective on Apr. 1, 1984.

4. Technical amendments to the Hazardous Substance Response Revenue Act of 1980

Prior law imposes an excise tax on certain chemical substances, the revenue from which go into the Hazardous Substance Response Trust Fund. The act makes technical modifications to this excise tax in three areas. First, an exemption is provided for light hydrocarbons used in the production of motor fuels. Second, certain copper, lead, or zinc compounds which have a transitory existence during metal refining are exempted from tax. Third, the administrative mechanism through which the exemption for fertilizer may be claimed is simplified.

C. INCOME TAX CREDITS

1. Changes in earned income credit

Under prior law, eligible taxpayers, i.e., individuals or couples with children, are allowed a refundable tax credit equal to 10 percent of the first $5,000 of earned income, for a maximum credit of $500. The maximum credit is phased down to zero as income increases from $6,000 to $10,000. The act increases the rate of the earned income credit to 11 percent, thereby increasing the maximum credit to $550. The act also raises the income range over which the credit is phased-out to the $6,500 to $11,000 range. These changes in the earned income credit apply to taxable years beginning after 1984.

2. Modification of rules governing rehabilitation investment credit

The act provides an alternative to the present requirement that at least 75 percent of a building's external walls be retained as external walls in the case of rehabilitations with respect to which a rehabilitation credit is allowable. Under the alternative, the external walls test is deemed met if (1) at least 50 percent of the building's external walls are retained as external walls; (2) at least 75 percent of the building's external walls are retained as either internal or external walls; and (3) at least 75 percent of the building's internal structural framework is retained.

This provision is effective for rehabilitation expenditures incurred with respect to property placed in service after Dec. 31, 1983.

3. Extension of targeted jobs credit

Under prior law, the targeted jobs credit is available with respect to individuals who begin work for the employer before 1985. The act extends the targeted jobs credit for 1 additional year. Under the act, the credit will be available with respect to any member of a targeted group who begins work for the employer before 1986.

D. SIX-MONTH LONG-TERM CAPITAL GAIN HOLDING PERIOD AND REDUCTION OF CAPITAL LOSS OFFSET AGAINST ORDINARY INCOME

Under prior law, gains and losses from the sale or exchange of capital assets held for more than 1 year are long-term capital gain or loss and gains and losses from capital assets held for 1 year or less are short-term.

The act reduces the long-term capital gain and loss holding period to 6 months for assets acquired after June 22, 1984, and before Jan. 1, 1988. The special carryover treatment for long-term losses realized prior to 1970 is repealed, effective after 1986.

E. MISCELLANEOUS HOUSING PROVISIONS

1. Disaster loss deduction where taxpayer ordered to demolish or relocate residence in disaster area because of disaster

The act provides that certain taxpayers whose residences are located in a Federally declared disaster area, and who are ordered by a State or local government to demolish or relocate their residences, may deduct any loss attributable to the disaster as a casualty loss. The provision applies to taxpayers whose residences have been rendered unsafe for use as a residence as a proximate result of the disaster.

This provision applies to taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1981, with respect to areas determined after that date to warrant Federal disaster assistance.

2. Housing allowance for ministers

In 1983, the IRS ruled that ministers may not take deductions for mortgage interest and real estate taxes on their residence to the extent that such expenditures are allocable to tax-free housing allowances provided for ministers. The new deduction disallowance rule generally applied beginning July 1, 1983. Under a transitional rule, in the case of a minister who owned and occupied a home before Jan. 3, 1983 (or had a contract to purchase a home before that date), the deduction disallowance rule generally will not apply until Jan. 1, 1985. The act extends this transitional rule date to Jan. 1, 1986.

3. Rollover of gain on sale of residence for military personnel stationed overseas

No gain is recognized on sale of a personal residence to the extent that the amount of the sales price of the old residence is reinvested in a new residence within a specified period of time. This period is suspended for up to 4 years where the taxpayer serves on extended active duty with the Armed Forces (sec. 1034(h)).

The act provides that, in the case of a member of the Armed Forces who is stationed outside the United States or who is required to reside in government quarters, the normal nonrecognition period will not expire until the end of 4 years after the sale of the old principal residence or 1 year after the member is no longer stationed outside the United States or no longer required to reside in government quarters, whichever is later, but not to exceed 8 years. This provision applies to sales of residences occurring after the date of enactment.

4. Home won as prize and designed for handicapped foster child of the taxpayer

The act provides that no interest or penalties will be payable on the Federal income tax liability attributable to receipt of a residence won as a prize, and specially designed for a handicapped foster child of the taxpayer, where certain conditions apply, but only if the tax liability is paid no later than one year after the date of enactment.

F. MISCELLANEOUS EXTENSIONS

1. Transitional rule for treatment of certain income from S corporations

The act provides an election for 1983 and 1984 to characterize income from an S corporation, for purposes of sec. 163(d), under the law in effect prior to the enactment of the Subchapter S Revision Act of 1982.

2. Extension of PIK rules to 1984 wheat program

Prior law provides special tax treatment for commodities received by a producer under a 1983 PIK program for withdrawing land from production. Under these rules, producers may defer recognition of income on PIK commodities until the commodities are sold; PIK participants are not disqualified from various special tax provisions available to taxpayers engaged in the business of farming; and the applicability of income, employment, and estate tax provisions is not affected solely as a result of a taxpayer's participation in the PIK program. The act generally extends these special PIK tax rules to the 1984 wheat program.

3. Special leasing rules for certain coal gasification facilities

Under prior law, safe-harbor leasing rules are generally not applicable to agreements entered into after Dec. 31, 1983. Under the act, those rules, as in effect prior to TEFRA, are applicable to certain coal gasification facilities.

4. Treatment of Indian tribal governments as State governments for tax purposes

The act makes permanent the prior treatment of Indian tribal governments as State governments for most purposes of the Internal Revenue Code, and adds certain additional purposes for which that treatment is available. As under prior law, tribal governments will continue to be barred from issuing tax-exempt bonds, other than bonds to finance traditional government functions.

5. Amortization of expenditures to rehabilitate low-income rental housing

The act reenacts for 3 years, through Dec. 31, 1986, the provision of prior law that permitted amortization over 60 months of certain rehabilitation expenditures incurred with respect to low-income housing.

6. Reenactment of denial of deductions for costs of demolishing certified historic structures

The act reenacts and expands the provision of prior law that denied income tax deductions for costs associated with demolition of all buildings. This provision is effective on Jan. 1, 1984.

7. Architectural barrier removal expenses

The act provides a deduction for up to $35,000 per year of expenses incurred in eliminating architectural and transportation barriers to the handicapped and elderly, effective for taxable years beginning in 1984 and 1985. This provision is similar to an expired provision of prior law.

G. ADDITIONAL PROVISIONS

1. Tip reporting

Under prior law, if a large employer, for tip reporting purposes, demonstrates to the Secretary that the actual tip rate of his establishment is less than 8 percent, the Secretary may lower the percentage allocated (but not to less than 5 percent). The act allows employers or a majority of their employees to petition the Secretary for permission to allocate based on a tip rate as low as 2 percent and requires the IRS to provide rules for recordkeeping with respect to tips within a year.

2. FUTA treatment of tips

Under prior law, tip income is considered wages for purposes of the Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) only to the extent paid directly to the employee by the patron, reported by the employee to the employer, and used by the employer to satisfy the minimum wage requirement of the Fair Labor Standards Act.

The act provides that all tip income reported by the employee to the employer is considered wages for FUTA purposes. The provision generally is effective on Jan. 1, 1986. However, in the case of any State the legislature of which (1) did not meet in a regular session which begins during 1984 and after the date of enactment, and (2) did not meet in a session which began on the date of enactment and remained in session for at least 25 calendar days after the date of enactment, the provision is effective on Jan. 1, 1987.

3. FUTA exemption for certain fishing boat crew members

The act extends through Dec. 31, 1985, the exemption from FUTA tax for remuneration paid to fishing boat crew members who are treated as self-employed for purposes of social security taxes.

4. Unemployment compensation for pre-1978 periods

The act amends the Revenue Act of 1978 to provide that the provisions of that statute that make includible in income a portion of unemployment compensation benefits are to apply to payments of unemployment compensation made after 1978, except payments for weeks of unemployment ending before Dec. 1, 1978. The bill also extends until 1 year after enactment the period for claiming any credit or refund attributable to this amendment.

5. Tax exemption for the National Credit Union Central Liquidity Facility

The act provides that the National Credit Union Central Liquidity Facility is exempt from Federal income taxes under the Internal Revenue Code, and from State or local taxes (other than real property taxes). Notes, bonds, and other obligations of the Central Liquidity Facility are to be exempt from State and local taxes (other than gift, estate, or other wealth transfer taxes), but will be subject to Federal tax.

These provisions are effective on and after Oct. 1, 1979, the effective date of the legislation creating the Central Liquidity Facility.

6. Requirement that certain future tax exemptions be provided in the Internal Revenue Code

Under prior law, instrumentalities of the United States are tax-exempt if the tax exemption is specified in the congressional act under which the instrumentality is organized.

The act provides that, effective on the date of enactment, further tax exemptions for United States instrumentalities must be specified in the Internal Revenue Code or in a revenue act. Instrumentalities of the United States will remain tax exempt if the exemption is provided in an act of Congress (i.e., non-Code provisions) as amended and supplemented before the date of enactment of the act.

7. Exclusion from gross income for cancellation of certain student loans

Under a provision in the 1976 Tax Reform Act, and later extended through 1982, an individual does not realize gross income from cancellation of student loans made by government agencies where the individual in return works for a certain period of time in certain professions in certain geographical areas or for certain classes of employers. The act provides a permanent exclusion from income for amounts realized by reason of cancellation of certain student loans where the recipient performs certain professional services for any of a broad class of employers, effective for debt cancellations occurring after 1982.

8. Migratory bird hunting and conservation stamps ("Duck Stamps")

Under the act, the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to allow reproductions in color, and black and white, of migratory bird hunting stamps for commercial purposes. Revenues will be deposited in the Migratory Bird Conservation Fund and will be used to help finance the purchase of additional wetlands acreage to be included in the National Wildlife Refuge. Color reproductions of duck stamps in philatelic (or stamp-collecting) advertising is permitted to encourage collectors to purchase duck stamps. Anticounterfeiting rules continue to apply, but licensing requirements will not apply.

9. Tax treatment of grants related to Boundary Water Canoe Area

The act allows tax-free reinvestment before 1986 of Federal assistance grants made to resort operators and motorboat franchisers whose business activities had to be modified to conform to new statutory limits following conversion of their operating areas to the Boundary Waters Canoe Area Wilderness under the jurisdiction of the Forest Service.

10. Taxation of regulated investment companies

a. Personal holding companies permitted to qualify.—A regulated investment company (RIC) is treated, in essence, as a conduit for tax purposes. If a corporation is a RIC, it is allowed a deduction for dividends paid to its shareholders. One of the requirements that a corporation must meet in order to be a RIC is that it cannot be a personal holding company (PHC).

The act modifies the definition of a RIC to permit a PHC to qualify as a RIC. In the case of a RIC which is a PHC, any undistributed investment company taxable income of the RIC will be taxed at the highest corporate rate. The act also denies RIC status to companies first becoming a RIC after 1982 if the company has earnings and profits accumulated as a non-RIC.

The provision is effective for taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1982. However, a corporation with earnings attributable to a non-RIC year will be eligible to elect RIC status without distributing such earnings if it completed all the economic steps required to elect RIC status during the period beginning on Jan. 1, 1982, and ending on Nov. 7, 1983, and elects RIC status for its first taxable year beginning after Nov. 7, 1983.

b. Timing of income from short-term government securities.—Discount income on short-term Government securities is includible in income at the earlier of the date of maturity or the date of sale.

The act would allow a RIC to elect to include discount income on short-term Government securities as it accrues.

This provision is effective for taxable years beginning after 1978.

H. STUDIES

1. Study of alternative tax systems

The act instructs the Secretary of the Treasury to conduct a study covering the advisability of developing an alternative tax system that would reduce the complexity of the present income tax system and improve the efficiency and equity of the tax system. Alternative tax systems that should be evaluated include a simplified income tax based on gross income, a consumption-based tax restructuring and broadening of the current income tax base combined with lowering of current tax rates, a national sales tax, and a value-added tax. The study is to be submitted by Dec. 31, 1984, and is to include a study of tax shelters.

2. Treasury study of foreign taxation of certain U.S. services

Under present law, taxpayers who perform services in the United States for use in foreign countries are subject to full U.S. tax on their income from those services. The foreign country where the services are used may also subject the income from those services to tax. The act directs the Treasury Department to study the practices of foreign countries that impose taxes on the basis of services that are performed in the United States, including the status of treaty negotiations with such countries, and options to alleviate the resulting double tax burden on U.S. taxpayers. The Treasury Department is to report on the results of its study no later than Dec. 31, 1984.

SPENDING PROVISIONS

TITLE VI—OASDI, SSI, AFDC AND OTHER PROGRAMS

A. IMPROVEMENTS IN OASDI PROGRAM

1. Social security treatment of certain church employees

Under the Social Security Amendments of 1983, employees of religious and other nonprofit organizations (not including ministers or members of religious orders) are subject to mandatory social security coverage, effective Jan. 1, 1984. Prior to these amendments, employees of nonprofit organizations were exempt from social security coverage unless the organization waived, or was deemed to waive, its exemption.

The act provides a one-time irrevocable election by a church or qualifying church-controlled organization to exclude from the FICA tax base remuneration for all services performed for the organization, other than in an unrelated trade or business. The employees of organizations so electing are liable for self-employment (SECA) taxes with respect to the excluded services.

For employees of electing organizations, wages of less than $100 per calendar year are not subject to SECA taxes and the SECA tax base is generally conformed to the applicable FICA rules.

Electing organizations remain subject to income tax withholding and reporting requirements with respect to all employees. Treasury may revoke an election for continuing failure to provide required information.

An election is available to: (1) churches (including conventions or associations of churches), (2) elementary or secondary schools controlled, operated, or principally supported by churches (or conventions or associations of churches), and (3) church-controlled tax-exempt organizations except any such organization which both—

> (A) offers goods, services, or facilities for sale to the general public (e.g., to persons who are not church members), other than on an incidental basis and other than at a nominal charge, and also
> (B) normally receives more than 25 percent of its support from the sum of (a) governmental sources, and (b) receipts from admissions, sales of merchandise, performance of services or furnishing of facilities other than in unrelated trades or businesses.

To make an election, an organization must state that it is opposed for religious reasons to payment of social security taxes.

2. Coverage of employees under social security and Federal retirement systems

a. Breaks in service.—In order to prevent Federal employees who had been previously covered under social security from losing coverage as a result of a break in service of less than 365 days, the act provides that persons transferring from government service that was covered under Social Security prior to Jan. 1, 1984 to civilian service newly covered by P.L. 98-21 will be covered under social security, unless (a) the other service was in an international organization, or (b) the person is returning to civilian service after temporary military or reserve duty and is exercising reemployment rights under chapter 43 of title 38, U.S.C. The act also continues the exemption from social security coverage for Federal employees who have a break in service of more than 265 days to the extent that the break in service results from service in an international organization or the American Institute in Taiwan.

b. Legislative branch employees.—The act provides that any legislative branch or other Federal employee who withdraws from CSRS after June 14, 1984 and takes a refund of his contributions may not thereafter be exempt from social security coverage while employed in the legislative branch. In addition, an individual who has any legislative branch employment after June 14, 1984 which is not subject to CSRS could not also be exempt from social security coverage (regardless of whether he has applied for a refund of his prior contributions.) Employees in the legislative branch who take leaves of absence without taking a refund of their CSRS contributions may (according to the practice of the employing office) continue to be covered under CSRS. If they are not automatically recovered under CSRS, they will be covered under social security unless they re-join CSRS upon resumption of their legislative branch employment.

Under the act, the exemption for social security coverage will also cease to be available to any individual who took a refund of CSRS contributions based on a separation or transfer during the period from Jan. 1, 1984 through June 14, 1984 or who has legislative branch employment which was not covered under CSRS during that period. However, any such individual can reestablish the exemption (provided that he was covered under CSRS or another Federal retirement system on Dec. 31, 1983) if he has reentered CSRS after the point when he last withdrew from it and prior to the 31st day after enactment. For an individual who is not in Federal employment on the date of enactment, the 30 day period will run from the date on which he again becomes a legislative branch employee. An individual will be considered to have reentered CSRS if he applies to do so within the appropriate time and the coverage subsequently does become effective.

c. Nonprofit organizations.—The act provides that employees of nonprofit organizations who are covered on a mandatory basis by the Civil Service Retirement System would be treated like Federal employees for purposes of social security. They would therefore be covered by social security only if newly hired after Jan. 1, 1984, or if they had a break in Federal service lasting more than 365 days. In such cases, the provisions of P.L. 98-168 would apply to them. This provision would apply to services performed on or after Jan. 1, 1984.

3. Increased enforcement of earnings test

Social security beneficiaries are not required to file earnings reports until the close of the calendar year.

The act requires the Secretary to implement procedures for obtaining earnings reports earlier than under prior law and to make earlier adjustments of benefit amounts on account of excess earnings.

B. AFDC AND SSI PROGRAMS

Aid to Families With Dependent Children (AFDC) Provisions

1. Gross income limitation

Under prior law, eligibility for AFDC is limited to families with gross incomes at or below 150 percent of the State standard of need. The act increases the gross income limitation to 185 percent of the State standard of need.

2. Work expense deduction

Under prior law, States are required to disregard the first $75 of monthly earnings for full-time work expenses; a lower deduction must be established for part-time workers. The act requires States to disregard the first $75 monthly for full and part-time workers.

3. Continuation of $30 disregard

Under prior law, the $30 plus one-third of remaining earnings disregard is limited to 4 months. The act retains the 4 month limit on the one-third disregard but extends the $30 disregard for an additional 8 months for a total of 12 months.

4. Work transition status

Under prior law, a family who loses AFDC eligibility due to the 4 month limit on the earnings disregard, simultaneously loses categorical eligibility for Medicaid. The act provides that families who lose AFDC because of the termination of the earnings disregard will be eligible for 9 months of Medicaid coverage. At State option, an additional 6 months of Medicaid coverage can be provided. In addition, families who lost AFDC eligibility prior to enactment of the work transition will also be eligible for Medicaid under certain specified circumstances.

5. Clarification of earned income provisions

The act clarifies that the term "earned income" as used in the AFDC program means the gross amount of earnings, prior to the taking of payroll or other deductions.

6. Burial plots, funeral agreements and certain property

Under prior law, burial plots and funeral agreements are counted toward the $1,000 asset limit. The act exempts from the AFDC resource limitation, burial plots and funeral agreements. An AFDC policy on real property that is similar to SSI policy is also established.

7. Federal matching for Community Work Experience Program (CWEP) expenses

Under prior law, States must reimburse a CWEP participant for necessary transportation and other expenses. Federal matching for this reimbursement is, by regulation, limited to $25 per month. The act requires States to reimburse a CWEP participant for costs incurred if the State is unable to provide directly any transportation or day care services. Reimbursement of day care expenses is limited to those determined by the State to be reasonable, necessary and cost effective up to $160 per month per child.

8. Retrospective budgeting and monthly reporting

Under prior law, monthly reporting and retrospective budgeting are required for all AFDC cases; however, the Secretary of Health and Human Services may waive the monthly reporting requirement if it is not cost effective to require the report. The act mandates retrospective budgeting for cases filing a monthly report. Monthly reporting is required when cost effective; cases with earned income and recent work history must report monthly.

9. Earned income tax credit (EITC)

Under prior law, States must assume that an individual is receiving the earned income tax credit on an advance basis regardless of when or if it is received. The act requires States to count the EITC only when actually received.

10. Demonstrations of one-stop service delivery

The act authorizes from 3 to 5 Federally assisted demonstration projects designed to test the effectiveness and efficiency of integrating the delivery of human services.

11. Work requirements for pregnant women

The act adds to those who are exempt from work registration, any woman who is in the third trimester of pregnancy.

12. Recalculation of lump sum income

Under prior law, States may only recalculate ineligibility due to receipt of lump sum income if a life threatening circumstance occurs. The act allows States to recalculate the ineligibility period under other specified circumstances. Ineligibility may be recalculated if: (1) an event occurs which would have changed the amount of AFDC paid; (2) the income becomes unavailable for reasons behond the family's control; and/or (3) the family incurs, becomes responsible for and pays medical bills which offset the lump sum income.

13. Overpayment recoupment

Under prior law, States must attempt to recover all benefit overpayments. The act permits States to overpayment recovery when it is not cost effective. States will be permitted to automatically waive overpayments of less than $35. Larger overpayments must be collected unless the State determines, after attempting to collect the overpayment, that the cost to collect would exceed the amount owed.

14. Protective payments

Under prior law, States are required to make protective payments to a third party when a parent on AFDC fails to meet certain statutory procedural requirements. The act permits States to make the payment to the parent if, after all reasonable efforts have been made, a suitable protective payee cannot be found.

15. Eligibility requirements for aliens

Under prior law, the income of an individual who sponsors a nonrefugee alien is deemed to be available to the alien for 3 years after entry into the United States. The act establishes a similar policy for aliens who are sponsored by organizations or agencies.

16. Fugitive felons

The act permits States to disclose the current address of an AFDC recipient if a law enforcement agency provides the correct social security number and demonstrates that the recipient is a fugitive felon.

17. Payment schedule for back claims

The act establishes a payment schedule for court-ordered reimbursements and certain other back claims owed by the Federal Government to the States that have been allowed or are pending.

18. Work supplementation program

The act modifies the existing work supplementation program to provide additional flexibility to States in operating grant diversion programs in which all or part of the AFDC grant can be used to subsidize a job.

19. Disregard of in-kind income

The act extends, until Oct. 1, 1987, the disregard of certain related in-kind assistance provided on the basis of need.

20. Standard filing unit/child support payments

There is no requirement in prior law that parents and all siblings be included in the AFDC unit. The act requires States to include in the filing unit the parents and all minor siblings living with a dependent child who applies for or receives AFDC. In addition, a monthly disregard of $50 of child support received by a family is established.

21. CWEP work for Federal agencies

The act permits Federal agencies or offices to serve as community work experience program (CWEP) sites under the same requirements as apply to other sites.

22. Earned income of full-time students

For purposes of applying the gross income limitation, the act allows States to disregard the income of an AFDC child who is a full-time student.

[illegible] TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS

Subtitle E contains a number of minor technical amendments to the Social Security Act and the Internal Revenue Code to correct clerical and other minor errors either resulting from the Social Security Amendments of 1983, or already existing in those acts. Most were contained in the House bill, and were accepted as part of the act.

The most significant of these amendments deals with that provision of the Social Security Amendments of 1983 which codified the Rowan decision. The effective date of the provision of the Social Security Amendments of 1983 overriding the Rowan decision is clarified so that the provision applies for all purposes, other than the treatment of certain employer-provided meals and lodging, both to remuneration paid after Mar. 4, 1983, and to remuneration paid on or before Mar. 4, 1983, which the employer treated as wages when paid.

The act amends sec. [illegible] of the Trade Act [illegible] to extend eligibility also to industries in which a substantial number of workers have been certified eligible, and increases the maximum amount of annual assistance per industry to [illegible].

E. PROVISIONS RELATING TO PUERTO RICO AND THE VIRGIN ISLANDS

The act provides that payment of excise tax revenues will be made to [illegible]

[illegible] to limited payments with respect to [illegible] spirits [illegible] United States after Feb. 29, 1984.

2. Limitation on excise tax payments to Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands with respect to distilled spirits

The act limits the amount of excise tax that may be paid to Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands with respect to distilled spirits to a maximum of $10.50 per proof gallon (i.e., the present rate of tax). Therefore, the $2.00 per proof gallon increase in the excise tax on distilled spirits provided by the act will not be paid to Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands with respect to distilled spirits brought into the United States from these possessions.

TITLE III—MEDICARE, MEDICAID AND MATERNAL AND CHILD HEALTH AMENDMENTS

SUBTITLE A—MEDICARE AMENDMENTS

5. Limitation on increase in hospital costs per case

The act limits for the two hospital cost reporting periods beginning on [illegible] the market basket plus one-quarter of 1 percentage point. The Secretary, taking into account the recommendations of the Prospective Payment Assessment Commission, would continue to have authority to establish a rate of increase, as under current law, but not more than market basket plus one-quarter of 1 percentage point during the applicable period.

The act provides that the rate of increase for exempted hospitals and exempted hospital units would not exceed market basket plus one-quarter of 1 percentage point in the first year or the second year.

6. Classification of certain rural hospitals

The act provides the hospitals located in counties redesignated as rural since enactment of the prospective payment system would be allowed a 2-year transition to the rural rates. In the first year, the hospital would be paid the rural rates plus two-thirds of the difference between its rural and urban rate. In the second year, it would be paid the rural rate plus one-third the difference between the rural and the urban rates. The provision is effective with respect to cost reporting periods beginning on or after Oct. 1, 1984.

The Secretary may refuse either to enter into or renew a provider agreement with an entity in which ownership of control is held by a person so convicted.

The act extends the Secretary's authority by authorizing the Secretary to terminate agreements with any entity in which an ownership or controlling interest is held by a person convicted of a program-related criminal offense, or an entity in which an officer, director, agent or managing employee was convicted of such a criminal offense.

The act (a) requires the Secretary to notify State Medicaid agencies and authorize the Secretary to require such agencies to bar the entity from participation in the program; and (b) requires the Secretary to notify the appropriate State licensing or certification agency and request that appro[illegible] ency keep the Secretary [illegible] taken.

[illegible] ve Medical Plans

[illegible] tions (HMO's) are re[illegible] f at least 30 days during which time they must accept Medicare beneficiaries up to the limits of their capacity. If there is more than one HMO in an area, there is no current requirement that the open enrollment periods be coordinated. In addition, the act allows an HMO to establish a benefits stabilization fund for a limited period of time.

The act requires the Secretary (after consultation with such organizations) to designate a single 30-day period each year in which all of the HMO's in an area participating in Medicare must have an open enrollment period. It permits HMO's to conduct open enrollment at other times during the year.

The act expands the types of providers to whom Medicare can make payments directly for HMO services to include hospitals and skilled nursing facilities.

30. Deadline for report on including payment for physicians' services to hospital inpatients in DRG payment amounts Present law requires the Secretary to report to the Congress on the advisability and feasibility of making payments for physician services furnished to hospital inpatients based on a diagnosis-related group system and to make legislative recommendations. The report is to be part of the report made to Congress during 1985.

The act requires the Secretary to report to Congress not later than July 1, 1985.

31. Flexible sanctions for noncompliance with requirements for end-stage renal disease facilities

Under prior law, end-stage renal disease (ESRD) facilities that are not in complete compliance with Medicare program requirements are subject to decertification.

The act authorizes the Secretary to apply intermediate sanctions to such facilities, such as denial of reimbursement for some or all patients admitted after the facility is notified of its noncompliance, or graduated reduction in reimbursement.

32. Emergency room services

Current law requires the Secretary to place reasonable limits on hospital costs and physician charges for outpatient services; bona fide emergency services provided in hospital emergency rooms are specifically exempted by statute from the limits.

The act provides a statutory definition of "bona fide emergency services" which would include services provided in a hospital emergency room after the sudden onset of a medical condition manifesting itself by acute symptoms of sufficient severity (including severe pain) such that the absence of immediate medical attention could reasonably be expected to result in: (a) placing the patient's health in serious jeopardy; (b) serious impairment to bodily functions; or (c) serious dysfunction of any bodily organ or part. The provision would be effective with respect to services furnished on or after date of enactment.

33. Part B premium

Currrent law requires the Secretary to calculate and announce each September the amount of the monthly premium that will be charged in the following calendar year for people enrolled in the Supplementary Medical Insurance (Part B) portion of the Medicare program. A temporary provision of law requires that for 1984 and 1985 the premium amount be calculated so as to produce premium income equal to 25 percent of program costs for enrollees aged 65 and over.

Beginning with 1986, the premium calculation under current law will revert to an earlier method under which the premium amount is the lower of: (1) an amount sufficient to cover one-half of program costs for the aged; or (2) the current premium amount increased by the percentage by which cash benefits were most recently increased under the cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) provisions of the Social Security program.

The act extends for calendar years 1986 and 1987 the existing temporary provision which fixes the proportion of the Part B Medicare costs financed by enrollees at 25 percent of program costs. Should no Social Security cost-of-living adjustment take place, the monthly premium would not be increased for that year.

In the case of an individual who has his or her Part B premium deducted from his or her Social Security check, if the cost-of-living adjustment is less than the amount of the increase in the premium, the premium increase would be reduced so as to avoid a reduction in the individual's Social Security check. In certain cases, the monthly premium would not increase for that individual for that year.

The estimated monthly premium under the act is $19.10 in 1986, and $21.30 in 1987.

34. Revaluation of assets

Medicare reimburses hospitals and other providers for their capital-related costs, including depreciation costs and interest. Investor-owned hospitals also receive a return on equity. When hospitals and other providers are sold, their assets are often revalued, thereby increasing reimbursement for these capital-related costs.

The act limits the increase in capital-related cost reimbursement to a new owner that would result from the revaluation of hospital or skilled nursing facility assets. The capital-related cost of the new owner would be based on the lesser of: (a) historical cost (the acquisition cost to the owner of record on the date of enactment), or (b) the purchase price to the new owner.

The Secretary would be required to continue recapture of depreciation as under current reimbursement policy.

The provision would not apply with respect to changes of ownership of assets pursuant to an enforceable agreement entered into before the date of enactment.

The act excludes from the calculation of allowable costs those expenses (such as lawyers' fees and feasibility studies) related to acquisitions and mergers. The provision is effective for costs incurred on or after the date of enactment.

The act also limits State medicaid reimbursement for the costs associated with the sale or transfer of a hospital or nursing home. States would be required to assure the Secretary that the methodologies used to establish rates paid to hospitals, SNF's or ICF's can reasonably be expected not to increase those rates more than they would increase under Medicare policy as the result of a change of ownership of a facility.

The provision applies to medical assistance furnished on or after Oct. 1, 1984, except in certain cases requiring State legislation.

35. Elimination of special payment provisions for preadmission diagnostic testing

"The Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1980" authorized 100 percent Part B reimbursement on a reasonable cost or charge basis for preadmission diagnostic testing, either in a hospital's outpatient department or in a physician's office, within 7 days prior to a hospital admission.

The final regulation implementing 100 percent reimbursement for preadmission testing was not published.

The act repeals the provision. It clarifies that repeal shall not be construed as prohibiting program payments (subject to cost-sharing) for preadmission diagnostic testing performed in a physician's office to the extent such testing is otherwise reimbursable. The section is effective with respect to services performed after the date of enactment.

36. Contracts for Medicare claims processing

The act continues the right of providers to nominate intermediaries, but makes a specific exception for competitively bid contracts.

The Secretary would be required to limit the number of home health regional intermediaries (by the end of three years) to no more than ten, in order to establish expertise in home health claims processing and to facilitate uniform interpretation of Medicare rules.

The act provides that in determining a carriers, or intermediary's necessary and proper cost of administration, the Secretary shall, with respect to each contract, take into account the amount that is reasonable and adequate to meet the costs which must be incurred by an efficiently and economically operated organization in carrying out the terms of its agreement. It would be required that all carriers and intermediaries perform the full range of carrier or intermediary activities and be health insuring organizations.

The Secretary would be permitted to enter into no more than two competitively bid contracts under part A, and two competitively bid contracts under part B of Medicare, for each of the next 2 years only. These competitive contracts could only be used to replace consistently poor performers (contractors falling into the lowest 20th percentile of all performers, as measured by published cost and performance criteria).

The act requires that standards for carriers and intermediaries be available for public comment prior to implementation but does not require that they have to go through the full rulemaking procedures.

37. Lesser of cost or charges

Medicare pays providers the lesser of costs or charges (LCC). HCFA regulations allow hospitals to calculate the amount of their cost and charges in the aggregate for inpatient and outpatient services.

The act requires the Secretary to issue regulations to isolate the calculation of the lesser of cost or charges for outpatient services from the calculation for inpatient services.

To protect hospitals serving substantial numbers of indigent patients, the Secretary would be required to modify the current rule under which public providers determined to have nominal charges are exempted from the lesser of cost or charges provision.

The same rule would also apply to nonpublic providers that serve a substantial number of indigent patients.

38. Coverage of hemophilia clotting factor

Part B of Medicare excludes coverage for drugs and biologicals unless they are of the type that cannot be self-administered and are commonly furnished as incident to physicians' services.

The act provides Medicare coverage, subject to utilization controls deemed necessary by the Secretary, for blood clotting factors and the supplies necessary for the self-administration of the clotting factor. The provision applies to items and services purchased on or after enactment.

39. Cost-sharing for durable medical equipment furnished as a home health benefit

Medicare payment for durable medical equipment which is not provided as a covered inpatient service is based on 80 percent of reasonable charges (80 percent of reasonable costs in the case of a provider), with one exception. Payment is based on 100 percent of costs when furnished as part of a covered home health service.

The act requires 20 percent coinsurance on durable medical equipment provided by home health agencies. It also clarifies the definition of durable medical equipment and the coverage of such equipment when furnished by providers.

40. Modification of working aged provision

"The Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982" (TEFRA) changed the Medicare benefits for the working aged. TEFRA amended "The Age Discrimination in Employment Act" (ADEA) to provide that an employer must offer to an employee age 65 through 69 the same group health plan offered to employees under age 65. As of Jan. 1, 1983, if the employee elects the employer plan, Medicare benefits become secondary to benefits under the employer group health plan for an employed individual between the ages of 65 and 69 (and for the spouse of such employed individual, if the spouse is age 65 through 69).

The act provides that employers must also offer group coverage to an employee who has not reached age 65 in cases where the employee has a spouse age 65 through 69 under the same circumstances as coverage is offered to employees with a spouse under the age of 65. In the case where such employee elects the employer plan, Medicare coverage for his older spouse would be secondary.

41. Elimination of Part B deductible for certain diagnostic laboratory tests

Prior law authorizes the Secretary to negotiate with a laboratory a payment rate that is considered the full charge for diagnostic tests. The payment, which is made directly to the laboratory, equals 100 percent of the negotiated rate subject to the annual Part B deductible. The beneficiary is not liable for coinsurance payments.

The act eliminates application of the annual Part B deductible in the case of diagnostic tests performed in a laboratory which has entered a negotiated rate agreement with the Secretary.

The act specifies that the current law provision providing for negotiated agreements only apply to services not paid for under the new fee schedule (see Item 9).

42. Repeal of exclusion of for-profit organizations from research and demonstration grants

Prior law limits the awarding of grants for the conduct of research and demonstrations to non-profit organizations. Contracts are permitted to be awarded to both for-profit and non-profit organizations.

The act extends the research and demonstration grant authority to for-profit organizations.

43. Payments to promote closing and conversion of underutilized hospital facilities

Sec. 2101 of the "Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981" (Public Law 97-35) authorizes the Secretary to make Medicare and Medicaid payments to cover capital and increased operating costs associated with the closing or conversion of underutilized hospital facilities.

The act requires the Secretary to provide to the Congress an analysis of the modifications required to conform the closure and conversion program to the prospective payment system established under sec. 1886 of the act.

44. Judicial review of provider reimbursement review board decisions

The act specifies that those providers that bring an administrative appeal as a group before the Provider Reimbursement Review Board because of a common issue of fact, law or regulation must then bring any judicial appeal as a group. The amendment applies to any administrative action or judicial appeal brought on or after enactment.

The act clarifies that civil action may be taken within 60 days after notification is received (rather than after a determination is rendered) that the Provider Reimbursement Review Board determines it does not have authority to decide a question. The amendment would be effective upon enactment.

The act clarifies the effective dates of certain provisions of current law by specifying that for actions brought by groups of providers in a judicial area where the largest number of them is located, the effective date would be actions brought on or after Apr. 20, 1983. For actions brought by providers under common ownership, the effective date is the date of enactment.

45. Enrollment and premium penalty with respect to the working aged provision

The Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act (TEFRA) requires employers to offer their employees aged 65 to 69 the same health benefits plan offered to their younger workers. Medicare payments are secondary with respect to these older workers (and their spouses aged 65-69). (The act extends the provision to include younger workers; see item 40.) Employees who elect enrollment in such employer-offered health benefit plans, and their spouses, may wish to delay enrollment in Part B because Part B coverage may be duplicative. However, persons who enroll late are subject to a penalty. The monthly Part B premium is increased by 10 percent for each full 12 months that an individual delays enrollment in the program beyond his or her initial enrollment period.

The act waives the Part B enrollment penalty for workers and their spouses aged 65 through 69 who elect private coverage under the provision of TEFRA and establishes special enrollment periods for such workers. The waiver applies for the period during which an individual continues to be covered under an employer's group health benefits plan.

The act provides that the penalty relief provision is effective with respect to the first calendar month beginning at least 30 days after enactment.

The act provides that the special enrollment provisions are effective for months beginning more than 90 days after enactment.

46. Waivers for Social Health Maintenance Organizations

The Secretary has general authority to conduct experiments and demonstrations. While the Department has provided start-up funding for a social HMO project, waivers allowing the four demonstration sites to become operational have not been approved by the Office of Management and Budget.

The act requires the Secretary to approve certain waivers for a project to demonstrate the concept of a social HMO at four sites within 30 days after submission of a waiver request or within 30 days of enactment in the case of waiver requests submitted prior to enactment.

The act requires submission to Congress of an interim report on the status of the projects within 45 days of enactment. A final report is due to Congress 42 months after enactment.

47. Peer Review Organizations (PRO's)

Under prior law, payment to PRO's is made from the Part A trust fund. The Secretary is directed to fund PRO's in amounts determined to be reasonable, but not less than the 1982 funding levels (adjusted for inflation). This provision does not apply to PSRO's. Public Law 98-21 required hospitals to enter into an agreement with a peer review organization as a condition of payment under the Medicare program. Such agreements must be entered into by Oct. 1, 1984. Health benefit payer organizations may not qualify as a PRO until after Oct. 1, 1984.

The act requires hospitals, as a condition of Medicare payment, to enter into an agreement with a PSRO in the area and to fund PSRO's out of the Medicare trust fund. The provision would be effective on enactment.

The act delays the date by which hospitals are required to have an agreement with a PRO from Oct. 1, 1984 to Nov. 15, 1984. The date on which health benefit payer organizations can first qualify as PRO's would also be Nov. 15, 1984.

48. Technical amendments relating to Medicare prospective payment

(a) Public Law 98-21 provided that hospitals in a State may be reimbursed according to the State's hospital reimbursement control system rather than under prospective payment, provided certain conditions are met. The act requires approved State systems to prevent unbundling of services and inappropriate admissions practices as is required of hospitals under the prospective payment system.

(b) The Secretary is required to publish in the Federal Register for public comment the proposed annual index and the final annual index of DRG's. The act clarifies that public comment is required only on the proposed annual index.

(c) Under Public Law 98-21, hospitals paid on the basis of the new prospective payment system are required to have an agreement with a peer review organization. The act requires hospitals exempt from the Federal prospective payment system to have agreements with PRO's or PSRO's.

The act clarifies that the State program and exempt-hospital provisions of Public Law 98-21 would be effective Oct. 1, 1983. In addition, the act requires publication of proposed regulations by July 1, 1984, and final regulations by Oct. 1, 1984, with respect to requirements for State systems.

The act directs the Secretary to develop a definition of hospitals with a "significantly disproportionate number of patients who have low income or are entitled to benefits under Part A" and to identify such providers by Dec. 31, 1984, so that a better determination can be made under existing law as to whether payment adjustments or exceptions are appropriate.

49. Normalization of Trust Fund transfers

The Social Security Amendments of 1983 revised the accounting procedures of the Old Age and Survivors, Disability, and Hospital Insurance Trust Funds to provide that the Treasury would credit to the Trust Funds, at the beginning of each month, the amount of payroll taxes estimated to be received during the month. Under prior law, amounts were paid to the Trust Fund from "time to time."

The act repeals the "normalization" provisions with respect to the Hospital Insurance Trust Fund. Thus, funds would be transferred from the Treasury to the HI Trust Fund as under prior law. The provision would not affect the OASDI Trust Funds.

50. Services of a clinical psychologist provided to members of an HMO

Under prior law, services of physician assistants and nurse practitioners are recognized as "medical and other health services" if they are furnished pursuant to a risk-sharing arrangement with a health maintenance organization.

The act provides that the services of clinical psychologists, when furnished pursuant to a risk-sharing arrangement with a health maintenance organization, are recognized as "medical and other health services."

The Secretary would have the authority to specify the qualifications necessary to be identified as a clinical psychologist.

ADDITIONAL SPENDING REDUCTION PROVISIONS

A. MEDICAID AND MATERNAL AND CHILD HEALTH PROVISIONS (SUBTITLE B OF TITLE III OF DIVISION B)

1. Medicaid coverage for pregnant women and young children

Under prior law, States must provide medicaid to poor women and children receiving cash assistance under AFDC. They have the option of extending coverage at their current Federal matching rates to, among others, the following additional groups meeting AFDC income and resource requirements: first-time pregnant women; pregnant women in two-parent families where the principal breadwinner is unemployed; pregnant women in two-parent families; and children under age 18 or 21 in two-parent families (Ribicoff children).

The act requires the States to provide medicaid coverage at regular Federal matching rates to the following groups meeting AFDC income and resources requirements: (1) first-time pregnant women from medical verification of pregnancy; (2) pregnant women in two-parent families where the principal breadwinner is unemployed, from medical verification of pregnancy; and (3) children born on or after Oct. 1, 1983, up to age 5 in two-parent families.

This provision is effective Oct. 1, 1984, or where the Secretary determines State legislation is necessary, the first day of the first calendar quarter after the close of the first regular legislative session after enactment, whether or not the Secretary issues implementing regulations.

2. Clarification of medicaid entitlement for certain newborns

Under prior law, certain States have established medicaid application procedures that fail to provide for the automatic addition of a newborn child to a medicaid beneficiary's family unit for coverage purposes.

The act provides that a child born to a woman eligible for and receiving medicaid at the time of birth is deemed eligible for up to 1 year, as long as the woman remains eligible. This provision applies with respect to children born on or after Oct. 1, 1984.

3. Recertification of need for stays in SNFs and JCFs

a. Recertifications.—Under prior law, a State's evidence of a satisfactory program of controls over utilization must include evidence that physicians (or a physician assistant or nurse practitioner under the supervision of a physician) recertify the need for continued skilled nursing facility (SNF) and intermediate care facility (ICF) services every 60 days. Under the act, recertifications of SNF patients and ICF patients would become a State Medicaid plan requirement. Such recertifications of SNF patients would be required 30, 60 and 90 days after admission, and every 60 days thereafter. In addition, with respect to ICF, recertifications would be required 60 and 180 days after admission; 12, 18 and 24 months after admission; and annually thereafter.

b. Grace period.—The act permits a 10-day grace period if the State can demonstrate that the physician had good cause for missing the deadline.

c. Penalty.—Under prior law, the Federal penalty imposed on States which fail to have an adequate utilization control program is 33⅓ percent times the ratio of the number of patients in facilities with one or more records out of compliance to the total number of patients in facilities in the State.

Effective July 1, 1984, the current penalty would not apply to the physician recertification requirement with respect to SNF or ICF patients. However, the current penalty would continue to apply to the requirement that States have an effective program of medical review.

d. Secretarial duty.—A U.S. district court has held that the Secretary of Health and Human Services has the authority, but lacks the duty, to assure that nursing homes participating in the Medicaid program provide care consistent with the individual needs of their medicaid patients. In re estate of Smith v. O'Halloran, 557 F. Supp. 289 (D.Colo. 1983).

The act reaffirms the Secretary's existing duty to assure that the standards governing the provision of care to medicaid patients in SNF's and ICF's, and the enforcement of those standards, are adequate to protect the health and safety of the residents and to promote effective and efficient use of public monies.

The provisions are effective for calendar quarters on or after enactment, except for SNF admissions before enactment, in which case the amendments would not require recertifications sooner or more frequently than were required under the law in effect before such date.

4. Waiver of certain membership requirements for certain HMO's

Under prior law, the number of medicare/medicaid beneficiaries enrolled in a health maintenance organization (HMO) or other prepaid plan delivering services on a risk basis cannot exceed 75 percent of the total enrollment. The Secretary may waive the requirements in the case of public HMO's if the Secretary determines that special circumstances warrant and the entity is making reasonable efforts to enroll non-Medicare/Medicaid beneficiaries.

The act permits the Secretary to modify or waive the 75-percent enrollment limitation in the case of an HMO that: (1) is nonprofit; (2) has at least 25,000 enrollees; (3) is and has been a Federally-qualified HMO for at least 4 years; (4) provides basic health services through its staff; (5) is located in a medically underserved area; and (6) had previously received a waiver of the 75 percent limitation under sec. 1115 of the Act. The Secretary may exercise this waiver only if she determines that special circumstances warrant and that the organization had made, and is making, reasonable efforts to enroll non-medicare/medicaid beneficiaries.

In addition, under prior law, medicaid eligibles enrolled in HMO's may disenroll, without cause, upon 1 month's notice. The act permits States to require medicaid beneficiaries who choose to enroll in HMO's meeting certain requirements to remain in the HMO for up to 6 months, unless the beneficiary had good cause to disenroll before that time. During the first month of each 6-month period, the beneficiary could disenroll without cause and receive a medicaid card that did not restrict his or her choice of provider. For the remainder of each 6-month period, the beneficiary would have to satisfy the State that there was good cause for disenrollment, such as poor quality care or lack of access to needed specialty services. States would be expected to establish effective procedures for reviewing requirements for disenrollment on a prompt and fair basis. As under current law, enrollment in HMO's would be voluntary; beneficiaries would have freedom of choice among participating HMO's, and between prepaid and free-service providers.

The act limits the ability of States to impose these restrictions on beneficiary freedom of choice to the following two types of entities: (1) Federally-qualified HMO's, and (2) organizations that are receiving, and have at least two years prior to contracting with the medicaid program received, grants of at least $100,00 under the Migrant Health Center, Community Health Center, and Appalachian Regional Commission programs. In each case, at least 25 percent of the organization's prepaid patients would have to be other than medicare or medicaid beneficiaries. The States would be required to notify beneficiaries prior to enrollment, and at least twice a year thereafter of their disenrollment rights. The current Federal regulatory requirements with respect to prepaid HMO contracts, including those relating to grievance procedures and quality assurance systems, would apply to these special "lock-in" arrangements as well.

The provision is effective on the date of enactment.

5. Maximum amount of medicaid payments to Puerto Rico and the Territories

Prior law established the following annual ceilings on the amount of Federal medicaid matching payment which certain jurisdictions may receive: Puerto Rico, $45 million; Virgin Islands, $1.5 million; Guam, $1.4 million; Northern Mariana Islands $350,000; and American Samoa, $750,000.

The act raises the ceiling to the following levels: Puerto Rico $63.4 million, Virgin Islands, $2.1 million; Guam, $2.0 million; Northern Mariana Islands, $550,000; and American Samoa, $1.15 million. The provision is effective for fiscal years beginning on or after Oct. 1, 1983.

6. Payment for psychiatric hospital services

Under prior law, special reimbursement limitations apply with respect to hospital inpatients who are awaiting nursing home placement.

The act delays, until July 1, 19[illegible], the application of reimbursement limitations with respect to public psychiatric hospitals. The act further provides that the reductions made for the 12-month periods ending June 30, 1986, and June 30, 1987, are one-third and two-thirds, respectively, of the amounts which would otherwise have been required. The provision is effective on July 1, 1985.

7. Miscellaneous technical amendments

Titles V and XIX of the Social Security Act contain certain technical errors. The act corrects those errors.

In addition, the act makes technical corrections to Titles V, and XIX of the Social Security Act.

The provisions are effective on the date of enactment.

8. Mandatory assignment of rights of payment by medicaid recipients

Under prior law, States are permitted to require medicaid applicants to assign to the State their rights to medical support and third party payments for medical care. Approximately 25 States have taken advantage of this option.

The act mandates that States require medicaid applicants to assign to the State their rights to third party payments as a condition of eligibility. The provision is effective on Oct. 1, 1984, except where State legislation is required, in which case, it is effective the first day of the first calendar quarter beginning after the close of the first regular session of the State legislature that begins after the date of enactment.

9. Requirements for medical review and independent professional review

Medical review requirements for SNF's and independent professional review requirements for ICF's under medicaid both call for teams of physicians, registered nurses and other appropriate personnel to conduct virtually similar kinds of review.

The act makes State plan requirements consistent for medical review and independent professional review for both ICF's and SNF's. The act also corrects a technical error to assure that Christian Science sanitoria are excluded from the revised review requirements. This provision is effective on the date of enactment.

10. Flexibility in setting payment rates for hospitals furnishing long-term care services under medicaid

Under prior law, special requirements are provided for the establishment of payment rates for small rural hospitals furnishing skilled nursing or intermediate care facility services under medicaid.

The act permits States to pay for long-term care services at the designated hospitals either on the basis of the special payment rates provided under current law or on the basis of the same general criteria that are applicable to hospitals and nursing homes. Whatever payment method a State chose would have to be applied to all the hospitals in question. The provision applies to services provided after the date of enactment.

11. Authority of Secretary to issue and enforce subpoenas under medicaid

Under prior law, the Secretary is authorized to issue and seek enforcement of subpoenas under medicare to obtain information needed in connection with hearings, investigations, and other matters related to fraud and abuse.

The act authorizes the Secretary to issue and seek enforcement of subpoenas under medicaid to the same extent allowed under medicare, effective on the date of enactment.

12. Medicaid clinic administration

Under prior law, States may cover clinic services under their medicaid programs. Regulations issued by the Department of Health and Human Services limit coverage of clinic services to situations in which services are furnished under the direction of a physician. In certain cases, this physician-direction rule has been interpreted as requiring that clinic administrators be physicians.

The act provides that the clinic need not be administered by a physician, effective for services provided on or after the date of enactment.

13. Increase in authorization for Maternal and Child Health Block Grant Program

The permanent authorization for the Maternal and Child Health Services (MCH) Block Grant is $373 million. In fiscal year 1983, an additional $105 million was appropriated for the Block Grant, and in fiscal year 1984, an additional $26 million was appropriated.

The act provides for an increase in the permanent authorization level for the MCH Block Grant to $478 million, effective fiscal year 1984.

The provision applies to fiscal years beginning on or after Oct. 1, 1983.

B. RECOVERY OF HILL-BURTON FUNDS (SUBTITLE C OF TITLE III OF DIVISION B)

1. Recovery

Under prior law, the Federal government is entitled to recover amounts awarded to a facility for construction, modernization, or conversion under Title VI and Title XVI of the Public Health Service Act if, within 20 years, the facility (1) is sold or transferred to a proprietary entity, or (2) undergoes a change in use from that for which the assistance was originally provided.

In the case of facilities that were sold or transferred or underwent a change in use before the date of enactment, the act provides that the interest penalty will not begin to accrue until 30 days after enactment, but in no case earlier than 180 days from the date of sale, transfer, or change in use.

The act further authorizes the Secretary to waive recovery altogether in the case of the sale or transfer of a facility to a proprietary entity only if the following requirements are met. First, the new owner or manager must agree to assume and comply with the Hill-Burton "community service" obligation, as implemented by current regulations. Second, the acquiring entity must have established an irrevocable trust, the corpus and income of which are to be used exclusively for the provision of uncompensated services to persons unable to pay in accordance with current regulations. The trust must be established in an amount equal to the greater of (1) twice the cost of the remaining "uncompensated services" obligation of the Hill-Burton facility, including any deficits to be made up, as determined by the Secretary under current regulations; or (2) the amount the Federal government would be entitled to recover, as determined by the Secretary.

2. Liens

Under prior law, the Federal recovery right does not constitute a lien upon a Hill-Burton facility prior to judgment.

The act retains current law with respect to liens.

The Secretary shall have in effect regulations and personnel to place in effect the amendments made by this section not later than the expiration of the 180-day period beginning on the date of the enactment of this section.

C. UNCOMPENSATED SERVICES PROVIDED BY SKILLED NURSING FACILITIES AND INTERMEDIATE CARE FACILITIES (SUBTITLE D OF TITLE III OF DIVISION B)

Study

The act requires the Secretary to conduct a study to determine whether the current regulations should distinguish between hospitals and nursing homes with respect to compliance with the statutory requirement that a Hill-Burton facility provide a reasonable volume of uncompensated services to persons unable to pay. The study is to be transmitted to the Congress no later than Jan. 1, 1985.

[1] The amounts represent the estimated effects of the life insurance tax provisions assuming that certain temporary provisions enacted in the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (TEFRA), which provide for the taxation of life insurance companies, had been terminated. If these provisions had not been allowed to expire at the end of 1983, the estimates for the provisions in the act would show increases in fiscal year receipts of $935 million in 1984, $1,050 million in 1985, $1,101 million in 1986, and $1,192 million in 1987.

[3] Gain of less than $10 million.

[4] Amounts have not been assigned to footnotes for summation purposes. Therefore, totals do not include estimates represented by footnotes.

H.R. 4206 (Mr. Archer with cosponsors); Public Law 98–259; app. Apr. 10, 1984.

H.R. 4206 provides an exemption from U.S. income tax for certain individuals who die as a result of wounds or injury incurred outside the United States in terroristic or military action against the United States or its allies, while a member of the Armed Forces of the United States, or while in the civilian employ of the U.S. Government.

The bill was originally approved by the Committee on Ways and Means as part of a miscellaneous committee amendment to H.R. 4170, the Tax Reform Act of 1984. The Committee was discharged from consideration of H.R. 4206 by unanimous consent (requested by Chairman Rostenkowski), and H.R. 4206, as amended, was approved by the House on Feb. 22, 1984. The Senate approved H.R. 4206, without amendment, on Apr. 5, 1984. The bill was signed into law by the President on Apr. 10, 1984, as Public Law 98–259.

H.R. 4230 (Mr. Bonker); House agreed to Senate amendment with amendment Oct. 11, 1984.

H.R. 4230, the Export Administration Amendments Act, was called up by the House on Oct. 27, 1983, and passed on the same date. The bill was considered and passed in the Senate on Oct. 10, 1984, with amendment. On Oct. 11, 1984, the House agreed to the Senate amendment with an amendment. H.R. 4230, as passed by the House on Oct. 11, 1984, would have extended the authorities under the Export Administration Act of 1979 as amended. Sec. 125 of H.R. 4230 amends the Trade Expansion Act of 1962, to authorize the President to impose controls on imports into the United States of violators of U.S. or COCOM national security export controls.

As of adjournment of the 98th Congress, H.R. 4230 was pending in the Senate.

H.R. 4280 (Mr. Clay with cosponsors); Public Law 98–397; app. Aug. 23, 1984.

H.R. 4280, the Retirement Equity Act of 1984, was jointly referred to the Committees on Ways and Means and Education and Labor. The Committee on Education and Labor reported H.R. 4280 to the House on Apr. 5, 1984, and the Committee on Ways and Means reported the bill on May 17, 1984. H.R. 4280 passed the House May 22, 1984. On Aug. 2, 1984, the bill was reported to the Senate and it passed the Senate with an amendment on Aug. 6, 1984.

On Aug. 9, 1984, the House concurred in the Senate amendment and the bill was signed into law by the President on Aug. 23, 1984, as Public Law 98–397.

SUMMARY OF THE MAJOR PROVISIONS OF PUBLIC LAW 98–397

Minimum age conditions

Under prior law, an employee who has not attained age 25 or completed at least 1 year of service may be excluded from participation in an employer's plan. The act generally lowers the age that an employee can be required to attain to 21; 26 in the case of certain educational institutions. In addition, the act requires that service from age 18 (rather than 22, as under prior law) must be counted for purposes of vesting in benefits under an employer's pension plan.

Service crediting

The act provides that an employee will not lose credit for prior years of service with an employer until the employee has a break in service at least equal to 5 years. In addition, the act makes it easier for individuals to take time off from work on account of the birth or adoption of a child without incurring a break in service that could result in the loss of service credit.

Joint and survivor annuity

Under prior law, a participant in a plan could waive a joint and survivor annuity benefit, which would provide benefits to the participant's spouse after the death of the participant, without the consent of the spouse. The act recognizes that the joint and survivor annuity rules create a right in the nonparticipant spouse that should not be waived only by the participant. Thus, the act provides that an election to waive a joint and survivor annuity benefit can be made only with the consent of the participant's spouse.

Preretirement survivor annuity

Prior law provided that if a participant in a plan died before reaching normal retirement age (or, in some cases, early retirement age) no benefits need be paid to the participant's survivors. In other words, even though the participant may have significant vested benefits in a plan, the entire amount could be forfeited if the participant died before the payment of benefits commenced.

The act makes significant changes in the availability of survivor benefits under a plan when the participant dies before normal retirement age. Under the act, a participant who has any vested benefits under a plan must be provided with a preretirement survivor annuity. The preretirement survivor annuity is a benefit payable to the participant's spouse if the participant dies before starting to receive benefits under the plan. The act permits the participant and the participant's spouse to waive this benefit. A plan is not required to notify the participant and spouse of the right to waive the preretirement survivor annuity before the participant attains age 32.

Under the act, the preretirement survivor annuity is not required to be paid to the surviving spouse until the time that the participant would have attained the earliest retirement age under the plan. This preretirement annuity is designed to provide retirement benefits to the surviving spouse at the time that such benefits otherwise would have been paid if the participant had survived.

Certain plans not required to provide joint and survivor and preretirement survivor annuities

Under prior law, many plans could avoid the requirement that a joint and survivor annuity be automatically provided to participants merely by making any life annuity under the plan an optional form of benefit. The act changes this and expands the class of plans required to provide joint and survivor and preretirement survivor annuities. Under the act, survivor benefits are to be paid unless, in the case of certain defined contribution plans, (1) the full account balance of the participant is paid to the surviving spouse upon the participant's death, (2) the participant does not elect to receive benefits in the form of a life annuity, and (3) with respect to the participant, the plan is not a direct or indirect transferee of a plan required to provide a joint and survivor and preretirement survivor annuity. A special rule applies to employee stock ownership plans.

One-year marriage rule

Under prior law, a plan could require that a participant and spouse married for at least 1 year before benefits commence and before the participant dies in order for the surviving spouse to receive any survivor benefits. This rule of prior law operated to deny survivor benefits to a former spouse when a divorce occurs after the payment of benefits has commenced.

The act changes this rule to provide that a plan may only require that the participant and spouse be married for at least 1 year before the earlier of the time that benefits commence or the participant's death. In addition, the act provides a special rule to take into account a marriage shortly before benefit payments commence.

Two-year nonaccidental death rule

Prior law contained a rule that permitted a plan to ignore certain elections (or revocations of elections) to waive a joint and survivor annuity if the election occurs within 2 years of the participant's death from natural causes. This rule was designed to prevent adverse selection against the plan by participants who know they are dying. The act repeals this 2-year nonaccidental death rule.

Assignment of pension benefits in divorce proceedings

ERISA provides that all State laws that are inconsistent with the provisions of ERISA are preempted. In addition, prior law provided that plan benefits could not be assigned to another person or alienated. These rules of prior law have been interpreted by some courts to prevent the division of an individual's benefits upon divorce. Other courts have found implicit exceptions to the ERISA preemption provision and the assignment or alienation rule for division of benefits in divorce proceedings.

The act clarifies that ERISA does not preempt State law to the extent that they divide plan benefits pursuant to a qualified domestic relations order. Similarly, payment of benefits under a qualified domestic relations order is not a prohibited assignment or alienation of benefits. The provisions of the act are designed to provide certainty both to the State courts and to the plans by establishing specific requirements that domestic relations orders are to meet to be qualified domestic relations orders. In addition, the act provides quidelines that plan administrators are to follow in determining whether orders are qualified and in notifying the affected parties of their rights.

Under prior law, unless the participant consented, plans could not (without incurring additional costs if the participant is rehired) "cash-out" a participant's benefit when the participant leaves by providing a lump sum distribution if the present value of the participant's benefit exceeds $1,750. If the present value of the participant's benefit is less than or equal to $1,750, the plan could "cash out" the benefit without the participant's consent.

The act increases the cash-out level to $3,500 for participants and for surviving spouses of participants and provides that no cash out may be made if the value is greater than $3,500 without the consent of the participant or surviving spouse. Under the act, in computing whether the present value of a benefit exceeds $3,500, a plan cannot use an interest rate assumption that is greater than the rate used by the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation in valuing lump sum distributions paid upon termination of a plan.

Notice of rollover and other favorable tax treatment

Under prior law, an individual receiving payments from a qualified pension plan might be entitled to certain favorable tax treatment with respect to the distribution. Often, individuals fail to take advantage of favorable tax treatment because they are not aware of their rights.

The act requires that plan administrators who make distributions from a qualified plan to participants or surviving spouses are to advise the recipient that certain favorable tax treatment may be available with respect to the distribution. In addition, this notice is to include information that makes it clear that this favorable treatment may be lost if the participant or surviving spouse does not act within 60 days after the date of the distribution.

Cutback of accrued benefits

The act clarifies and makes statutory the provisions of two revenue rulings. Under the act, as under Revenue Rulings 79-90 and 81-12, a plan amendment which has the effect of (1) eliminating or reducing a retirement-type subsidy or an early retirement benefit, or (2) eliminating an optional form of benefit with respect to benefits accrued before the amendment, is considered to be a reduction of accrued benefits. Generally, such reductions are not permitted to be made by plan amendments.

The act makes clear that the elimination or reduction of a subsidy is not to be treated as causing a reduction of accrued benefits unless the subsidy is a retirement-type subsidy (the term "retirement-type subsidy" is to be defined by Treasury regulations). This act does not intend to prevent the elimination or reduction of a qualified disability benefit, a medical benefit, a social security supplement, a shutdown benefit, or a preretirement death benefit (including life insurance). These are not retirement-type subsidies within the meaning of the act.

The act also clarifies that its provisions with respect to a retirement-type subsidy apply only if the conditions imposed by the plan on the availability of the subsidy have been satisfied by the employee (either before or after the plan is amended). Where the protection is afforded, an employee's accrued benefit is not to be less than the protected level or the accrued benefit determined under the plan without regard to the protection, whichever is greater. For example, if a plan is amended to eliminate a subsidized early retirement benefit for employees who have completed 30 years of service, then the plan would not be required to provide the subsidy to an employee who never completes 30 years of service and it would not be required to provide benefits to such an employee before the normal retirement age. On the other hand, if the employee completes 30 years of service, then the employee's accrued benefit is not to be less than the protected level or the accrued benefit determined without regard to the protection, whichever is greater.

In addition, the act does not permit the elimination or reduction of a subsidy, benefit option, or early retirement benefit by an amendment under a terminated plan. The provisions specify the minimum protection to which an employee is entitled.

Study by the General Accounting Office

The act directs the Comptroller General to conduct a study of the effect of women on participation, vesting, funding, integration, survivorship, and other relevant plan and Federal pension rules. This study is to be transmitted to the four committees with jurisdiction over ERISA no later than Jan. 1, 1990.

Effective dates

The act generally is effective for plan years beginning after Dec. 31, 1984. Delayed effective dates are provided for collectively bargained plans.

Certain special effective dates are provided under the act. One rule provides that individuals who terminated employment between Sept. 2, 1974 (the date of enactment of ERISA), and Jan. 1, 1976 (the effective date of ERISA), are entitled to a joint and survivor annuity under the rules of post-1975 law. Another rule provides that individuals who terminated employment between Jan. 1, 1976, and the date of enactment of this act are entitled to elect to receive a preretirement survivor benefit.

H.R. 4325 (Mrs. Kennelly with cosponsors); Public Law 98-378; app. Aug. 16, 1984.

H.R. 4325, the Child Support Enforcement Amendments of 1983, was reported to the House by the Committee on Ways and Means on Nov. 10, 1983, and passed the House on Nov. 16, 1983.

H.R. 4325 was reported to the Senate in the nature of a substitute on Apr. 9, 1984, and passed the Senate on Apr. 25, 1984.

The bill was signed into law by the President on Aug. 16, 1984, as Public Law 98-378. A summary follows:

The Child Support Enforcement Amendments of 1984 strengthen the child support enforcement and paternity establishment program authorized by title IV-D of the Social Security Act by requiring the States to implement effective enforcement procedures, by providing incentives to the States to make available services to both aid to families with dependent children (AFDC) and non-AFDC families and to increase the effectiveness of their programs, and by otherwise improving Federal and State administration of the program.

Purpose of the program.—Language is added to the statement of purpose assuring that services will be made available to non-AFDC families as well as AFDC families.

Improved State child support enforcement.—States are required to enact laws establishing the following procedures with respect to their IV-D cases:

1. Make mandatory wage withholding for all IV-D families (AFDC and non-AFDC) if support payments are delinquent in an amount equal to 1 month's support. States must also allow absent parents to request withholding at an earlier date.
2. Impose liens against real and personal property for amounts of overdue support.
3. Withhold State tax refunds payable to a parent of a child receiving IV-D services, if the parent is delinquent in support payments.
4. Make available information regarding the amount of overdue support owed by an absent parent, to any consumer credit bureau, upon request of such organization.
5. Require individuals who have demonstrated a pattern of delinquent payments to post a bond, or give some other guarantee to secure payment of overdue support.
6. Establish expedited processes within the State judicial system or under administrative processes for obtaining and enforcing child support orders, and, at the option of the State, for determining paternity.
7. Notify each AFDC recipient at least once each year of the amount of child support collected on behalf of that recipient.
8. Permit the establishment of paternity until a child's 18th birthday.
9. At the option of the State, provide that child support payments must be made through the agency that administers the State's income withholding system if either the custodial or noncustodial parent requests that they be made in this manner. The procedure must be available regardless of whether there is an arrearage that requires withholding to occur. The State must charge a fee equal to the cost incurred by the State for this service up to a maximum of $25 a year.

The Secretary of HHS may grant an exemption to a State from the required procedures, subject to later review, if the State can demonstrate that such procedures will not improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the State IV-D program.

The enforcement provisions are generally effective Oct. 1, 1985. However, if a State agency administering a plan approved under part D of title IV of the Social Security Act demonstrates to the satisfaction of the Secretary that it cannot, by reason of State law, comply with requirements of a provision mentioned above, the Secretary may prescribe that the provision will become effective beginning with the 4th month beginning after the close of the 1st session of such State's legislature ending on or after Oct. 1, 1985.

Federal matching of administrative costs.—The Federal matching share is gradually reduced from 70 percent as follows: 68 percent in fiscal years 1988 and 1989, and 66 percent in fiscal year 1990 and each year thereafter.

Federal incentive payments.—The current incentive formula which gives States 12 percent of their AFDC collections (paid for out of the Federal share of the collections) is replaced with a new formula that is designed to encourage States to develop programs that emphasize collections on behalf of both AFDC and non-AFDC families, and to improve program cost effectiveness. The basis incentive payment will be equal to 6 percent of the State's AFDC collections, and 6 percent of its non-AFDC collections. States may qualify for higher incentive payments, up to a maximum of 10 percent of collections, if their AFDC or non-AFDC collections exceed combined administrative costs for both AFDC and non-AFDC components of the program.

The total dollar amount of incentives paid for non-AFDC families may not exceed the amount of the State's incentive payment for AFDC collections for fiscal years 1986 and 1987. However, thereafter the incentive paid for non-AFDC collections will be capped at an amount equal to 105 percent of the incentive for AFDC collections in fiscal year 1988, 110 percent in fiscal year 1989, and 115 percent in fiscal year 1990 and any fiscal year thereafter. The agreement also provides that for fiscal year 1985, the amount of the AFDC incentive will be calculated on the basis of AFDC collections without regard to the provision added by the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984 that requires that the first $50 collected on behalf of an AFDC family in any month must be paid to the family without reducing the amount of the AFDC payment to the family.

States may exclude the laboratory costs of determining paternity from combined administrative costs for purposes of computing incentive payments States are required to pass through to local jurisdictions that participate in the cost of the program an appropriate share of the incentive payments, as determined by the State, taking into account program effectiveness and efficiency. Amounts collected in interstate cases will be credited, for purposes of computing the incentive payments, to both the initiating and responding States.

As part of the new funding formula, "hold harmless'" protection is provided for fiscal years 1986 and 1987 which assures the States that for those years they will receive the higher of the amount due them under the new incentive and Federal match provisions, or 80 percent of what they would have received under prior law.

The provision is effective beginning with fiscal year 1986.

Matching for automated management systems used in income withholding and other procedures.—The agreement specifies that the 90 percent Federal matching rate that is currently available to States that elect to establish an automatic data processing and information retrieval system may be used, at the option of the State, for the development and improvement of the income withholding and other procedures required in the act through the monitoring of child support payments, the maintenance of accurate records regarding the payment of child support, and the provision of prompt notice to appropriate officials with respect to any arrearages that occur.

The agreement also specifies that the 90 percent matching is available to pay for the acquisition of computer hardware.

Fees for services to non-AFDC families.—States will be required to charge an application fee for non-AFDC cases not to exceed $25. The amount of the maximum allowable fee may be adjusted periodically by the Secretary to reflect changes in administrative costs. The State may charge the fee against the custodial parent, or pay the fee out of State funds, or it may recover the fee from the noncustodial parent.

In addition, at the option of the State, a late payment fee equal to between 3 and 6 percent of the amount of overdue support may be charged to the noncustodial parents of AFDC and non-AFDC families. The State may not take any action which would have the effect of reducing the amount of support paid to the child and will collect the fee only after the full amount of the support has been paid to the child. The late payment fee provision is effective upon enactment.

Continuation of support enforcement for AFDC recipients whose benefits are being terminated.—States must provide that families whose eligibility for AFDC is terminated due to the receipt of (or an increase in) child support payments will be automatically transferred from AFDC to non-AFDC status under the IV-D program, without requiring application for IV-D services or payment of a fee. The provision is effective Oct. 1, 1984.

Special project grants to promote improvement in interstate enforcement.—The Secretary is authorized to make demonstration grants to States which propose to undertake new or innovative methods of support collection in interstate cases. The fiscal year authorization is $7 million in 1985, $12 million in 1986, and $15 million 1997 and years thereafter.

Periodic review of State programs; modification of penalty.—The Director of the Federal Office of Child Support Enforcement is required to conduct audits at least every 3 years to determine whether the standards and requirements prescribed by law and regulations have been met. Under the penalty provision, a State's AFDC matching funds must be reduced by an amount equal to at least 1 but no more than 2 percent for the first failure to comply substantially with the standards and requirements; at least 2 but no more than 3 percent for the second failure; and at least 3 but no more than 5 percent of the third and any subsequent consecutive failures.

Annual audits are required unless a State is in substantial compliance. If a State is not in substantial compliance, the penalty may be suspended only if the State is actively pursuing a corrective action plan, approved by the Secretary, which can be expected to bring the State into substantial compliance on a specific and reasonable timetable. If at the end of the corrective action period substantial compliance has been achieved, no penalty would be due. If substantial compliance has not been achieved, penalities would begin at the end of the corrective action period if the State has implemented the corrective action plan. A State which is not in full compliance may be determined to be in substantial compliance only if the Secretary determines that any noncompliance is of a technical nature which does not adversely affect the performance of the child support enforcement program.

The provision is effective beginning in fiscal year 1984.

Extension of sec. 1115 demonstration authority to the child support program.—The sec. 1115 demonstration authority is expanded to include the child support enforcement program under specified conditions. The provision is effective upon enactment.

Child support enforcement for certain children in foster care.—State child support agencies are required to undertake child support collections on behalf of children receiving foster care maintenance payments under title IV-E, if an assignment of rights to support to the State has been secured by the foster care agency. In addition, foster care agencies are required to take steps, where appropriate, to secure an assigment to the State or any rights to support on behalf of a child receiving foster care maintenance payments under the title IV-E foster care program. The provision is effective Oct. 1, 1984.

Collection of spousal support.—Child support enforcement services must include the enforcement of spousal support, but only if a support obligation has been established with respect to the spouse, the child and spouse are living in the same household, and child support is being collected along with spousal support. The provision is effective Oct. 1, 1985.

Modification in content of annual report by the Secretary.—The present annual report information requirements are expanded to include data needed to evaluate State programs. The provision is effective for reports issued for fiscal years 1986 and thereafter.

Requirement to publicize the availability of child support services.—States must frequently publicize, through public service announcements, the availability of child support enforcement services, together with information as to the application fee for such services and a telephone number or postal address to be used to obtain additional information.

State commissions on child support.—The Governor of each State is required to appoint a State commission on child support. The commission must include representation from all aspects of the child support system including custodial and noncustodial parents, the IV-D agency, the judiciary, the Governor, the legislature, child welfare and social services agencies, and others.

Each State commission is to examine the functioning of the State child support system with regard to securing support and parental involvement for both AFDC and non-AFDC children, including but not limited to such specific problems as: (1) visitation; (2) establishment of appropriate objective standards for support; (3) enforcement of interstate obligations; and (4) additional Federal and State legislation needed to obtain support for all children.

The commissions shall submit to the Governor and make available to the public, reports on their findings and recommendations no later than Oct. 1, 1985. Costs of operating the commissions will not be eligible for Federal matching.

The Secretary may waive the requirement for a commission at the request of a State if it is determined that the State has in place objective standards for child support obligations, has had a commission or council within the last 5 years, or is making satisfactory progress toward fully effective child support enforcement.

Requirement to include medical support as part of any child support order.—The Secretary is required to issue regulations to require State agencies to petition to include medical support as part of any child support order whenever health care coverage is available to the absent parent at a reasonable cost. The regulations must also provide for improved information exchange between the State IV-D agencies and the medicaid agencies with respect to the availablity of health insurance coverage.

Increased availability of Federal parent locator services to State agencies.—The present law requirement that the States exhaust all State child support locator resources before they request the assistance of the Federal Parent Locator Service is repealed. The provision is effective upon enactment.

Extension of medicaid eligibility when support collection results in termination of AFDC eligibility.—If a family loses AFDC eligibility as the result (wholly or partly) of increased collection of support payments under the IV-D program, the State must continue to provide medicaid benefits for 4 calendar months beginning with the month of ineligibility. (The family must have received AFDC in a least 3 of the 6 months immediately preceding the month of ineligibility.) The provision is effective upon enactment. It is applicable to families becoming ineligible for AFDC before Oct. 1, 1988.

Guidelines for determining support obligations.—Each State must develop quidelines to be considered in determining support obligations. The provision is effective Oct. 1, 1987.

Availability of social security numbers for purposes of child support enforcement.—The absent parent's social security number may be disclosed to child support agencies both through the Federal Parent Locator Service and by the IRS. The provision is effective upon enactment.

Collection of overdue support from Federal tax refunds.—Current law requires the Secretary of the Treasury, upon receiving notice from a State child support agency that an individual owes past due support which has been assigned to the State as a condition of AFDC eligibility, to withhold from any tax refunds due that individual an amount equal to any past due support. The act extends this requirement to provide for withholding of refunds on behalf of non-AFDC families, under specified conditions. The provision is effective for refunds payable after the year ending Dec. 31, 1985, and prior to Jan. 1, 1991.

Wisconsin child support initiative.—The Secretary is required to grant waivers to the State of Wisconsin to allow it to implement its proposed child support initiative in all or part of the State as a replacement for the AFDC and child support programs. The State must meet specified conditions and give specific guarantees with respect to the financial well- being of the children involved.

Sense of the Congress that State and local governments should focus on the problems of child custody, child support, and related domestic issues.—The act incorporates the language of S. Con. Res. 84, urging State and local governments to focus on the vital issues of child support, child custody, visitation rights, and other related domestic issues that are within the jurisdictions of such governments.

H.R. 4784 (Mr. Gibbons with cosponsors); passed House July 26, 1984. (See Public Law 98-573 (H.R. 3398).)

H.R. 4784, the Trade Remedies Reform Act of 1984, as amended, was reported to the House by the Committee on Ways and Means on May 1, 1984, and passed the House with a committee amendment on July 26, 1984. The bill, as passed the House, consists of two titles: Title I amends the scope and certain administrative elements of the countervailing duty and antidumping duty laws under title VII of the Tariff Act of 1930 as amended by the Trade Agreements Act of 1979; title II makes related procedural improvements through the addition of two new sections to the Tariff Act of 1930. A summary follows:

TITLE I.—AMENDMENTS TO COUNTERVAILING DUTY AND ANTIDUMPING DUTY LAWS

SEC. 101.—CLARIFICATION OF GENERAL RULE

Sec. 101 clarifies that the countervailing duty and antidumping laws cover likely sales and certain leasing arrangements, as well as sales and imports that have already occurred.

SEC. 102.—TERMINATION OR SUSPENSION OF INVESTIGATION

Sec. 102 amends the authorities to suspend countervailing duty investigations or to terminate antidumping or countervailing duty investigations based upon settlement agreements:

A. Offsets and grace periods

The use of export taxes or other types of "offsets" is eliminated as a basis for suspending countervailing duty cases. The 6-month grace period for eliminating a subsidy or dumping practice under a suspension agreement is eliminated.

B. Quantitative restriction agreements

The administering authority must take into account consumer impact and various other public interest factors in deciding whether to suspend or terminate a countervailing duty or antidumping investigation based on quantitative restriction agreements.

SEC. 103.—REVIEWS AND DETERMINATIONS REGARDING CERTAIN AGREEMENTS

Sec. 103 requires the President to enter into negotiations within 90 days after the administering authority accepts quantitative restriction agreement with the foreign government to seek elimination of the subsidy or dumping or its reduction to a level that removes the injurious effects. Countervailing or antidumping duties must be imposed to offset any remaining injurious subsidy or dumping margin upon the expiration date, if any, of the agreement.

Annual reviews of outstanding antidumping and countervailing duty orders are required only if requested by an interested party, rather than in all cases as under present law.

SEC. 104.—INITIATION OF ANTIDUMPING DUTY INVESTIGATIONS

Sec. 104 deals with the problem of persistent dumping involving several different producers in several different countries. Sec. 104 strengthens guidelines for self-initiation of antidumping investigations and requires further monitoring by the administering authority of imports from other countries once a domestic industry has proven injurious dumping from one source and then has reason to believe that additional dumping is occurring.

SEC. 105.—DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULES REGARDING UPSTREAM AND OTHER SUBSIDIES, DOWNSTREAM DUMPING, MATERIAL INJURY, AND INTERESTED PARTIES

Sec. 105 broadens the coverage of subsidy and dumping practices subject to the countervailing duty and antidumping laws, clarifies application of the injury test, and expands the scope of parties with standing in investigations:

A. Subsidies

The list of practices specifically defined in the statute as subsidies actionable under the countervailing duty law is expanded to include natural resource subsidies and upstream subsidies. The material injury test as applied under present law must be met for countervailing duties to be imposed. A committee amendment defined provisions in the bill as reported relating to "export targeting subsidies".

1. Natural resource subsidies.—"Natural resource subsidies" involve a government controlled or regulated natural resource price that is lower for domestic use than the export price or the fair market value, is not freely available to U.S. purchasers for export, and constitutes a significant component cost of the product under investigation.

The bill applies fair market value rather than export price as the basis for measuring the level of subsidy when there are no "significant" exports of the product or when the export price is distorted.

2. Upstream subsidies.—"Upstream subsidies" are subsidies at prior stages of production than the final imported article made in the same country which result in a price for the input that is lower than the generally available price and which have a significant effect on the cost of manufacturing the final product.

The bill clarifies that customs unions would be treated as one country and that the calculation of the amount of upstream subsidy would include only the actual benefit to the manufacturer of the final product.

B. Downstream dumping

"Downstream dumping" is defined as sales of materials below their fair market value which are incorporated into the final imported product that is subsidized or dumped if the dumped price of the input is below the generally available price of that input and has a significant effect on the cost of manufacturing the final product.

The bill amends the method of calculating downstream dumping to include only the amount of actual benefit to the manufacturer of the final product.

C. Clarification of injury test provisions

1. Cumulation.—The principle of cumulation of imports of like products from 2 or more countries under simultaneous investigation is mandated for purposes of assessing injury if such imports compete with each other and with like products of the domestic industry in the U.S. market.

2. Threat of injury.—Statutory guidelines are established for determining threat of material injury, based upon previous legislative history.

D. Interested party

The definition of an interested party with standing to file antidumping or countervailing duty petitions is expanded to include coalitions of firms, unions, or trade associations that have individual standing.

SEC. 106.—HEARINGS

Sec. 106 eliminates the requirement in present law that the International Trade Commission hold duplicate hearings during its injury investigations when antidumping and countervailing duty cases involve the same merchandise from the same country. Opportunity is provided for submission of written comments.

SEC. 107.—EXTENDS PRESENT REQUIREMENTS FOR VERIFICATION

Sec. 107 extends present requirements for verification of information to decisions by the administering authority to revoke outstanding antidumping or countervailing duty orders.

The bill requires verification in annual reviews of outstanding antidumping or countervailing duty orders if timely requested, except the requirement applies only upon good cause shown if verification has taken place in the preceding two annual reviews.

SEC. 108.—RELEASE OF CONFIDENTIAL INFORMATION

Sec. 108 establishes a new standardized method for releasing confidential information, based upon the filing of "standing requests" by all parties at the outset of an investigation and routine decisions on release as confidential information is submitted. Corporate in-house counsel could receive confidential information under protective order as retained counsel can under present law.

SEC. 109.—SAMPLING AND AVERAGING IN DETERMINING UNITED STATES PRICE AND FOREIGN MARKET VALUE

Sec. 109 authorizes sampling and averaging techniques utilized by the administering authority in determining foreign market value under the present antidumping law also to be used in determining United States price in dumping investigations and in all aspects of the annual review of outstanding countervailing and antidumping duty orders. The authority to select appropriate samples and averages would reside exclusively with the administering authority.

SEC. 110.—ELIMINATION OF INTERLOCUTORY APPEALS

Sec. 110 eliminates all interlocutory judicial review by the U.S. Court of International Trade during the course of countervailing duty and antidumping investigations. All challenges to agency determinations would be combined and reviewable by the court after final agency action has been taken.

TITLE II.—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

SEC. 201.—ESTABLISHMENT OF TRADE REMEDY ASSISTANCE AND TARGETING SUBSIDY MONITORING PROGRAM IN THE U.S. INTERNATIONAL TRADE COMMISSION

Sec. 201 adds 2 new sections to the Tariff Act of 1930 establishing new functions for the International Trade Commission.

A. Trade remedy assistance office

A central office is created in the ITC to assist U.S. industries with information and advice on the various trade remedy laws. Also, each agency responsible for administering trade laws is required to provide special assistance to qualifying small businesses.

B. Targeting subsidy monitoring program

The International Trade Commission must establish a program for continuous and coordinated monitoring and analysis of the industrial plans and policies of foreign governments. Regular reports would be issued on the information obtained.

SEC. 202.—ADJUSTMENTS STUDY

Sec. 202 requires the Secretary of Commerce to conduct a study of its current practices in making adjustments to various prices used under the antidumping law and submit a report to the Congress within 1 year containing recommendations as appropriate for simplifying and modifying these practices.

SEC. 203.—INDUSTRIAL TARGETING STUDIES

The committee amendment added a sec. 203 requiring the Secretaries of Commerce and Labor, the USTR, and the Comptroller General to undertake, and submit to the Congress by June 1, 1985, a comprehensive study of the problem of foreign industrial targeting and of the desirability or need to amend U.S. trade laws to provide effective remedies for domestic industries against adverse effects of targeting.

SEC. 204.—EFFECTIVE DATES

The provisions of H.R. 4784, as amended, would take effect on date of enactment except as otherwise specified.

Public Law 98-573 (H.R. 3398), signed into law on Oct. 30, 1984, includes H.R. 4784 as it passed the House of Representatives.

H.R. 4901 (Mr. Hughes with cosponsors); passed House Sept. 11, 1984. (See Public Law 98-573 (H.R. 3398).)

H.R. 4901, the Comprehensive Drug Penalty Act of 1984, was referred to the Committees on Ways and Means, Judiciary, and Energy and Commerce. The bill consists of 2 titles. Title I, which is under the jurisdiction of the Judiciary Committee, amends the Controlled Substances Act, the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act, and the Tariff Act of 1930, to improve forfeiture provisions and strengthen penalties for controlled substances offenses. The Judiciary Committee reported the bill on June 19, 1984.

On Aug. 9, 1984, the Committee on Ways and Means reported the bill, with amendments. Title II, which is under the Committee on Ways and Means jurisdiction, is summarized below as reported by the committee.

1. Increases availability of administrative (rather than judicial) forfeiture by increasing the value limit from $10,000 to $100,000 and removing the value limit on conveyances used to transport controlled substances.

2. Raises the bond amount required to obtain judicial forfeiture from $250 to $2,500 or 10 percent of the value of the property, whichever is lower.

3. Establishes a Customs Forfeiture Fund into which net proceeds from forfeitures would be deposited to be available to Customs, subject to appropriation, to pay designated expenses associated with seizure and forfeiture. At the end of each fiscal year, proceeds in excess of $10 million would be deposited in the general fund of the Treasury and would terminate on Sept. 30, 1987.

4. Increases from $50,000 to $250,000 the compensation level which can be paid to informers.

5. Expands the authority to allow arrests without warrants for offenses against the United States committed in the presence of Customs officers for felonies which they have reason to believe are being or have been committed outside their presence.

The Committee on Energy and Commerce waived its jurisdiction.

H.R. 4901 passed the House on Sept. 11, 1984, and title II was included in H.R. 3398, as it became Public Law 98-573, on Oct. 30, 1984.

H.R. 5188 (Mr. Gibbons and Mr. Frenzel); reported to Senate May 22, 1984. (See Public Law 98-573 (H.R. 3398).)

H.R. 5188, as amended and reported by the Committee on Ways and Means on Apr. 5, 1984, combines 3 separate agency authorizations under the jurisdiction of the committee, and makes certain changes in customs procedures.

Sec. 1 of the bill authorizes appropriations of $28,410,000 for the U.S. International Trade Commission (ITC) for fiscal year 1985, the amount requested by the ITC, and authorizes use of funds for rental of conference space in the District of Columbia, and minimal representation expenses.

Sec. 2 of the bill, as amended, authorizes $686,399,000 in appropriations for the U.S. Customs Service for fiscal year 1985. The committee adopted an amendment to increase the authorization level to fund new customs positions and to provide additional funds for the air interdiction program. The amendment increases by $44 million the authorization level in H.R. 5188 as introduced and increases by $84 million the amount requested for Customs in the administration's budget. The amended authorization figure includes $28,070,000 for the operation and maintenance of the Customs air interdiction program. Sec. 2, as amended, also limits to $11 million the amount of authorized funds which Customs may expend for the implementation of Operation Exodus and related export control programs. The bill places a $25,000 annual "cap" on the amount that customs inspectors can earn in overtime pay.

The committee adopted an amendment to preclude any proposed final rule revising or eliminating sureties on customs bonds from taking effect until 90 calendar days after Customs' submission of a report to Congress. The committee also adopted an amendment to provide for public disclosure of certain import manifest information.

Sec. 3 of the bill authorizes $14,179,000 for the U.S. Trade Representative for fiscal year 1985, the amount requested by the agency.

H.R. 5188 passed the House on May 1, 1984.

H.R. 5188 was reported from the Senate Finance Committee on May 22, 1984, with several amendments relating to the authorization of appropriations for the U.S. Customs Service. The total amount authorized was reduced from $686,399,000. Further, no specific amount was designated for operation and maintenance of the air interdiction program and the $11 million cap on expenditures for Operation Exodus has been removed. The House provision relating to the elimination of sureties on Customs bonds has also been deleted and new provisions have been added establishing user fees for customs services at certain small airports and requiring congressional notice of certain Customs' actions relating to consolidation or reduction in force.

Public Law 98-573 (H.R. 3398), signed into law on Oct. 30, 1984, includes H.R. 5188 as it passed the House of Representatives.

H.R. 5355 (Mr. Rostenkowski); reported to House Apr. 9, 1984. (See H.R. 5394.)

H.R. 5355, a bill to accelerate collection and deposit of payments to executive agencies, was reported on Apr. 9, 1984, by the Committee on Ways and Means. The bill provides for accelerated collection and deposit of non-tax payments to Federal agencies and the Department of the Treasury. This procedure will eliminate unnecessary delays caused by the current "paper" process of clearing check payments through Government agencies prior to the crediting of the funds to the Treasury. The bill was included in H.R. 5394 (The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1984), which passed the House on Apr. 12, 1984. For further action, see summary of H.R. 5394.

H.R. 5356 (Mr. Pickle); reported to House Apr. 9, 1984. (See H.R. 5394.)

H.R. 5356, a bill to improve administration of the social security earnings test, was reported on Apr. 9, 1984, by the Committee on Ways and Means. The bill provides for administrative reforms in the management of the social security earnings test that would assure a reduction of earnings-related overpayments. The bill was included in H.R. 5394 (The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1984), which passed the House on Apr. 12, 1984. For further action, see summary of H.R. 5394.

H.R. 5361 (Mr. Stark); Public Law 98-612; app. Oct. 31, 1984.

H.R. 5361 was reported to the House by the Committee on Ways and Means on Sept. 24, 1984, with amendments, and passed the House on Oct. 1, 1984. As passed by the House, H.R. 5361 extends the exclusion from gross income for income and employment tax purposes of qualified group legal services plans and the tax exemption for group legal services organizations for 1 year through Dec. 31, 1985. In addition, the bill requires an employer with a group legal services plan to provide an annual information return on the plan to the IRS.

H.R. 5361 was not referred to a committee in the Senate. The bill passed the Senate amended on Oct. 11, 1984. The Senate amendment (1) revised the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984's treatment of certain deferred payments by imputing a specified interest charge, (2) increased the limit on the public debt and provided for consideration of a deficit reduction bill prior to consideration of another increase in the debt limit, and (3) increased to $50,000 the amount of attorney's fees which may be awarded in tax cases.

On Oct. 11, 1984, the House agreed to the Senate amendment with an amendment. The House amendment provided, in addition to the original House-passed language of H.R. 5361, a delay for 3 months (until Apr. 1, 1984) in the Deficit Reduction Act's imputed interest provisions for transactions with deferred payments not exceeding $2 million. For these transactions, the rate would remain 9 percent and assumptions of existing debt would be exempt from the imputed interest rules during the 3 months.

On Oct. 11, 1984, the Senate concurred in the House's amendment with an amendment in the nature of a substitute. The Senate amendment provided a 6-month delay until July 1, 1985, in the imputed interest provisions. During the 6 months, loans with a principal amount not exceeding $2 million will be subject to a 9-percent test rate. A blended rate would apply to loans above $2 million for property other than new property eligible for an investment tax credit. Interest on farm property under $2 million in loan amount would be accounted for on the cash method.

The House agreed to the Senate amendment on Oct. 11, 1984. The House also approved on Oct. 11, H.Con.Res. 378 to correct technical errors in the last Senate amendment to H.R. 5361 which was accepted by the House. The Senate amended and passed H.Con.Res. 378 and the House failed to get unanimous consent to agree to the Senate amendment on Oct. 11, 1984.

H.R. 5361 was signed into law by the President on Oct. 31, 1984, as Public Law 98-612.

H.R. 5362 (Mr. Ford of Tennessee); reported to House Apr. 9, 1984. (See H.R. 5394.)

The bill was included in H.R. 5394 (The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1984), which passed the House on Apr. 12, 1984. For further action, see summary of H.R. 5394.

H.R. 5377 (Mr. Downey with cosponsors); passed House Oct. 3, 1984. (See Public Law 98-573 (H.R. 3398).)

H.R. 5377, United States-Israel Free Trade Area Act, as amended, was reported to the House by the Committee on Ways and Means on Sept. 27, 1984, and passed the House on Oct. 3, 1984 As passed by the House, H.R. 5377 provides authorities to the President concerning the establishment of a free trade area agreement between the United States and Israel as described below.

1. Basic authority.—Authorizes the President to enter into a "reciprocal and mutually advantageous" trade agreement with the Government of Israel providing for duty-free treatment and the harmonization, reduction, or elimination of nontariff barriers to (and other distortions of) trade between the United States and Israel.

The President may proclaim duty-free treatment without further congressional approval. Any provision on nontariff measures would enter into force only if the advance congressional consultation and notification requirements are met and implementing legislation approved under the expedited procedures of secs. 102 and 151-154 of the Trade Act of 1974.

2. Rules of origin.—Requires that Israeli articles under the trade agreement meet rules-of-origin equivalent to such requirements under the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act (CBI): direct importation; 35 percent minimum local content, of which a maximum of 15 percent may be U.S. content; substantial transformation; prohibition of mere "pass through" operations.

3. Import relief provisions.—Contains various provisions concerning the application of import relief actions to Israeli articles under a free trade area arrangement, including authorities for the President to suspend duty-free treatment and proclaim a duty rate on an Israeli article under the free trade area agreement as import relief or to safeguard the national security. The International Trade Commission (ITC) must state in its report to the President on any import relief investigation whether its findings apply to imports from Israel.

4. Emergency relief for imports of agricultural perishable products.—Establishes procedures equivalent to provisions under the CBI for obtaining interim emergency relief from duty-free imports of agricultural perishable products from Israel pending action under normal import relief procedures.

5. Application of other trade laws.—Ensures that existing laws for relief from import competition and unfair trade practices (e.g., countervailing duty, antidumping, and sec. 337 provisions of the Tariff Act of 1930; safeguarding national security under sec. 232 of the Trade Expansion Act of 1962; secs. 201-203 and sec. 301 of the Trade Act of 1974) would continue to apply to Israeli articles entering under a free trade area agreement. No trade benefit to Israel authorized under this legislation can be extended to any other country, notwithstanding any other provision of law.

Public Law 98-537 (H.R. 3398), signed into law on Oct. 30, 1984, includes H.R. 5377 as it was amended in the conference on H.R. 3398.

H.R. 5386, Payment Rates for Hospice Home Care Under Medicare, was reported to the House by the Committee on Ways and Means on Sept. 28, 1984. As reported, the bill would increase the hospice reimbursement rate for routine home care days under medicare for services furnished during the 12-month period beginning Oct. 1, 1984, and would require the Secretary of HHS to review hospice reimbursement rates beginning Oct. 1, 1985, and no less than annually thereafter, and as appropriate, adjust such rates to reflect costs that are reasonable and related to the costs of furnishing such care and services. H.R. 5386 passed the House on Oct. 1, 1984.

H.R. 5386, as amended and passed by the Senate on Oct. 11, 1984, would: (1) make technical changes in the drafting of the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984 (Public Law 98-369); (2) add secs. 101 and 102 of H.R. 6266, the Foster Care Amendments, as it was reported to the House (see summary of H.R. 6266); and (3) apply the public pension offset provisions enacted in Public Law 98-21 to spouses entitled to a public pension prior to June 30, 1983 (effective for months after the month of enactment).

On Oct. 11, 1984, the House agreed to the Senate amendments. H.R. 5386 was signed into law by the President on Nov. 8, 1984, as Public Law 98-617.

H.R. 5394 (Mr. Jones of Oklahoma with cosponsors); passed House Apr. 12, 1984. (See Public Law 98-369 (H.R. 4170).)

H.R. 5394 was included in Public Law 98-369 (H.R. 4170). A summary of H.R. 5394 as passed the House follows:

Under the bill, a podiatrist (acting within the scope of his practice) will be considered a physician for purposes of coverage of outpatient physical therapy, which requires that the patient be "under the care of a physician." A podiatrist or a dentist (acting within the scope of his practice) will be considered a physician for purposes of coverage of outpatient ambulatory surgery in a surgeon's office. This provision is effective upon date of enactment.

Establishment by physical therapist of plans for physical therapy

ACCELERATED COLLECTION AND DEPOSIT OF PAYMENTS TO EXECUTIVE AGENCIES (H.R. 5355)

H.R. 5355 was reported on Apr. 9, 1984, by the Committee on Ways and Means. The bill provides for accelerated collection and deposit of non-tax payments to Federal agencies and the Department of the Treasury. This procedure will eliminate unnecessary delays caused by the current "paper" process of clearing check payments through Government agencies prior to the crediting of the funds to the Treasury.

Under the bill, the Secretary of the Treasury would be given the necessary authority to require each Federal agency to collect non-tax receipts in the specific fashion Treasury desires.

The Secretary is also authorized to prescribe the time frames within which funds collected by or for Federal agencies must be deposited for credit in the Treasury's account. In addition, the bill generally reduces from 30 days to 3 days the statutory period for timely deposit of funds by custodian agencies. Finally, the bill gives the Secretary the necessary enforcement authority. It is anticipated that the Bureau of Government Financial Operations will exercise the authority in this legislation as the Secretary's delegee.

IMPROVEMENTS IN ADMINISTRATION OF SOCIAL SECURITY EARNINGS TEST (H.R. 5356)

H.R. 5356 as reported on Apr. 9, 1984, by the Committee on Ways and Means, amends title II of the Social Security Act to provide for administrative reforms in the management of the social security earnings test that would assure a reduction of earnings-related overpayments.

Such procedures may include identifying categories of beneficiaries who are likely to be paid more than the correct amount of benefitS and requesting that such beneficiaries estimate their earnings or wages several months earlier than under present law in order to allow earlier adjustments of benefit amounts on account of excess earnings. These provisions are effective upon enactment.

IMPROVEMENTS IN SSI, AFDC, AND RELATED PROGRAMS (H.R. 5362)

H.R. 5362, as reported on Apr. 9, 1984, by the Committee on Ways and Means, amends the Internal Revenue Code and the Social Security Act to: improve the method of verifying the amount of assets owned by applicants and recipients of the SSI program and AFDC program; promote compatibility among human service programs by conforming program definitions, budgeting procedures and eligibility requirements; encourage cost effective management in the AFDC program; and make technical improvements in the AFDC program that promote administrative efficiency.

A summary of the principal provisions of H.R. 5362 follow:

1. Facilitate identification of financial assets of SSI and AFDC applicants and recipients.—IRS would be permitted to share tax information pertaining to unearned income of SSI and AFDC recipients. Independent verification would be required.
2. Update the SSI countable resource limit.—The limit would rise by $100 per year over the next 5 years from $1,500 for an individual to $2,000 and by $150 per year over that period from $2,250 for a couple to $3,000.
3. Establish more flexible guidelines for recovery of overpayments and treatment of retroactive benefits.—Rate of recovery of overpayments would be limited to the lesser of the SSI payment or 10 percent of income in a month; there would be limits on the amount of the overpayment that could be collected in AFDC and SSI when assets limits are exceeded by less than the amount of the SSI benefit in a month; and the value of retroactive SSI or OASDI checks would be excluded from the resource limit for 12 months.
4. Apply the food stamp program's gross income limit of 130 percent of poverty in the AFDC program.—This would replace the current limit of 150 percent of the State standard of need.
5. Exclude burial plots, funeral agreements and certain property from countable AFDC resources.
6. Permit "one stop" human service delivery demonstrations.
7. Optional AFDC monthly reporting and retrospective budgeting.
8. Temporarily postpone payment of AFDC fiscal sanctions.—The provision would delay, until fiscal year 1986, State payment of any fiscal penalties resulting from quality control reviews.
9. Assure working AFDC families of continued health coverage.—States would be required to: disregard the first $75 of gross earnings for full- and part-time workers (this would also clarify that the deduction is taken on gross income); remove the 4-month limit on the $30 deduction (retain the current law limit on the one-third incentive); and create a work transition status—a $10 AFDC check for 9 months (with State option for 6 more months)—for AFDC recipients who lose AFDC due to the end of the earnings disregard.
10. Disregard the earned income tax credit (EITC) in detemrining AFDC eligibility and benefit level.
11. Reimburse all necessary community work experience program (workfare) expenses.
12. Grant diversion program.—At State option, a State may create a grant diversion program which would encourage States to develop cost-effective employment programs.
13. Permanent extension of the disregard of emergency and certain other in-kind assistance in AFDC and SSI.

TRADE ADJUSTMENT ASSISTANCE

The bill contains three amendments to the trade adjustment assistance programs for workers and firms under the Trade Act of 1974 as amended. The amendments would apply from date of enactment of the bill.

Limitations on trade readjustment allowances

Under present law a worker may receive up to 26 weeks of additional trade readjustment allowances (TRA) in order to complete training. However, a worker can collect the extra 26 weeks of benefits only during the 26-week period immediately following exhaustion of his entitlement to basic TRA (i.e., the 52-week period after exhausting regular unemployment compensation). As a result, workers are often denied benefits due to delays in certification or training approval.

The bill amends sec. 233(a)(3) of the Trade Act to enable workers to collect the additional weeks of TRA beginning with the first week the worker enters training if that training has not been approved until after the last week of entitlement to basic TRA benefits.

Job search and relocation allowances

The bill amends sec. 237 of the Trade Act to increase the maximum job search allowance for workers from $600 to $800 and amends sec. 238 of that Act to increase the maximum lump sum allowance for worker relocation from $600 to $800.

Assistance to industry

The bill amends sec. 265 of the Trade Act by extending eligibility for industry-wide technical assistance under the firm program to industries in which a substantial number of workers have been certified eligible for trade adjustment assistance. Currently, an industry can qualify for such assistance only if a substantial number of firms in that industry have been certified.

The bill also increases the maximum annual amount of technical assistance available per industry from $2 million to $10 million in order to provide technical "seed" money for basic industries.

H.R. 5640 (Mr. Florio with cosponsors); passed House Aug. 10, 1984.

H.R. 5640, the Superfund Expansion and Protection Act of 1984, was introduced in the House on May 10, 1984. The bill was referred jointly to the Committee on Energy and Commerce and the Committee on Public Works and Transportation for a period ending not later than July 24, 1984. The bill also was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means (with no time limit imposed). The Committee on Energy and Commerce reported H.R. 5640 to the House on July 16, 1984. The referral to the Committee on Public Works and Transportation was extended on July 24, 1984, through July 27, 1984. The period was extended again on July 27, 1984, through July 31, 1984. The Public Works and Transportation Committee was discharged from consideration of H.R. 5640 on July 31, 1984.

The Committee on Ways and Means reported H.R. 5640 on Aug. 8, 1984, with an amendment in the nature of a substitute for title V of the bill (the revenue title). On Aug. 10, 1984, the House of Representatives passed H.R. 5640 with a number of amendments to the nontax titles.

A summary of the Committee on Ways and Means amendment to H.R. 5640, as passed by the House of Representatives, follows:

Under present law, excise taxes are imposed on crude oil and certain chemicals, and revenues equivalent to these taxes are deposited in the Hazardous Substance Response Trust Fund ("Superfund"). These amounts are available for expenditures incurred in connection with releases or threats of releases of hazardous substances into the environment, including cleanup costs and the payment of damages for injury to or destruction of certain natural resources controlled by the Federal or State governments. These provisions were enacted in the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (CERCLA), which established a comprehensive system of notification, emergency response, enforcement, and liability for hazardous spills and uncontrolled hazardous waste sites.

The crude oil tax of 0.79 cent per barrel is imposed on the receipt of crude oil at a U.S. refinery, the import of crude oil and petroleum products, and the use or export of domestically produced crude oil (if the tax has not already been paid).

The tax on chemicals is imposed on the sale or use of 42 specified organic and inorganic substances if they are produced in or imported into the United States. The taxable chemicals generally are chemicals that are hazardous or chemicals which may create hazardous products or wastes when used. The rates vary from 22 cents per ton to $4.87 per ton.

The taxes generally will terminate after September 30, 1985.

Effective after Sept. 30, 1983, an excise tax of $2.13 per dry weight ton is imposed on hazardous waste which is received at a qualified hazardous waste disposal facility and which will remain at the facility after its closure. These tax receipts are intended to be deposited into the Post-closure Liability Trust Fund. This Trust Fund is to assume completely the liability, under any law, of owners and operators of closed hazardous waste disposal facilities which meet certain conditions. These provisions were enacted in CERCLA.

The tax on hazardous wastes generally will terminate on Sept. 30, 1985.

The committee amendment redesignates the "Hazardous Substance Response Trust Fund" as the "Hazardous Substance Superfund" and continues and expands the fund to enable it to carry out the expanded program provided by H.R. 5640 as reported by the Committee on Energy and Commerce (including costs of responding to releases of petroleum and petroleum products; the financing of certain emergency relief and health effect studies, certain toxicological profiles, and certain hazard evaluation projects; and a specific schedule for cleanup of hazardous waste sites).

To finance this program, the present law petroleum tax is increased from 0.79 cent per barrel to 7.86 cents per barrel. Similarly, the excise tax on feedstock chemicals is increased and applied to 15 additional feedstock chemicals. These tax rates are subject to a 4-year phase-in and an inflation adjustment. The present law exemption for coal-derived substances is repealed; other present law exemptions are retained. The committee amendment further allows a refund or credit for taxes on exported feedstock substances. The amendments in the petroleum and feedstock chemical taxes are generally effective from Jan. 1, 1985, through Sept. 30, 1990, after which time the taxes are scheduled to expire.

Under the committee amendment, the petroleum and feestock chemical tax rates will be increased on Jan. 1, 1987, if a hazardous waste disposal tax ("waste end tax") has not been enacted by July 1, 1986. The Treasury (in consultation with the EPA and the International Trade Commission) is required to develop a legislative proposal for such a tax by Apr. 1, 1985. The Treasury is further required to study (in consultation with the International Trade Commission) the feasibility of imposing a tax on imported substances derived from taxable feedstock chemicals.

The committee amendment generally continues the expenditure purposes of the present law Superfund, but provides that no further funds may be used for the payment of natural resource damage claims. Appropriations of $2.3 billion to the Superfund from general revenues are authorized for fiscal years 1986 through 1990, for a total (including revenues from the petroleum and feedstock taxes) of approximately $10 billion over this period. Of the amount of general revenue appropriated, not more than $850 million is to be allocated to a special account within the Superfund for expenditures related to releases of petroleum or petroleum products, including releases from leaking underground storage tanks. No revenues from the petroleum or feedstock taxes may be placed in this account. Expenditures for such purposes may be made only from this account.

The Post-closure Liability Trust Fund, and the related tax on hazardous wastes are repealed by the committee amendment, effective after Sept. 30, 1983, and previously paid amounts are to be refunded.

H.R. 6023 (Mr. Frenzel with cosponsors); passed House Oct. 3, 1984. (See Public Law 98-573 (H.R. 3398).)

H.R. 6023, Generalized System of Preferences Renewal Act of 1984, as amended, was reported to the House by the Committee on Ways and Means on Sept. 27, 1984, and passed the House on Oct. 3, 1984. As passed the House, H.R. 6023 amends title V of the Trade Act of 1974, to reauthorize for an additional 5 years the program for duty-free treatment of imports of eligible articles from beneficiary developing countries known as the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP) due to expire on Jan. 3, 1985. The bill also makes a number of substantive changes in the program as described below.

1. Consideration of a beneficiary developing country's competitiveness in extending preferences.—Amends sec. 501 of the Trade Act of 1974 to require the President to consider the effect on export expansion and the extent of a beneficiary developing country's (BDC) competitiveness in granting GSP benefits on any article.

2. Amendments relating to the beneficiary developing country designation criteria.—Amends sec. 502 of the Trade Act of 1974 to delete Hungary from the list of countries ineligible to receive GSP benefits and to preclude the President from designating any country a BDC which is not taking steps to afford "internationally recognized worker rights" to its people, unless he determines and reports to Congress that such a designation is in the national economic interest.

Further, in determining whether to designate a country a BDC, the President would be required to take into account 3 additional discretionary factors: the extent of that country's efforts (1) to protect intellectual property rights; (2) to reduce trade distorting investment practices and policies and barriers to trade in services; and (3) to afford "internationally recognized workers rights" to its workers. The President would be required to report to the Congress on his actions relating to the application of these and the other requirements of secs. 501 and 502.

3. Articles which may not be designated as eligible articles; regulations.—Adds footwear, handbags, luggage, flat goods, work gloves, and leather wearing apparel to the list of existing statutory product exclusions from GSP eligibility and requires the Secretary of the Treasury to consult with USTR in promulgating regulations on GSP rules of origin requirements.

4. Limitations on preferential treatment.—Makes extensive changes to sec. 504 of the Trade Act regarding limitations on preferential treatment. The President would be required to conduct a general review of all GSP-eligible products by Jan. 4, 1986, and periodically thereafter, and to report to the Congress by Jan. 4, 1987, on actions he has taken to withdraw, suspend or limit GSP duty-free treatment. Based on the general product review and the country and product eligibility factors that condition GSP benefits, reductions in the competitive need limits of sec. 504(c) and waivers of such reductions are authorized for various groups of countries as follows:

Countries with a per capita GNP over $9,000 would be subject to graduation over a 2-year phase-down period. After graduation, such countries would not be eligible for any GSP benefits. The President would have no authority to waive these provisions.

For countries with a per capita GNP of $5,000 or more or which account for 10 percent or more of GSP duty-free imports, the competitive need limits applicable to such country would mandatorily be cut in half on all of its GSP eligible products. However, the President would have authority to waive these cutbacks and restore the original competitive need limits on an article-by-article basis after receiving advice from the ITC. Waivers must be based on a determination that it is in the national economic interest, after considering the factors in secs. 501 and 502(c), including efforts by the country to protect intellectual property rights, reduce trade barriers and trade distorting practices, and recognize worker rights.

Finally, for all other countries, the President may reduce the competitive need limits on an article-by-article basis for any article for which such country has "demonstrated a sufficient degree of competitiveness" (relative to other beneficiary developing countries). The President may waive such limits on any article for which the President has received the ITC advice and made the national economic interest determination described above. However, the total dollar value of such waivers for all such countries in any year cannot exceed 25 percent of total GSP duty-free imports from all BDCs.

As amended by H.R. 6023, the percentage competitive need limit would not apply to articles not produced in the United States as of Jan. 3, 1985, or to imports of articles not exceeding $5 million. Changes in article designations would occur not later than July 1 of the following calendar year for which a determination has been made. Finally, articles which have lost GSP status could not be redesignated for 2 years.

5. 5-year extension of the generalized system of preference and reports.—Extends the program until Jan. 3, 1990, and requires the President to submit a report on the operation of the program to the Congress by that date, as well as annual reports on the status of worker's rights in each BDC.

6. Agricultural exports of beneficiary developing countries.—Adds a new provision to title V of the Trade Act requiring appropriate U.S. agencies to assist BDC's to assure adequate production of foodstuffs for their citizenry.

7. Effective date.—The effective date would be Jan. 4, 1985, the day after the expiration of the existing program.

One year extension of State option to use foster care assistance for child welfare services in certain cases.—Provides for a 1 year extension of the provision expiring on Sept. 30, 1984, that allows States to transfer funds allocated to them for foster care under title IV-E to use for child welfare services under title IV-B of the Social Security Act.

3. Child welfare resource centers.—Requires the Secretary of HHS to fund in fiscal year 1986, a network of Child Welfare Resource Centers to provide assistance to States and other organizations and agencies in implementing the provisions of the Adoption Assistance and Child Welfare Amendments of 1980.

SSI AMENDMENTS

1. Extension of certain real and personal property from income.—Provides for excluding from countable income certain unearned income received in the form of real or personal property which would not be counted as a resource in the following month.

2. Exclusion of interest and dividends from income.—Provides that interest and dividend income received by an SSI recipient on countable resources which are within the SSI resource limits would not be counted as income under the SSI program.

3. Exclusion of certain temporary income in retrospective budgeting.—Requires that temporary nonrecurring income received by applicants for SSI may not be counted more than once under the retrospective budgeting process. This provision must be implemented no later than Oct. 1, 1985.

4. Exclusion of reparations received by Holocaust survivors.—Excludes from income payments received under the reparations laws of the West German and East German Governments by Holocaust survivors.

5. Modification of penalties where assets are transferred at less than fair market value.—Current law provides a 2-year delay in eligibility for SSI benefits when resources are transferred at less than fair market value in order to qualify for benefits. This provision is modified to give the Secretary of HHS the authority to waive the denial of benefits to the extent determined necessary to avoid undue hardship.

6. Computation of vehicle value in assets test.—Provides that in determining whether an individual or couple meets the countable resources test, there shall be excluded one automobile.

7. Changes in one-third reduction formula.—Modifies the assumptions to be used in determining whether or not an SSI applicant is receiving in-kind assistance when living with others in such a way as to protect SSI applicants from an automatic one-third reduction in their initial Federal SSI benefit if at the time of application they are living with a relatively low income household.

8. Increases in benefit standard for institutionalized recipients.—Increases the current $25 a month SSI benefit standard for residents of Medicaid facilities to $35, effective Jan. 1, 1985. The bill directs the Department of HHS to take steps to assure that the full $35 SSI payment to persons in medical institutions will accrue to their personal benefit, and will not be subject to misuse by the operators of these institutions, or be used by States to lower Medicaid reimbursement rates to such institutions.

9. Eligibility for benefits due deceased recipients.—Provides for payment of retroactive benefits on behalf of a deceased recipient to the ineligible spouse and the parent of a disabled or blind child. Present law provides that only an eligible spouse may receive the retroactive payment that was due a deceased SSI recipient.

10. Modification of certain filing requirements.—Provides that certain SSI applicants or recipients (those disabled widow/ers who at age 60 qualify for reduced title II benefits) will not be required to file for title II benefits, if receipt of such benefits would disadvantage the individual, i.e., loss of eligibility for SSI and subsequently health services under Medicaid.

11. Eligibility of couples living apart.—Reduces from 6 months to 3 months the time that an SSI individual and an eligible spouse must be living apart before they will be treated as individuals for determining eligibility for the amount of SSI benefits.

12. Extension of interim assistance program.—Expands the interim assistance program to include payment of the appropriate amount of retroactive SSI funds to the State, when the State has provided financial assistance to SSI recipients who have appealed a termination or suspension of benefits, subsequently won the appeal, and have qualified for retroactive SSI benefits. The provision must be implemented no later than Oct. 1, 1985.

13. Study of alternative methods of promoting compliance with standards for group living facilities.—Present law requires that Federal SSI payments be reduced dollar-for-dollar for any payments made by a State to provide medical or remedial care on behalf of an SSI recipient who is in an institution that is not approved as meeting relevant State standards. The bill directs HHS and GAO to analyze alternatives to current law and report findings by July 1, 1985.

14. Presumptively eligible individuals.—Provides that emergency advance payments which can be paid directly by a Social Security district office to those in need of immediate subsistence income will be increased from a maximum of $100 to a maximum of 1 month's payment of SSI benefits.

15. Notice to recipient regarding overpayments.—Requires that when an individual has been overpaid, the Secretary must send the person a notice which contains, in simple language, the following information: the precise amount of the overpayment, the months in which the overpayment occurred; the reason the overpayment occurred; a statement of the manner in which, and the rate at which, the overpayment is proposed to be recovered; a complete statement of the individual's right to seek reconsideration of the finding that overpayment occurred; the right to seek waiver of repayment; and notice that if waiver or reconsideration is sought, payment of full benefits will continue until a decision is made.

16. Study of extension of program to Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa.—The Department of Health and Human Services is required to conduct a study of the feasibility and cost of the extension of SSI to residents of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa. In addition, the General Accounting Office is required to study the overall effect of extending the Federal and corporate income tax laws to these jurisdictions, and at the same time treating these jurisdictions as States for purposes of major benefit programs.

17. Extension of outreach efforts.—Requires HHS to establish and conduct an ongoing SSI outreach effort.

18. Requirement of increased clarity and readability for written materials to be used by SSI applicants or recipients.—Requires that HHS take action to increase the clarity and readability of written materials to be used by SSI applicants or recipients. The bill also requires SSA to contract with recognized experts to review current and future notices to determine if they are readily understandable by the SSI population, except to the extent it is determined not to be feasible. The objectives of simplicity and readability should not be permitted to override concerns for completeness, accuracy, or legal sufficiency.

19. Notice to blind SSI recipients.—Requires the Secretary of Health and Human Services to provide SSI recipients who are blind with the option of receiving special notice of official actions which may affect their SSI benefit rights. The SSI recipient will be provided the option to receive a supplementary notice of any action by SSA by telephone or to receive the initial notice by certified letter. The Secretary must attempt to provide all blind SSI recipients with the option to receive this supplementary notification within at least 1 year after the bill is enacted.

The Secretary is also required to conduct a study to determine the feasibility of providing supplementary notification rights to individuals who may have difficulty in reading printed notices. These individuals may include the mentally impaired and persons for whom English is a second language.

20. General effective date.—Except as otherwise specifically provided, SSI amendments in this bill are effective Jan. 1, 1985.

On Oct. 11, 1984, the Senate passed H.R. 5386, Payment Rates for Hospice Home Care Under Medicare, with amendments, which included child welfare and foster care amendments (items 1 and 2 above). On Oct. 11, 1984, the House agreed to the Senate amendments, and H.R. 5386 was signed into law by the President on Nov. 8, 1984, as Public Law 98-617.

H.R. 6299 (Mr. Rostenkowski with cosponsors); Public Law 98-604; app. Oct. 30, 1984.

H.R. 6299 provides for a one-time waiver of the 3 percent CPI trigger requirement for payment of the social security cost-of-living adjustment for December 1984, so that the social security COLA would be paid even if the CPI did not reach 3 percent. The bill also requires a study by the Social Security Administration of the effects of various changes in the COLA trigger provision and measuring period.

H.R. 6299 was reported to the House by the Committee on Ways and Means on Sept. 28, 1984, and passed the House on Oct. 2, 1984. The bill passed the Senate without amnendment on Oct. 11, 1984.

H.R. 6299 was signed into law by the President on Oct. 30, 1984, as Public Law 98-604.

H.R. 6301 (Mr. Rostenkowski with cosponsors); passed House Oct. 3, 1984. (See Public Law 98-573 (H.R. 3398).)

H.R. 6301, the Steel Import Stabilization Act, as amended, was reported to the House by the Committee on Ways and Means on Sept. 27, 1984. As passed by the House on Oct. 3, 1984, H.R. 6301 provides the President with authority to enforce bilateral arrangements restricting the exportation of carbon and alloy steel products to the United States for up to 5 years, and provides certain worker assistance to dislocated steelworkers. A summary as passed the House follows:

1. Findings and purposes.—H.R. 6301 sets forth six congressional findings with respect to the domestic steel industry's need for increased capital investments in order to modernize its plant and equipment; the adverse effects of an overvalued dollar and large deficits as well as serious injury due to imports of and unfair trade in steel products; the difficulties of combating unfair trade practices through the trade remedy laws; the need for expeditious and effective action by the executive branch in dealing with unfairly traded steel, including greater efforts to self-initiate and pursue remedies; the requirement that any import relief provided should be tied to a firm commitment by the steel industry to modernize during the period of relief; and that full and effective implementation of the national steel policy will substantially improve the economy and employment in both the steel and iron ore-producing sectors.

The purposes of the bill are to provide the President with authority to enforce the bilateral arrangements that are entered into or undertaken for purposes of implementing the national steel policy, and to make the continuation of that enforcement authority subject to the condition that the steel industry undertake a comprehensive modernization of its plant and equipment.

2. Sense of the Congress.—The bill provides three provisions expressing the sense of the Congress. (1) The President should use the authority to implement the national policy in such a manner as to restore the import share of the U.S. steel market to a level commensurate with that which would obtain under conditions of fair, unsubsidized competition, a level which the Congress believes should be approximately 17 percent. (2) The national policy should not be implemented in a manner contrary to the antitrust laws. (3) If the President's program does not produce satisfactory results within a reasonable period of time, the Congress will consider taking further legislative action.

3. Enforcement authority.—The President has the authority to carry out such actions as may be necessary or appropriate to enforce the quantitative limitations and restrictions (including export measures required by a foreign government or customs union) contained in each bilateral arrangement. In using this authority, the President shall, to the extent practicable, cover all categories of carbon and steel alloy products, avoid distortions among those categories, and include all exporting countries and customs unions from which surges in exports of those products to the United States are being, or have been, experienced.

4. Effective period; annual renewal.—The authority of the President shall be limited to a maximum of 5 years, subject to annual renewal. Such authority will renew annually only if the President determines that, during the previous year, the steel industry, taken as a whole, (a) has invested substantially all of its net cash flow from carbon and alloy steel product operations for purposes of reinvestment in, and modernization of, that industry through investment in modern plant and equipment, research and development, and other appropriate projects; and (b) has taken sufficient action to maintain its international competitiveness, including action to restrain and discipline pricing policies and to control costs of production. An affirmative determination by the President under this section can be made only if each major company with significant reinvestment or modernization needs has committed all of its net cash flow (except that required to be committed to retraining) from carbon and alloy steel product operations during the previous year to meet those needs, and only if each major company with significant unemployment has committed during the previous year at least 1 percent of net cash flow to the retraining of workers, including former workers who were laid off since Jan. 1, 1982.

In making this determination, the President shall take into account information available from the International Trade Commission and other appropriate sources relating to the modernization efforts of the industry.

Such annual determination, and the reasons therefor, must be submitted by the President to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House and the Committee on Finance of the Senate before the date of renewal of authority.

5. Worker assistance plan.—The Secretary of Labor is required to prepare, in consultation with the Steel Advisory Committee, and submit to the Congress within 6 months a proposed plan of action for assisting workers in communities that are adversely affected by steel imports, including retraining and relocation assistance for former steelworkers who are unlikely to return to employment in the steel industry. Such plan shall be based on existing authority, but shall be accompanied by such recommendations for additional statutory authority as the Secretary considers necessary to carry out the purposes of the plan.

6. Trade adjustment assistance.—The authorization for the worker and firm adjustment assistance programs under title II of the Trade Act of 1974 is extended for 2 additional years, through Sept. 30, 1987.

7. Effective date.—This act shall take effect on Oct. 1, 1984.

Public Law 98-573 (H.R. 3398), signed into law on Oct. 30, 1984, includes provisions of H.R. 6301 as it passed the House of Representatives.

H.J. Res. 290 (Mr. Rostenkowski); Public Law 98-218; app. Feb. 17, 1984.

H.J. Res. 290 permits duty-free entry into the United States of the personal effects, equipment to be used in connection with the XXIII Olympiad, and other appropriate articles which may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury. This duty-free entry privilege would be extended to foreign participants, officials, and other accredited members of delegations involved in the XXIII Olympiad games and members of the immediate families and servants of such participants, officials and accredited members.

H.J. Res. 290 was reported to the House on June 24, 1983, and passed as reported on June 28, 1983.

The Senate Finance Committee reported H.J. Res. 290 on Nov. 10, 1983, with no written report. A Senate floor amendment approved Nov. 18, 1983, replaced the text of the House bill with amendments relating to the information returns required to be filed by State and local governments on State and local income tax refunds. Under present law these information returns must be provided to taxpayers in January of each year. Under the Senate amendment these returns may be provided anytime prior to January 31. It also eliminates the requirement to provide information returns on 1983 refunds.

On Feb. 2, 1984, the House agreed to the Senate amendment with an amendment restoring the provision of the original House passed resolution providing duty-free treatment of equipment and personal effects for use by foreign participants and their families in the summer Olympic games, with technical amendments, and deleting the Senate provision relating to information reporting requirements on State and local tax refunds. The Senate agreed to the House amendment on Feb. 6, 1984. The resolution was signed into law by the President on Feb. 17, 1984, as Public Law 98-218.

H.J. Res. 308; Public Law 98-161; app. Nov. 21, 1983.

H.J. Res. 308 provides that the permanent public debt limit is increased to $1,614.6 billion effective Oct. 1, 1983. The public debt limit under present law is $1,389 billion and was increased to that level by H.R. 2990 (P.L. 98-34). The $1,614.6 billion limit on the public debt is pursuant to the first concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 1984 (H.Con. Res. 91).

H.J. Res. 308 was engrossed and deemed to have passed the House on June 27, 1983. This action was pursuant to rule XLIX of the Rules of the House of Representatives as a result of the adoption by the House and Senate of H. Con. Res. 91. Rule XLIX was amended by H. Res. 241 which passed the House on June 23, 1983. The amendment to rule XLIX was made by amending the permanent limit on the national debt, rather than temporarily increasing that limit. The prior law practice of establishing a temporary limit on the public debt in addition to the permanent limit was repealed by H.R. 2990 (P.L. 98-34) which established the permanent public debt limit at $1,389 billion.

The Senate passed H.J. Res. 308 on Nov. 17, 1983, with amendments. The first Senate amendment increased the public debt limit to $1,450 billion. The other seven amendments were nongermane.

The conference committee on H.J. Res. 308, agreed to increase the public debt limit to $1,490 billion. The nongermane Senate amendments were not agreed to. The conference report was filed on Nov. 17, 1983, and agreed to in the Senate. The House agreed to the conference report on Nov. 18, 1983. The bill was signed into law by the President on Nov. 21, 1983, as Public Law 98-161.

H.J.Res. 600 (Mr. de la Garza); Public Law 98-412; app. Aug. 30, 1984.

H.J.Res. 600, a bill to amend the Agriculture and Food Act of 1981, to provide for the establishment of a commission to study and make recommendations concerning agriculture-related trade and export policies, programs, and practices of the United States, was referred jointly to the Committees on Agriculture, Foreign Affairs, and Ways and Means.

On Aug. 2, 1984, the Committee on Ways and Means waived jurisdiction of the bill. The Agriculture Committee reported the bill on Aug. 6, 1984, and H.J.Res. 600 passed the House on the same day.

On Aug. 10, 1984, the bill passed the Senate. The President signed the bill into law on Aug. 30, 1984, as Public Law 98-412.

H.J. Res. 654; Public Law 98-475; app. Oct. 13, 1984.

H.J. Res. 654 provides that the permanent public debt limit is increased to $1,823.8 billion effective Oct. 1, 1984.

H.J. Res. 654 was engrossed and deemed to have passed the House on Oct. 1, 1984, pursuant to passage of H.Con.Res. 280, the First Congressional Budget Resolution. H.J. Res. 654 failed of passage in the Senate on Oct. 11, 1984. Upon reconsideration, the Senate passed H.J. Res. 654 on Oct. 12, 1984.

The bill was signed into law by the President on Oct. 13, 1984, as Public Law 98-475.

H.Res. 256 (Mr. Philip M. Crane with cosponsors); House voted to indefinitely postpone consideration Aug. 1, 1983.

H.Res. 256, as reported unfavorably by the Committee on Ways and Means on July 26, 1983, would disapprove the recommendation of the President, transmitted to the Congress on June 3, 1983, to extend the authority of the President for an additional 12 months to waive freedom of emigration requirements in sec. 402 of the Trade Act of 1974 with respect to the Socialist Republic of Romania.

Imports from Romania are currently subject to column 1 (MFN) rates of duty effective as of Aug. 3, 1975, the date of implementation of the United States-Romanian Trade Agreement. On Nov. 24, 1975, the President designated Romania as a beneficiary developing country eligible to receive duty-free treatment, effective Jan. 1, 1976, on imports of items eligible for the generalized system of preferences (GSP).

Enactment of H.Res. 256 would result in the discontinuance of MFN and GSP treatment for Romania and restoration of the generally higher column 2 rates of duty applicable to non-MFN countries. In addition, Romania would no longer be eligible for Government credits or investment guarantees.

On Aug. 1, 1983, the House voted to indefinitely postpone consideration of H.Res. 256.

H.Res. 257 (Mr. Philip M. Crane); House voted to indefinitely postpone consideration Aug. 1, 1983.

H.Res. 257, as reported unfavorably by the Committee on Ways and Means on July 26, 1983, would disapprove the recommendation of the President, transmitted to the Congress on June 3, 1983, to extend the authority of the President for an additional 12 months to waive freedom of emigration requirements in sec. 402 of the Trade Act of 1974 with respect to the Hungarian People's Republic.

Imports from Hungary are currently subject to column 1 (MFN) rates of duty, effective July 7, 1978, the date that exchange of written notices of acceptance of the United States-Hungarian Trade Agreement took place.

Enactment of H.Res. 257 would result in the discontinuation of MFN for Hungary and restoration of the generally higher column 2 rates of duty applicable to non-MFN countries. In addition, Hungary would no longer be eligible for Government credits or investment guarantees.

On Aug. 1, 1983, the House voted to indefinitely postpone consideration of H.Res. 257.

H.Res. 258 (Mr. Philip M. Crane); House voted to indefinitely postpone consideration Aug. 1, 1983.

H.Res. 258, as reported unfavorably by the Committee on Ways and Means on July 26, 1983, would disapprove the recommendation of the President, transmitted to the Congress on June 3, 1983, to extend the authority of the President for an additional 12 months to waive freedom of emigration requirements in sec. 402 of the Trade Act of 1974 with respect to the People's Republic of China (PRC).

Imports from the PRC are currently subject to column 1 (MFN) rates of duty, effective Feb. 1, 1980, the date on which the U.S.-PRC Trade Agreement entered into force.

Enactment of H.Res. 258 would result in the discontinuation of MFN for the PRC and restoration of the generally higher column 2 rates of duty applicable to non-MFN countries. In addition, the PRC would no longer be eligible for Government credits or investment guarantees.

On Aug. 1, 1983, the House voted to indefinitely postpone consideration of H.Res. 258.
